SIMLA, SATURDAY, JULY 4, 1868.

HOME DEPARTMENT

LEGISLATIVE.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 1st July 1868, and was referred to a Select Committee, with instructions to make their report thereon in a week:—

[illegible] No. 25 of 1868.

[illegible]ing the Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner of the Neilgherry Hills with the powers of a Court of Small Causes.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient that the Commissioner and the Assistant Commissioner of the Neilgherry Hills appointed under the provisions of Madras Act No. II of 1868 should be invested with the powers of a Court of Small Causes constituted under the provisions of Act No. XI of 1865 (to consolidate and amend the law relating to Courts of Small Causes beyond the limits of the ordinary original Civil jurisdiction of the High Courts of Judicature); it is hereby enacted as follows:—

Power to invest Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner of Neilgherry Hills with Small Cause jurisdiction.

1. The Governor of Fort St. George in Council may, by notification in the local official Gazette, authorize the said Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner to exercise jointly or separately within the territorial limits of the jurisdiction of the said Commissioner the powers of a Judge of a Court of Small Causes constituted under the provisions of the said Act No. XI of 1865, and subject to the rules hereinafter referred to.

Power to make rules.

2. The said Governor in Council may frame rules providing for the distribution said upon any question of fact, law or practice, or upon any usage having the force of law, the opinion of the Commissioner shall prevail.

Pending suits.

4. Suits and proceedings pending before the Civil Judge at Ootacamund, in [illegible] capacity of a Judge of a Court of [illegible], when this Act comes into ope[illegible] [illegible]rd and determined by the said Co[illegible] [illegible]stant Commissioner in accord[illegible] to be made under section 2.

[illegible]ment of [illegible]ct.

[illegible] shall come into operation on such day as the said Governor in Council shall notify in the said Gazette.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill, which has been framed by the Madras Government, but which the Local Council is incompetent to pass, is to provide for the investment of both the Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner of the Neilgherry Hills with Small Cause jurisdiction. The Local Government intends that one or other of these Officers should be invariably present at Ootacamund for the trial of Small Causes, which form the principal part of the judicial work on the Neilgherries. The Bill provides for the Commissioner and the Assistant Commissioner exercising the powers of a Court of Small Causes jointly as well as singly, and that in the exercise of these powers, they shall be subject to such rules as the Local Government shall prescribe. The Commissioner is given a casting voice in cases where he differs from the Assistant Commissioner. Suits pending before the Civil Judge at Ootacamund in his capacity of a Small Cause Court Judge, will be heard by the Commissioner or Assistant Commissioner.

~~The Local~~ Council ~~[illegible] incompetent to~~ pass the Bill, inasmuch as, if it becomes law, it will affect an Act (No. XI of 1865) of the Governor General in Council, passed since the Indian Councils' Act came into operation.

ABSTRACT OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNCIL OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA, ASSEMBLED FOR THE PURPOSE OF MAKING LAWS AND REGULATIONS UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE ACT OF PARLIAMENT 24 & 25 VIC., CAP. 67.

The Council met at Simla on Wednesday, the 1st July 1868.

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, presiding.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, G.C.S.I., K.C.B.

The Hon'ble Major General Sir H. M. Durand, C.B., K.C.S.I.

INOCULATION (KUMAON AND GARHWÁL) BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. STRACHEY, in moving for leave to introduce a Bill to prohibit the practice of inoculation in Kumaon and Garhwál, said that the Bill had been prepared at the request of the Local Government, and that his reasons for asking for leave to introduce it might be stated in a very few words. About fifteen years ago,—he could speak from personal knowledge, as he then held appointments in Kumaon and Garhwál—he believed that no part of India suffered more severely from small-pox. In fact he had never heard of epidemics of cholera or plague more fatal. There were, however, on account of the coolness of the climate, great facilities for introducing vaccination, and the Government was fortunate enough to secure the services of an able and zealous officer, Dr. F. Pearson. The result was that for some time small-pox had almost ceased to exist in those territories. The means of vaccination were ample for all and easily available, and the majority of the people were beginning to be sensible of its power. For some years past inoculation had been prohibited in Kumaon and Garhwál, and it was supposed that such prohibition was not inconsistent with the law. The local authorities, however, had lately come to the conclusion that to continue this prohibition, or at all events to enforce the sanction necessary to compel its observance, was distinctly illegal, and hence the correspondence which had resulted in the preparation of the Bill which he now asked leave to introduce. The Local Government wrote that "since the issue of orders directing officers in the division of Kumaon and Garhwál to refrain from prosecuting criminally persons infringing the proclamation, by which the practice of inoculation was prohibited, some evil-disposed, ignorant or interested persons, now made aware that inoculation is not penal, have attempted to re-introduce it." Another reason urged by the Superintendent General of Vaccination for the adoption of some legislative measure was, that Kumaon and Garhwál were the seed beds from which the North-Western Provinces and other parts of India were supplied with vaccine virus, and that it was therefore urgently necessary to keep the field untainted, and exclude the possibility of the virus being injured by the admixture of small-pox.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

NON-REGISTRATION OF SETTLEMENT RECORDS BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. Cockerell, in moving for leave to introduce a Bill to exempt from the Indian Registration Act, 1866, certain instruments executed by or in favour of Government, said that the Bill had reference chiefly to documents connected with the settlement of the land revenue. It was generally held to be a doubtful question whether the settlement records were or were not liable to be registered under the provisions of the Indian Registration Act. Whilst, on the one hand, it was argued that these papers constituted simply the record of pre-existing rights, that they were not framed with the intention of creating interests in land, and could in no sense be regarded as documents of title; on the other, it was to be observed that the conditions of compulsory registration as set forth in the Act, were very comprehensive, including not merely instruments which purported to create or transfer, but also those which tended in any way to limit or assign any interest in land; and it was difficult to avoid the conclusion that the settlement records which treated of the rights of occupancy possessed by the tenant, the specification of his holding, and the adjustment of questions of disputed boundary, must be held to have the effect of limiting and defining, to some extent at least, interests in the land to which they related.

The subject had been brought under consideration in a reference from the Government of the North-Western Provinces, where extensive revisions of settlement were now being made. It had been urged that it was highly inexpedient that settlement records should be subjected to the obligations imposed by the Indian Registration Act; that, looking to the nature of the settlement record, the way in which it was prepared, and the manner in which it was kept and made accessible for inspection by all parties interested in its contents, all the purposes of registration as regards the interests in land affected by it, must be held to be sufficiently attained, whilst the hardship and expense to individuals of the fulfilment of the conditions of the Act by the further registration of such documents, as therein required, was necessarily very great.

Upon this representation of the Government of the North-Western Provinces, a general reference was made to all Local Governments and Administrations. 1*st*.—As to whether such documents did come under the liabilities imposed by the Registration Act. 2*nd*.—Whether their registration under that Act was necessary or desirable.

On the first point, the replies received indicated the existence of some diversity of opinion and interpretation of the requirements of the Act; whilst as to the inexpediency of the registration of such documents being made compulsory, there might be said to be a general agreement. In these circumstances, it seemed necessary to have recourse to legislation, in order that the existing doubts as to the liability of this important and extensive class of documents to registration might be removed, and having regard to the weight of opinion against the subjection of such documents to the provisions of the Registration Act, it was clearly expedient to secure their exemption from its operation.

The Registration Act had for its chief objects the prevention of fraudulent dealings in regard to the conveyance of immoveable property, and the provision of a complete record of all titles and interests in land; the only substantial objection therefore that could be taken to the proposed exclusion of settlement records from the obligation which it imposed on the executants of deeds treating of such interests, was that by their exemption the registration record quoad the land which formed the subject of settlement would, to a certain extent, be incomplete.

The answer to this objection was, that what the registration records failed to supply, would be found in the settlement records; that the latter afforded as good security for the authenticity of the facts which they represented as the former, and were no less accessible to the person interested in the investigation of their contents. The only disadvantage that such person was placed under through the non-liability to registration of these documents was that he must search the records of two offices, instead of one, to obtain the complete information which he required. It had been suggested, however, that this difficulty might be overcome by providing for the deposit of copies of the exempted documents in the Registration Office. This was a question of detail which, if he (MR. COCKERELL) obtained leave to introduce the Bill, could be more fully considered after the Bill had been referred to a Select Committee.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

NEILGHERRY COMMISSIONER'S SMALL CAUSE JURISDICTION BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. MAINE, in moving for leave to introduce a Bill for investing the Commissioner and the Assistant Commissioner of the Neilgherry Hills with the powers of a Judge of a Small Cause Court, said that this was almost a formal matter. The Bill was necessitated by a defect of legislative power in the Council of the Governor of Fort St. George. It appeared that the Madras Government had been for some time engaged in framing a scheme for the administration of civil and criminal justice, and for the collection and superintendence of the revenues on the Neilgherry Hills. It had been found that, under the system now in force, the work devolving on the Civil and Sessions Judge of Ootacamund was sufficient to occupy only a portion of his time, and that on the other hand the Collector of Coimbatore had more business connected with the Neilgherries than he could efficiently discharge without withdrawing his attention from the rest of his district. The plan proposed by the Madras Government, which was somewhat of a Non-Regulation arrangement, had been sanctioned by the Governor General in Council; but part of the scheme consisted in investing the Commissioner and his Assistant with Small Cause jurisdiction. The Bill to attain this object could only be passed by the Council of the Governor General, as it would modify their Act No. XI of 1865 in so far as that Act contemplated that a Judge invested with Small Cause jurisdiction, should be a Small Cause Judge and nothing else. This Council had to some extent departed from the principle which he had mentioned by authorizing, under Act No. XVI of 1868, the Local Governments of Lower Bengal and the North-Western Provinces to invest subordinate Judges and Munsifs with the powers of a Small Cause Judge. This, of course, it was competent for the Council of the Governor General to do, but under the Indian Councils' Act, the local Councils had no power to amend any Act of the Governor General in Council made after the year 1861. Hence it had become necessary to supplement the Madras legislation.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. MAINE also applied to His Excellency the President to suspend the Rules for the Conduct of Business.

The PRESIDENT declared the Rules suspended.

The Hon'ble MR. MAINE then introduced the Bill and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee, with instructions to report in a week. The matter was urgent, as the proposed measure formed an essential part of the larger scheme to which he had adverted, and many pressing telegrams on the subject had been received from Madras by his Hon'ble friend, Mr. Taylor. The Bill first provided for the investment of both the Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner of the Neilgherry Hills with Small Cause jurisdiction. The Local Government intended that one or other of these Officers should be invariably present at Ootacamund for the trial of Small Causes, which formed the principal part of the judicial work on those Hills. The Bill also provided for the Commissioner and the Assistant Commissioner exercising the powers of a Court of Small Causes jointly as well as singly, and that in the exercise of these powers, they should be subject to such rules as the Local Government should prescribe. The Commissioner would have a casting voice in cases where he differed from the Assistant Commissioner.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The following Select Committee was named:—

On the Bill for investing the Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner of the Neilgherry Hills with the powers of a Judge of a Small Cause Court,—the Hon'ble Messrs. Taylor and Cockerell and the Mover.

The Council adjourned till the 8th July 1868.

HOME DEPARTMENT

LEGISLATIVE.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 1st July 1868, and was referred to a Select Committee, with instructions to make their report thereon in a week :—

No. 15 of 1868.

A Bill for investing the Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner of the Neilgherry Hills with the powers of a Court of Small Causes.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient that the Commissioner and the Assistant Commissioner of the Neilgherry Hills appointed under the provisions of Madras Act No. II of 1868 should be invested with the powers of a Court of Small Causes constituted under the provisions of Act No. XI of 1865 (to consolidate and amend the law relating to Courts of Small Causes beyond the limits of the ordinary original Civil jurisdiction of the High Courts of Judicature); it is hereby enacted as follows :—

Power to invest Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner of Neilgherry Hills with Small Cause jurisdiction.

1. The Governor of Fort St. George in Council may, by notification in the local official Gazette, authorize the said Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner to exercise jointly or separately within the territorial limits of the jurisdiction of the said Commissioner the powers of a Judge of a Court of Small Causes constituted under the provisions of the said Act No. XI of 1865, but subject to the rules hereinafter referred to.

Power to make rules.

2. The said Governor in Council may frame rules providing for the distribution of business between the said Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner in their capacity of Judges of a Court of Small Causes, and generally for defining their duties and relative positions when acting in such capacity, and may also from time to time alter and add to the rules so made: Provided that such rules, alterations and additions are consistent with the provisions of this Act.

Opinion of Commissioner to prevail in case of difference.

3. Whenever there is a difference of opinion between the said Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner sitting together as aforesaid upon any question of fact, law or practice, or upon any usage having the force of law, the opinion of the Commissioner shall prevail.

Pending suits.

4. Suits and proceedings pending before the Civil Judge at Ootacamund, in his capacity of a Judge of a Court of Small Causes, when this Act comes into operation, shall be heard and determined by the said Commissioner or Assistant Commissioner in accordance with the rules to be made under section 2.

Commencement of Act.

5. This Act shall come into operation on such day as the said Governor in Council shall notify in the said Gazette.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill, which has been framed by the Madras Government, but which the Local Council is incompetent to pass, is to provide for the investment of both the Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner of the Neilgherry Hills with Small Cause jurisdiction. The Local Government intends that one or other of these Officers should be invariably present at Ootacamund for the trial of Small Causes, which form the principal part of the judicial work on the Neilgherries. The Bill provides for the Commissioner and the Assistant Commissioner exercising the powers of a Court of Small Causes jointly as well as singly, and that in the exercise of these powers, they shall be subject to such rules as the Local Government shall prescribe. The Commissioner is given a casting voice in cases where he differs from the Assistant Commissioner. Suits pending before the Civil Judge at Ootacamund in his capacity of a Small Cause Court Judge, will be heard by the Commissioner or Assistant Commissioner.

The Local Council is incompetent to pass the Bill, inasmuch as, if it becomes law, it will affect an Act (No. XI of 1865) of the Governor General in Council, passed since the Indian Council's Act came into operation.

MECCA PILGRIMAGE IN THE PRESENT YEAR AND STATE OF HEALTH OF THE PILGRIMS.

Despatch from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, to His Excellency the Governor General of India in Council,—(Sanitary), No. 16, dated 21st May 1868.

I transmit herewith, for the information of your Excellency in Council, copy of a report by Dr. Dickson, received from the Foreign Office, giving a very satisfactory account of the condition of the pilgrims at Mecca in the present year, and stating the arrangements which have been made for the preservation of the public health.

From Dr. E. D. DICKSON, to the Hon'ble H. ELLIOT,—No. 21, dated 15th April 1868.

I have the honor to inform your Excellency that, notwithstanding the repeated representations made to the Egyptian Board of Health respecting the overcrowding of pilgrims on boardship, the same thing has happened again this year on the passage between Suez and Jedda. Fearing, therefore, that this inconvenience might also occur on the return of the pilgrims to Constantinople, the Central Board of Health has now resolved that, in future, vessels overcrowded with passengers coming from Egypt are to be put into quarantine, and that due notice of this decision will be given to Egypt.

I regret to add moreover that a telegram from the Ottoman Consul at Malta, dated the 4th March (?), announces an outbreak of typhus at Tunis, which has caused arrivals from that place to be put into quarantine.

From Dr. E. D. DICKSON, to the Hon'ble H. ELLIOT,—No. 20, dated 15th April 1868.

I have the honor to inform your Excellency that the Board of Health has received reports from the Hedjaz Commission, dated Mecca, the 1st and 15th March, giving a very satisfactory account of the state of the public health there.

The death-rate was at its minimum, a few cases of a mild form of dysentery and intermittent fever had occurred, and the public hospital contained only 38 patients in it. The temperature during the month of February varied from 14 to 26 degrees of Reaumur, that it stood highest at midday, and its extreme daily range did not exceed 5 degrees.

The streets of Mecca are swept and watered twice a day; the latrines have been properly constructed, and their sewage is conveyed away by underground channels into pits situated at half an hour's distance beyond the outskirts of the city. The slaughter-house has been removed out of town to a distance of one hour from Mecca; and the local authorities severely prohibit the killing of any animals within the precincts of the Holy City. The poor people, however, still linger in the streets until a proper locality be provided for them. From ten to twelve thousand pilgrims had arrived there, and a caravan (called the Bairden Caravan) composed of 4,000 persons had gone to Medina. Thirteen slaughter-houses, each supplied with from three to five pits dug to a depth of four or five metres for the use of the victims at the feast, and 500 latrines have been prepared in the valley of Mina, and the tanks there are now full of good water, excepting a few which held water unfit for drinking purposes, which have in consequence been emptied.

Despatch from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, to His Excellency the Governor General of India in Council,—(Sanitary), No. 17, dated 21st May 1868.

I forward herewith, for the information of your Excellency in Council, copy of a despatch* from the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, with enclosures, reporting the termination of the Mecca pilgrimage, and the satisfactory state of health of the pilgrims.

* Dated 28th April 1868.

From JAMES MURRAY, Esq., Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, to the Under Secretary of State for India,—dated 28th April 1868.

I am directed by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to transmit to you, for the information of Secretary Sir Stafford Northcote, the accompanying copy of a despatch* which has been received from Her Majesty's Consul General in Egypt, reporting the termination of the Mecca pilgrimage and the satisfactory state of health of the pilgrims.

From E. STANTON, Esq., to LORD STANLEY, M.P.,—No. 4, dated 17th April 1868.

I have the honor to inform your Lordship that by despatch dated April 7th, Mr. Consul Raby reports that most satisfactory intelligence has been received from Mecca respecting the termination of the pilgrimage, which appeared to have passed in a most quiet and orderly manner.

The Inspector of the Sanitary Commission at Jeddah had also communicated to Mr. Raby the contents of a letter addressed to him by one of the medical members of the Commission at Mecca, in which it was declared that the state of health among the pilgrims and in the neighbourhood of Mecca was most excellent.

The number of pilgrims assembled is stated approximately at 85,000, which is considerably in excess of the numbers assembled last year.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

EXPEDITION UNDER CAPTAIN SLADEN ENGAGED IN TRAVERSING THE ROUTE FROM BAHMO TO YUNAN.

From the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department,—No. 39-19, dated 2nd June 1868.

Letter of 28th April from Captain Sladen.
" No. 1 of 4th May, from Captain Williams, Engineer to the Expedition, with its accompaniments.
Letter No. 2, dated 13th May, from the same officer.

I have the honor to forward, for the information of His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, copies, as per margin, furnishing the latest accounts of the expedition under Captain Sladen, now engaged in traversing the route from Bhamo to Yunan.

2. Captain Sladen's letter describes the events which have marked the progress of the party since they left Bhamo, and is most interesting and hopeful. It would appear that the Khakyen Chiefs engaged to convoy the expedition to "Manwyne" (written "Manwae" on the map), would take them only the length of "Ponsee," forty miles from Bhamo, which will be seen on the map just westward of Manwae, eight miles. The grounds of the non-fulfilment of their engagement were due to the action of the minor Shan Chiefs of Manwyne, Sanda, and Manleo (probably the Maingla of the map), south-east of Sanda. They were under the influence of a Chinese marauder who had possession of Mopoo, which will be found on the route from Sanda to Momein.

3. Captain Sladen had, however, with much judgment opened up communication with officers of the Panthay Government at Momein, and from them received every encouragement and support to persevere in his endeavours to reach them, urging him not to fall back, and that they would clear the way.

4. This they did by attacking the Chinese marauder at Mopoo and dispersing his band. They had promised to come on to Sanda and furnish Captain Sladen with an escort, and by a private letter of the 30th April he informs me he had heard of their arrival at Sanda, which is only five marches from Manwyne, and he expected they would come on to where he was, with mules and escort, in a few days.

5. Captain Sladen describes the altered tone of the Khakyens and Shan Chiefs as soon as they became aware of his friendly relations with the Panthay Government, and also remarks on the satisfaction of the latter at the destructions of the Chinese marauder's party.

6. It would seem from the whole circumstances connected with the advance of the party so far that the Panthay Government are eager to assist in the resuscitation of the trade by the old route, and that they are strong enough to occupy the road to the bottom of the Khakyen hills on the eastern side. With this apparently willing co-operation of the Panthays, there seems good hope that the object of the expedition may eventually be fulfilled.

7. If Captain Sladen be successful in effecting a junction with the Panthay officers, there is every prospect of his being accorded a good reception, and of his being invited to enter their territories with their full consent. I have every confidence that Captain Sladen will use these advantages with discretion.

8. The delay which has occurred is not to be regretted. It has enabled Captain Sladen to obtain no doubt considerable information regarding the Khakyens, who, holding the hills, must always form an important element in any scheme for re-opening the route, and it has given them an opportunity of learning more fully the intentions of the expedition. But more important still, the delay has insured (in all probability) Captain Sladen's advance with all the prestige of the direct support and encouragement of the Panthay Government, whose predominance has been manifested by their rapid occupation of the route up to the base of the Khakyen hills.

9. I am glad to record my opinion of the judgment and tact shown by Captain Sladen. He wisely chose to wait patiently for a favourable turn of affairs, despite the disadvantages, in some respects, of the delay thereby necessitated. This and his success in engaging the interest of the Panthay officials promise well for the future progress of the party.

10. Regarding Captain Williams, the Engineer Officer of the expedition, having left the party, the circumstances are fully described in his letters appended hereto; and it will be seen from Captain Sladen's letter of 28th April that he considered it would have been almost impossible to have continued the expedition, unless by a reduction in the strength of the party. He suggested to the members, therefore, that in the interest of the public service some of them should return, and with his approval Captain Williams and Mr. Stewart left the party. Referring to Captain Sladen's remark that he was not in a position to pass an order regarding Captain Williams' stay or departure, I may remark that Captain Williams was distinctly placed under the orders of Captain Sladen, and my instructions to that effect were conveyed to the latter officer on the organization of the party.

11. It it to be regretted that the Engineer found it necessary to leave, as a professional opinion on the route which may hereafter be taken by the expedition is of the highest importance. In addition to this, one of the principal duties of the Engineer was to make a full enquiry regarding the through routes between China and India, which are believed to exist in the neighbourhood of, and to the northward of, Bhamo. Entering the Panthay territories with the apparent good-will of the Government, these enquiries might have been most successfully pushed. I thought it necessary, therefore, to detail an Engineer officer to join the expedition, and I have selected, at the recommendation of the Chief Engineer, Mr. Gordon, C.E., Executive Engineer of the Upper Pegu and Arakan Roads, an officer of well-known active habits and great personal energy. Mr. Gordon was at Prome, and has been directed by telegraph to proceed as rapidly as possible to Bhamo, and follow the track of the expedition. I have addressed the Burmese Government, and requested His Majesty to give every facility for Mr. Gordon's advance; and as he will be unhampered with baggage, I do not think he will find any difficulty in crossing the hills.

12. It will be seen that Captain Sladen states the reduction of the party was necessary on account of the want of the requisite funds. When the party originally left British territory, Captain Sladen was furnished with the sum of Rs. 5,000, which he specified as being the amount he required, besides presents he had in the shape of goods to about the same amount. I have already informed Government that, on hearing his funds were running short, I sent up the sum of Rs. 10,000, and I am informed by Captain Williams that the money was forwarded when he was at Mandalay under the protection of the Burmese Government.

13. I have learned from the Kulahwoon that His Majesty has expressed himself as being much dissatisfied with the conduct of his officials at Bhamo, who have thrown obstructions in the progress of the party, and has directed their removal.

(Demi-official.)—From Captain E. B. SLADEN, to Chief Commissioner of British Burmah,—dated 28th April 1868.

At last there is an opportunity of writing with the certainty that my letters will reach you. Captain Williams and Mr. Stewart leave to-morrow to return to Rangoon. I have been unexpectedly and unavoidably detained here for an indefinite length of time; and the funds at my disposal have become so limited that it would have been almost impossible to have continued the expedition, unless by a sensible reduction in the strength of our party, and a consequent decrease in the limit of my expenditure. Besides, the south-west monsoon has set in in these parts, and surveying or exploration, in the general acceptation of those terms, have become comparatively impracticable. My plan has been to lay all the facts of the case before the members of the expedition in a circular letter, and leave it to their good judgment to act in accordance with my suggestion in the interests of the public service.

It was, of course, understood that I had determined to stay out myself as long as any hope remained of prosecuting the journey and reaching a suitable destination, either at Momein or Talifoo. My chances, however, of making further progress, or of having it in my power to remain here or elsewhere for a further indefinite period, were almost wholly dependent on a return of some of our party to British territory, and a corresponding decrease in baggage and expenditure. Williams and Stewart have been induced, at a great personal sacrifice to themselves, to sever their connection with the expedition and return to Rangoon.

I have arranged that Dr. Anderson shall remain with me: it would hardly have been deemed prudent, I imagine, to proceed alone without efficient medical aid. Besides, Anderson is most anxious, on his own account, to continue with the expedition, and is very sanguine on the subject of enriching the Museum and adding materially to scientific research by visiting the terra incognita which lies before us almost at our feet.

Captain Bowers has elected to stay with me, and will not return without special orders, which I do not feel myself in a position to issue. But you will be eager to know something of events since the date of my last letter. "Ponsee," from which I date this letter, is only five marches from "Bhamo." Our detention here since 6th March has arisen out of causes over which there was no possibility of exercising foresight or control. "Manwyne," the first Shan town at the foot of these hills, is distant from us only eight miles. My engagement with the Khakyen Chiefs and Burmese officials at "Bhamo" was for carriage and safe conduct as far as "Manwyne;" but on the day after my arrival at this place, the whole of our mule-men detached their burdens from the mule panniers and deserted in a body with their animals. No persuasion short of force could have averted this misfortune. The men alleged as a reason for the non-fulfilment of their engagement, that orders had been received from the several Chiefs of the Shan States, to the effect that death would be the penalty inflicted on them if they persisted in affording our party the means of reaching Shan territory.

This report, though true to a certain extent, was intensified and exaggerated by the Khakyen Chiefs, who had leagued themselves with Burmese officials for the purpose of obstructing our progress, and who had compromised themselves with the mule-men by misappropriating the greater portion of the advances made on account of mule-hire. It was their object to get rid of the mule-men at all risks, and to detain us here indefinitely for the purpose of enriching themselves at our expense by a system of indirect obstructiveness and extortion, which enabled them to fulfil the wishes and commands of Burmese officials and Chinese oppositionists at "Bhamo."

A day or two after our arrival at this place, a heavy claim was made and demanded by the Khakyen Chiefs as compensation on account of a village which was said to have been accidentally destroyed by a jungle-fire caused during one of our marches. The claim was perplexing, and required to be delicately entertained, not by reason of its amount, but because it had evidently been put forward as a feeler or fore-runner of further similar impositions. It had no sooner been satisfactorily adjusted under the promise and consideration of an immediate supply of carriage wherewith to proceed to "Mamoyne," than the Chiefs and people affirmed, with some semblance and evidences of truth, that a large party of Shans and Khakyengalay, numbering many hundreds, had assembled on the route we were to take with the determination of actively resisting our contemplated advance.

Burman and Chinese intrigue had prevailed for a time. I ascertained beyond all doubt that the most damning reports relative to the objects of the mission had been not only openly circulated throughout the parts to which we were journeying, but the Chinese robber chieftain "Leesatahee," who held a fortified position at a place called "Mauphoo," on our direct route, had received letters from Chinese brethren at "Bhamo" (under Burmese tuition), in which he was instructed, and he sought for his own sake and theirs to oppose our progress by every means in his power and to cut up our party to a man.

It was this villainous underhand procedure on the part of Burmese officials which first induced us, whilst at "Bhamo," to try and outwit these intriguers and counteract error and evil by what I have styled in a former communication "a diplomatic venture" with the Panthay Chiefs at Momein.

"Leesatahee," as long as he remained in power, exercised a direct influence over the chief Saubwas of the Shan States which lie between this and Momein. It was in consequence of the fear instilled by his large force of marauders that the Shan Chiefs had been overawed into the necessity of opposing us and withholding the necessary permission to enter their respective States. This was a complication which I hardly anticipated on leaving Mandalay, but which the experiences at "Bhamo" had in a measure prepared me for. How was it to be best met? Further lengthened delays became inevitable. I managed to despatch private messengers, with suitable presents, to the Chiefs of Manwyne, Sanda, and Manleo or Mauhleo, the latter by all accounts the most obstinate and unyielding of our opponents, and a man of known influence and position.

My presents were returned in due time, and I was politely informed that their acceptance was against rule, until all the Chiefs had become unanimous in according us the permission to proceed.

Notwithstanding this slight rebuff, I continued to write and keep up a communication with the Chiefs in the hope of inspiring a certain amount of friendly confidence, and of making all acquainted more or less with the peaceful objects of the expedition.

In the mean time my letters from "Bhamo" to the Momein Chiefs had reached their destination, and were working out a very favourable diversion in our behalf: satisfactory replies were received by me a few days after my arrival at this place, and the effect produced on the Shan Saubwa and Khakyen Chiefs by a knowledge that we were in friendly communication with the Panthay Government was a wonderful aid in the maintenance of my position, in spite of the difficulties created by the unceasing intrigue of Burmese officials.

The "diplomatic venture" had been productive of results which exceeded his most sanguine expectations. The Momein Chiefs addressed friendly letters to Shan Saubwas and certain of the more influential Khakyen Chiefs, and all were exhorted to give us support and assistance as soon as the time arrived for continuing our march.

I also continued to receive messages and letters of assurance and support from the Panthay Chiefs at Momein, and was informed of their intention to clear the way for my advance by sending a force against the Chinese robber chieftain at Mauphoo, and capturing his stronghold at that place. I was also advised to remain where I was, and by no means to despond or relinquish the idea of prosecuting my march until I received further advices from Momein. The Panthay Government even went so far as to guarantee all expenditure which the Chiefs en route might be put to in providing me with carriage and other requisites for the journey.

This very opportune and friendly demonstration on the part of the Panthays gave me confidence and position. The wavering Saubwas became, by magic as it were, decided and well-disposed; but the active co-operation was withheld, because Leesatahee was still in existence, and it seemed doubtful whether the Panthay power would be able, after several previous attempts and failures, to dislodge him from the commanding position at Mauphoo and maintain its own supremacy.

It was not until 19th instant that news reached me of the fall of Mauphoo, which took place four days before: Leesatahee fled, and his robber bands had been broken up and dispersed. Mauphoo and the parts around are now in the possession of the Panthay General, Tahsakar, who has written to inform me of his success, and asked me to advance as far as Sanda, to which place he has despatched an armed party to meet and escort me to Momein.

I have been trying for a long time past to get on from this to Manwyne, but the Chiefs here have taken so kindly to us, that they will not supply carriage or provide other means for an advance. My diary is likely to be amusing and instructive on this point to future explorers in these parts.

It must be borne in mind that the delay here has by no means been unprofitable, or without its special advantages in some respects, though a serious drawback in itself on account of the advanced state of the season at which it has occurred. It has allowed time for Chiefs and people in the several States around to find out and judge for themselves by personal observation whether our mission is intended to be injurious to their interests, or likely to be of future benefit to their country by the simple evidence afforded of our desire to open out the country to foreign trade and resuscitate old sources of prosperity. Our unaffected and unpretending presence on the spot has done more to assure men's minds than all the diplomacy in the world carried on at a distance. The veni-vidi-vici principle was impracticable with the means at my disposal, and in the presence of opposition of a kind which could only be met by straightforward action, and a readiness to conciliate or even yield in all matters which could be made to appear in the least degree undesirable or unaccommodating. My expressed policy by words and by letter to the Chiefs who have visited or sent messengers to me has always been to the effect that my presence amongst them is dependent on their friendship; that opposition on their part, after they have been made acquainted with the true object of our mission, will cause my departure and prove detrimental to their interests by leaving unfulfilled and incomplete the good work of reviving the old trade route through their country; that I only consent to advance under their protection, and with the firm assurance of their support and good will. It will be understood that, under any circumstances, my advance beyond Ponsee, or at the furthest Manwyne, was effectually barred so long as Mauphoo continued to be held by Leesatahee and his bands of Chinese robbers. His defeat did not take place until 19th instant, and it is satisfactory to know that the means have been at hand of exterminating this villain, and confounding the machinations of Burmese and Chinese vagabonds who had arranged and plotted our destruction by means which have tended to our success and the ruin of their accomplice.

It was the petty intriguing correspondence with Leesatahee which first induced me to address the authorities at Momein and request counteraction and co-operation. The chief obstruction in the way of trade by this route has thus been removed, as if by accident, by the active interference of the Mahomedan Government in Yunan.

This friendly co-operation of the Panthays and the knowledge that they are eager for trade and intercourse with us are the reasons which have principally influenced me in my determination to combat delays of every kind, in the shape of reaching Momein and entering into friendly relations with the Chiefs there. Of course, these relations only refer to the means which will be at my disposal of enlightening the Chiefs on certain facts connected with our position in British Burmah, our treaties with the King of Upper Burmah, and the possibility of conducting a large trade with Rangoon, in spite of Burmese interference and opposition, however offered.

Were it not that I entertain a sanguine hope of effecting the grand object, as well as the still more important idea of tempting the Panthay Government to open out Yunan to Chinese traders from other south-western provinces of China, I would almost decide (whilst taking into consideration the present advanced season of the year) upon returning to British territory or resuming my appointment at Mandalay. But the prize at stake is of too infinite value to be sacrificed to the inconveniences or discomfort of exploring a new country in the face of a south-west monsoon, or the more trifling consideration of remaining on the field of operations for a couple or three months beyond the time originally computed as necessary for to complete the whole work of the expedition.

I am in daily expectation of receiving a convoy of mules from the Shan States, which will enable me to leave Ponsee and reach Manwyne, from which place Momein may be reached in five days. If this carriage fails, it is my serious resolve to do away with baggage altogether and trust to the country for supplies of all kinds. By this means I shall reach Momein and push my way to Talifoo, if I can do so safely and without the fear of getting into difficulties with either Government. I shall also endeavour on my return to try another route over these Khakyen mountains, which I believe to be more feasible in every way than the one we have been committed to under Burmese advice.

Nearly all difficulties thus far owe their origin to the perverse opposition of Burmese officials. So obstinate and unceasing have they been in their desire to add to my perplexities, that they have contrived to put it out of my power to secure the services of a Khakyen interpreter. Numbers of applicants were anxious to accompany me, but all were significantly warned against giving us assistance in this or any other respect.

I left Bhamo under the understanding that two head-men of Shan villages, who spoke Khakyen, had been ordered to accompany me. Such an order was given in my presence with a view only to mislead, and was afterwards countermanded, without my knowledge, as soon as it was known that I was dependent on it for an interpreter, and had failed to procure one from other sources.

I have been openly assured on the authority of the Khakyen Chiefs themselves that the private instructions indirectly issued to them through the petty officials at Bhamo impressed them with the idea that our progress to the Shan States was to be impeded by active opposition, and if necessary, the indiscriminate slaughter of all our party. I should be sorry to think that the King was in any way concerned in their base and treacherous designs. I feel sure, however, that the opposition we have had to contend against has originated, and been countenanced, at Mandalay, otherwise it would not have been carried out with such obstinate pertinacity by those who have little real interest in the matter beyond a servile obedience to royal orders.

We are nearly 4,000 feet above sea-level, and the thermometer during the month has ranged between 55 and 80; the climate a perfection, and the soil throughout the several ranges of these mountains abundantly fertile. Opium and tobacco grow in profusion. Tea would be a certain success. All our European fruit trees are found in luxuriance in a wild state, and might be cultivated to any pitch of perfection. Anderson is hard at work in his researches, and his account of these fertile regions is likely to attract the attention and interest of the speculative world at large.

No news from Mandalay since I left. They will be able to do without me there, I hope, for another two or three months.

I shall not have another opportunity of writing for some time perhaps, but do not be anxious, as we are going amongst friends.

From Captain J. M. Williams, Engineer to the Bhamo Expedition, to the Chief Commissioner, British Burmah,—No. 2, dated 13th May 1868.

As it will require some little time after my return to Rangoon to prepare the map and report of my survey to Ponsee, a brief summary of my return journey may in the meanwhile be desired, and I have therefore the honour to submit the following accounts.

Captain Sladen deemed it inadvisable to apply to the Khakyens to furnish carriage, lest it should give them the opportunity, if they so desired, of making preparations to oppose our return. Mr. Stewart and I were therefore required to reduce our baggage to its smallest limit, and take with us stores sufficient only for four days, the number of ordinary marches from Ponsee to Bhamo. By these reductions Captain Sladen considered that my surveying calassics, aided by three of his and five unarmed police, would be able to carry our baggage. We were also furnished with an escort of five armed policemen.

Everything favoured our departure on the morning of the 29th April, the greater porportion of the villagers being absent at an adjacent village on the occasion of a wedding which had taken place the previous day. But unfortunately our carriers, unaccustomed to burdens and steep hills, were quite unfitted for their task. Our first break-down occurred within quarter mile of the camp, and before we were clear of the village. Two of the police were unable to bring their load up the hill. This caused a delay, as I had to wait while two of the escort went to assist them. The delay afforded time for one of the Panmines (head-man of the village) to dispute our going without the sanction of the Saubwa. Finding I paid no attention to his remonstrance, he declared that he would call his men, get in front of us by another road, and attack us. This was a threat that we had become accustomed to, and I gave him our stereotyped reply to such threat, that we wished to be friends; but that, if they would fight, they were at perfect liberty to do so: we could defend ourselves.

At last we got away, and after a series of contretemps succeeded in accomplishing 1½ out of a proposed march of 13 miles in two hours. Here we came upon a caravan of a dozen mules accompanied by an armed party of Shans and Khakyens going into See-kaw to purchase salt.

I hoped to be able to engage their mules, but the men would not listen to me: the head-man angrily demanding why we had come away without the Saubwa's permission, endeavoured to insist on my return. On seeing my determination to proceed, he made a great show of counting our muskets and his own, and signified his intention of going on to dispute our passage. He then left, and, anxious that he might not be under the belief that our men had quite collapsed, I ordered our party forward at once. The Shan Saubwa and two or three of his men shortly came back from his party, and, brandishing their dahs, took up their position behind Mr. Stewart and me, and noisily shouted at our men. The moment was critical: the least mistake might lead to hostilities, which I was most anxious to avoid, for out of the five armed police, only three could carry their arms, and the men were all so miserably exhausted that they could neither assist us or save themselves.

I endeavoured to humour the Saubwa, approving his show of sword practice and encouraging him, when he shouted to some of my men to carry their load better. In half a mile the carriers gave in, depositing their loads and lying down beside them, unable to bestir themselves.

I continued talking to the Saubwa, who gradually got into a good humour, and, to my intense delight, suddenly volunteered his mules if I would pay his price, Rs. 5 each, into See-kaw. As we had paid Rs. 9 each for the same journey coming here, I was quite prepared to do this; however I bargained for Rs. 4, and he came to my terms. I hardly like to contemplate what we should have done but for the providential meeting with the caravan. Here our difficulties immediately appeared to vanish. Our baggage on the mules we trudged along pleasantly enough to the Nambouk River, nine miles distant from Ponsee and the old boundary line between Burmah and China. Here the caravan halted. I was anxious to push on to Ponline, and take up our quarters at the Saubwa Salai's house, thinking by a bold front to deter him from opposing us. The Shan Saubwa urged, however, that Salai, as we had previously experienced to our cost, was not to be trusted; that if we got into his village and gave him a night to collect his men and devise excuses for detaining us, we should not be able to get away, certainly not with our baggage; on the other hand, he argued that by starting early in the morning, we should reach and pass through his village without giving him time to make preparations. He at the same time guaranteed that no Khakyens should pass through our camp to give information at Ponline. I therefore agreed to follow his advice, and the following morning we pushed forward and through Ponline before any one had time to interfere; we were only just through, however, when Salai sent after to call us back. I refused, but the Shan Saubwa went. We then advanced quarter mile and waited the return of the Saubwa, who shortly made his appearance, and we continued our journey to Tsitkaw, and the following day by water to Bhamo. Captain Sladen will, I presume, have reported the obstructiveness which our expedition has throughout experienced at the hands of the Bhamo officials and Chinese. Within an hour of my arrival there, the Woon sent a Tsaye to enquire the causes of my return, and whether it was because we were dissatisfied with anything he or the other officials had done. My reply was, that we had returned because we had not funds sufficient for all to advance, and we had business in Rangoon. I had shortly after to give the same answers to one of the Tsitkaws and Ngakhans who came with anxious inquiries. But the opposition of the officials was not at an end; yet two days later I received a petition* from the Khakyen interpreter who had accompanied me from Ponsee to Tsitkaw, and whom I had left there with definite instructions to return at once. The purport of the petition was to the effect that the Tsay Gyee at the Bandwin (silver mines), close to Ponsee, had sent in word to the Woon that the interpreter had neglected his duty at the mines to attend on us, and but for his representation, we should all have given up the idea of going on to Momein and returned to Bhamo long ago. On this the Woon had ordered his arrest. I at once sent the petition to the Woon, and asked him to order the man's release, as Captain Sladen was without any interpreter, and one of the great difficulties we have had to encounter has been the want of interpreters in Shans or Khakyens. The reply was that the order would be at once sent for his release; but the next morning a message was sent me by the Woon that the interpreter must be brought in for examination. I immediately urged that another interpreter should be at once sent out, but I could get nothing done: the Woon declined to take any steps until this man had been brought in and examined. I wrote to Captain Sladen full particulars, as our boats were engaged to take us to Mandalay the following morning. On arrival at Mandalay I found a boat on the point of starting with money and letters for Bhamo. I told the chief boatman that we had come from Bhamo, and requested him not to leave until I could see the Kulahwoon, Mr. Manook. I had great difficulty in persuading him to wait, and only succeeded after several times assuring him that I would bear all the responsibility of his detention.

* Copy enclosed.

11th May.

It was fortunate that I succeeded, for had the Rs. 10,000 been then sent off, I do not think they would have gone beyond Bhamo, or if they had, I am very certain nothing further could ever have been heard of the money.

They were sent off 12 hours after my arrival with instructions to the Bhamo Woon to take out Rs. 3,000, and, dividing it into six lots of Rs. 500 each, give these to men to sling round their waists.

In this manner the money ought to reach Captain Sladen, and Rs. 3,000 will, I believe, now that the strength of the party is reduced, be ample for the purpose required. If Captain Sladen thinks otherwise, he can readily send for as much more as he may require to be conveyed in the same manner. The money being sent in a mail boat should reach Bhamo in a fortnight. Although Mr. Stewart and I left the greater portion of our kit and stores behind us at Ponsee, as the survey calassies had to carry what we brought with us, I was obliged to insist on their leaving all their warm clothing and most of their things behind, promising that they should receive compensation for them.

Mr. Simon, the Surveyor, was also obliged to leave some of his baggage.

Petition of MOUNG MOH.

I, MOUNG MOH, Khakyen Interpreter, most respectfully beg to inform the Chief Engineer that the head writer of Bandwin Silver Mine has sent a letter to the Bhamo Woon about me, stating I did not work in connection with silver mine, but instead worked under the English people for their expedition, and afterwards the Khyoung-oke of Tseegnan wants me to put in bail, and on my furnishing sufficient security, I was released, and therefore I beg you will be kind enough to report to the Bhamo Woon about my circumstances.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

LEGISLATIVE.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 15th July 1868, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

Act No. XVIII of 1868.

An Act for investing the Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner of the Neilgherry Hills with the powers of a Court of Small Causes.

Preamble.

Whereas it is expedient that the Commissioner and the Assistant Commissioner of the Neilgherry Hills appointed under the provisions of Madras Act No. I of 1868 (for the appointment of a Commissioner for the administration of Civil and Criminal justice and for the superintendence and collection of the revenues on the Neilgherry Hills) should be invested with the powers of a Court of Small Causes constituted under the provisions of Act No. XI of 1865 (to consolidate and amend the law relating to Courts of Small Causes beyond the limits of the ordinary original Civil jurisdiction of the High Courts of Judicature); it is hereby enacted as follows :—

Power to invest Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner of Neilgherry Hills with Small Cause jurisdiction.

1.—The Governor of Fort St. George in Council may, by notification in the local official Gazette, authorize the said Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner to exercise jointly or separately within the territorial limits of the jurisdiction of the said Commissioner the powers of a Judge of a Court of Small Causes constituted under the provisions of the said Act No. XI of 1865; but subject to the rules hereinafter referred to.

Power to make rules.

2. The said Governor in Council may frame rules providing for the distribution of business between the said Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner in their capacity of Judges of a Court of Small Causes, and generally for defining their duties and relative positions when acting in such capacity, and may also from time to time alter and add to the rules so made: Provided that such rules, alterations and additions are consistent with the provisions of this Act.

Opinion of Commissioner to prevail in case of difference.

3. Whenever there is a difference of opinion between the said Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner sitting together as aforesaid upon any question of fact, law or practice, or upon any usage having the force of law, the opinion of the Commissioner shall prevail.

Pending suits.

4. Suits and proceedings pending before the Civil Judge at Ootacamund, in his capacity of a Judge of a Court of Small Causes, when this Act comes into operation, shall be heard and determined by the said Commissioner or Assistant Commissioner in accordance with the rules to be made under section 2.

Commencement of Act.

5. This Act shall come into operation on such day as the said Governor in Council shall notify in the said Gazette.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 15th July 1868, and was referred to a Select Committee, with instructions to make their report thereon in one month :—

No. 16 of 1868.

A Bill to prohibit the practice of inoculation in Kumaon and Garhwál.

Preamble.

Whereas it is expedient to prohibit the practice of inoculation with the small-pox in the Districts of Kumaon and Garhwál, it is hereby enacted as follows :—

Penalty for inoculating.

1. Whoever produces or attempts to produce in any person by inoculation with variolous matter, or by wilful exposure to variolous matter, or to any thing impregnated therewith, or who wilfully by any other means produces the disease of small-pox in any person, shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, or to fine not exceeding two hundred rupees, or to both.

Penalty on inoculated person entering place to which Act extends.

2. If any person having been inoculated with the small-pox in a place to which this Act does not extend, shall afterwards enter any place to which this Act extends, before the date of forty days from the date of such inoculation, or without a certificate from a qualified Medical Officer that such person is no longer likely to cause contagion, such person shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, to imprisonment for a period not exceeding three months, or to a fine not exceeding two hundred rupees, or to both.

Reward to informer.

3. Whenever an offender is sentenced to pay a fine under this Act, the convicting Magistrate may award any portion not exceeding one-half of such fine to the person on whose information the offender has been convicted.

Extent of Act.

4. This Act extends only to the Districts of Kumaon and Garhwál.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill, which has been prepared at the request of the Lieutenant Governor of the North-Western Provinces, is to put a stop to the practice of inoculation in Kumaon and Garhwál, where proper arrangements exist for vaccinating the inhabitants.

The first and principal section of the Bill is taken from the English Statute 3 & 4 Vic., cap. 29. Section 2 is nearly identical with a clause in the Bengal Act IV of 1865, which was passed to check inoculation in Calcutta and its suburbs.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 15th July 1868, and was referred to a Select Committee, with instructions to make their report thereon in one month:—

No. 17 OF 1868.

A Bill to exempt certain Instruments from the Indian Registration Act, 1866.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to exempt expressly from compulsory registration under the Indian Registration Act, 1866, certain documents heretofore or hereafter executed by or in favour of Government; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Scheduled documents exempted from Act XX of 1866.

1. Nothing contained in the said Act shall be deemed to require, or to have at any time required, the registration of any of the documents comprised in the Schedule hereto annexed.

But all such documents shall, for the purposes of sections forty-eight and forty-nine of the same Act, be deemed to have been and to be registered in accordance with its provisions.

This Act to be read with Act XX of 1866.

2. This Act shall be read with and taken as part of Act No. XX of 1866.

SCHEDULE.

Documents issued, received, or attested by any officer engaged in making a settlement or revision of settlement, of land revenue, and which form part of the records of such settlement.

Documents issued, received, or attested by any officer engaged on behalf of Government in making or revising the survey of any land, and which form part of the record of such survey.

Documents which, under any law for the time being in force, are filed annually by patwáris or other officers charged with the preparation of village records.

Sanads and other documents purporting to be grants or assignments by Government of land, or of any interest in land, in reward for special services.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

By the Indian Registration Act, instruments purporting to create, declare, limit, or extinguish any title or interest to or in immoveable property of the value of one hundred rupees or upwards, which have been executed subsequently to the 1st January 1865—the date on which Act No. XVI of 1864 came into operation—must be registered to attain legal validity as documents of title.

The question has been raised as to whether settlement and survey records come within that class of instruments the registration of which is by law made compulsory, and as some diversity of opinion exists on the subject, and very extensive settlement operations are now in progress in the North-Western Provinces and other parts of the Empire, it is desirable that all doubt as to the liability of these documents to the provisions of the Registration Act should be removed by legislative enactment.

The enforced registration of these records is considered inexpedient, because the objects of registration are already fully attained through the manner in which such records are prepared, and the character of the agency employed in their preparation, whilst they are no less accessible to persons seeking information as to their contents than the records of the registration office, and secondly because the conditions attaching to the process of registration would necessarily be productive of great trouble and inconvenience to the numerous parties to the settlement record, besides entailing unnecessary expense.

The exemption of sanads, conferring on individuals grants of land, with retrospective effect, is also necessary to give a sound title to the holders. A very large number of such sanads have issued since the 1st January 1865, and, owing to doubts as to the requirements of the law in respect to them, have never been registered. Their registration now is impracticable, and as in these cases no less than in those of the settlement and survey records, the objects of a distinct registration are otherwise secured, it is proposed to add this class of documents to the schedule of the Bill.

Read again letter to the Government of Bombay, No. 2472, dated the 20th April 1868, stating that only woods, which are not wrought or manufactured, will be exempt from Duty under Act XI of 1868.

Read a letter from Messrs. Gisborne and Co., dated 20th May 1868, enclosing a communication signed by the leading Timber Merchants of Calcutta, soliciting a reconsideration of the foregoing decision.

RESOLUTION.—The Governor General in Council observes that as it would appear to be very difficult to maintain a just discrimination between the several items of sawn timber and woods included under that heading, and the unwrought timber and woods to which Act XI of 1868 was intended to apply, while at the same time the total Duty under timber and woods does not annually exceed half a lakh of Rupees, it would be best to declare the Act in question to apply generally to all timber and woods, and His Excellency in Council is accordingly pleased to do so now.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of Bombay, in the Financial Department,—No. 914, dated 24th June 1868.

Read the following letter :—

From Dosabhoy Framjee, Esq., Collr. of the Tax on Professions and Trades, to the Chief Secy. to the Govt. of Bombay,—No. 137, dated 13th June 1868.

I have the honor to request the instructions of Government on the subject of allowing discount under the circumstances below stated.

2. Section 13 of the Certificate Act (No. IX. of 1868) enjoins the Collector to prepare, as soon as may be after the 1st day of May, a list of the persons liable to take out certificates under the Act.

3. Clause I of Section 25 provides for the payment of the tax where the amount equals or exceeds Rs. 40 by two instalments; the first instalment to be paid on some day not later than 15 days after the name of the person paying the same shall have appeared in the list mentioned in Section 13, and the second instalment on the 1st day of November.

4. Clause II provides that if in any such case the whole amount be paid on or before the day on which the first instalment is to be paid, the person paying such whole amount shall be entitled to a discount of two and a half per cent. on the amount of the second instalment.

5. In strict conformity to the Act, therefore, if a person's name was entered in the list on the 2nd of May, he would be liable to pay the first instalment on the 17th of May; and if such person paid the amount of the second instalment on the same day, he would be entitled to a discount of two and a half per cent. on the latter sum.

6. But, excepting in few cases, not one of those from whom I have already collected the tax paid the same within 15 days from the date on which their names were entered in the list, and they had, therefore, to be served with the notices of demand mentioned in Section 17. After the receipt of such notices, the tax has been freely paid for the whole year.

7. The question therefore for consideration is, whether the full tax not having been paid on the date on which the first instalment was due, as required by Clause II of Section 25 above-quoted, but after the receipt of the notice of demand, the person paying the sum for the whole year is entitled to the discount upon the amount of the second instalment.

8. Having addressed the Collector in charge of the Certificate Tax at Calcutta to ascertain the practice observed by him, that Officer, in a letter No. 48, dated 26th ultimo, has replied as follows:—

"I should make no difference as regards discount, whether a person paid his second instalment before or after notice."

9. It appears to me however that, under the strict reading of the Act, the discount is not admissible in those cases in which the second instalment was not paid on or before the day on which the first instalment became due, and, therefore, I solicit the decision of Government on the point.

Resolution.—The privilege of paying by instalments (as well as the corresponding one of receiving discount on the second instalment if paid in advance) seems to have been held out as an inducement to speedy payment without the trouble of serving notices. The privilege cannot be taken advantage of, unless the amount is paid within 15 days of the preparation of the list, and the power of issuing notices does not accrue till the privilege of paying by instalments lapses. It seems, therefore, clear that no person on whom a notice has been duly served can exercise the privilege of paying by instalments, or receive discount. The opinion of the Collector is, therefore, approved by this Government. But as a different course is apparently adopted in Calcutta, copies of these papers should be submitted to the Government of India.

2. These papers may be published for general information in the Government Gazette, as the knowledge of the conditions under which the privilege of payment by instalments may be made use of will perhaps lead to more speedy payment of the tax in future years.

No. 915.

Endorsed by the Govt. of Bombay.

Submitted to the Government of India.

The opinion of the Government of Bombay appears to be correct, and is accordingly adopted by this Government.

ORDERED, that the foregoing Resolution be communicated to the Government of Bombay and to the other Local Governments and the several Administrations.

Also that it be published in the Gazette of India.

No. 686 of 1868.—The following Extract from the London Gazette of the 16th June 1868, pages 3360 to 3369, is published for general information:—

India Office, June 13th, 1868.

The following despatch from Lieutenant General Sir Robert Napier, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., has been this day received at the India Office:—

From Lieutenant General Sir Robert Napier, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., Commanding the Expeditionary Force in Abyssinia, to the Secretary of State for India.

COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF'S OFFICE,
Head Quarters, Camp Antalo,
May 12th, 1868.

RIGHT HON'BLE SIR,—On the 3rd April when encamped on the Waddela Plateau, I received intimation from the chiefs of Dalanta that Theodore, having moved from Magdala, and encamped on the plain of Arogie, was preparing for an expedition; letters from the captives also warned me to be on my guard.

Between the British Force and the plain of Dalanta lay the Jedda ravine, 3,400 feet deep. As the passage of this formidable obstacle, so easily defensible, could not have been effected, in the face of an enemy, without serious loss, I made a forced march of 18 miles, crossed the Jedda, and established myself on the plain of Dalanta. The mere distance in miles gives little idea of the labour and fatigue of the march, the excessively steep descent and ascent, and the great heat were very distressing for troops heavily weighted.

Theodore, however, did not cross the Bashilo, but plundered and burnt the villages between that river and Magdala which has always been faithful to and trusted him.

From the edge of the Dalanta plain, I obtained a distant but clear view of the position of Magdala and its approaches. I was able, with a good telescope, to appreciate the formidable character of the whole position, and became aware that I should require all the infantry that I could possibly collect to make the attack effective, and that every cavalry soldier that I could bring forward would be necessary for the investment. Even with all the force that I could hope to gather up, I felt I could not complete the investment by sending a column to close the Kaffir Burr or southern gate of Magdala, but I deputed an officer of the Intelligence Department, Meer Akbar Ali, to "Mustiale," the Queen of the Woolla Gallas, to engage her to bring every man she could muster to close all escape on that side. Meer Akbar Ali's report will be forwarded, and will show how effectually he accomplished his mission.

Reluctant as I was to incur any delay so near to Magdala, these considerations and the necessity of having supplies sufficient to carry me through the operations against that fortress, obliged me to defer crossing the Bashilo for several days.

I had not overlooked the probability of the unstable Abyssinian people despising the small postal detachments, and the pacific demeanour of our troops, but the various difficulties of our transport and scarcity of our supplies, kept me without sufficient troops to make the posts of communication as strong as the circumstances required. Each day, however, was bringing forward some accession of strength, and in the mean time I had endeavoured by liberality, and every means of conciliation, to engage the petty chiefs between Antalo and the Tacassie river, to maintain their friendly assistance in forwarding native convoys of supplies. It was the only course that gave chance of success; unfortunately it succeeded but partially.

Relieved from the pressure of our main force, the chiefs commenced to interfere with the Abyssinian carriers of our supplies, and to make attacks on our posts and convoys; the local carriage, which had enabled me to advance from Antalo, was suspended just at the time when its maintenance was most important; thus it happened that on the 4th of April I had only five days' supplies to depend upon.

The force had left all its baggage at Lat, one hundred miles in rear, taking on merely the clothes in which they marched, and carrying great coats, blankets, and waterproof sheets; they had no other incumbrance than a bell tent for twelve officers or twenty soldiers; the daily storms which we experienced renders this shelter indispensable; the carriage so released was sent back for provisions to the points where native transport was doubtful, and gave me sure hope of ultimate relief from my commissariat difficulties, but the immediate urgency was pressing.

On the 2nd instant, I deputed Brigadier General Merewether to the Tacassie to arrange with the chiefs there to bring in supplies of flour.

Major Grant was directed to return to Lat, and Captain Moore to Lake Ashangie, to remove obstructions which had arisen at those places. Captain Speedy and Mr. Munzinger proceeded, the former to Daount, the latter to the borders of Dalanta that had been ravaged by Theodore, and through the exertions of these officers, I was enabled to feed my cattle, and to obtain flour enough for eleven days' supply at 8 oz. for each soldier. The native followers received wheat in the grain instead of flour.

Relying on the admirable spirit of my force, I was prepared to commit myself against Magdala with these means.

Besides the view which I had obtained of Magdala and its approaches, I received most valuable information from a Chief named Beitwuddun Hailo, who had recently deserted from Magdala; having engaged in some intrigues with Menelek, King of Shoa, he knew well that his lot would be instant death on his master's arrival.

It is difficult to give by description alone a sufficient idea of the formidable position which we were about to assail. The fortress of Magdala is about twelve miles from the right bank of the Bashilo, but the great altitude and the purity of the atmosphere exhibited the whole outline distinctly.

The centre of the position is the Rock of Selassie, elevated more than 9,000 feet above the sea, and standing on a plateau called Islamgie, which is divided into several extensive terraces, with perpendicular scarps of basalt. A saddle connects these terraces with the hill called Fahla. Fahla is a gigantic natural bastion, level on the top, entirely open, and commanded by Islamgie. It domineers completely at an elevation of 1,200 feet over all approaches to Islamgie; the sides appeared precipitous, and the summit surrounded by a natural scarp of rock, accessible only in a few places, and from eighteen to twenty feet in height.

Nearly concealed from view by Selassie and Fahla, the top of Magdala was partially visible.

The road to Magdala winds up the steep side of Fahla, subject to its fire, and to the descent of rocks and stones. One part of the road is so steep that few horses, except those bred in the country, could carry their riders up or down it. The whole road is flanked by the end of Selassie, and the broad side scarp of Islamgie. Altogether, without taking into account Magdala itself, the formidable character of its outworks exceeded anything which we could possibly have anticipated from the faint description of the position which had reached us.

The refugee Chief Beitwuddun Hailo was very anxious that I should try the south side, at the Kaffir Burr (gate), from the opposite range, called "Janta," saying, "If you want to take Selassie, go from hence; but if you want Magdala, you must go from Janta." This, however, would have been impossible. I had not force enough to divide, and I could not place this vast combination of natural fortresses between me and my direct line of communication. I also perceived that the real point to be taken was not Magdala but Islamgie, where Theodore had taken post with all his guns, and that Fahla was the key to the whole.

On the 7th I descended to the bed of the Bashilo, and reconnoitered the crossing.

The ordinary approach to Magdala is by the Arogie ravine, which commences under Islamgie, and is bounded on its right by a spur which extends from Islamgie, in a serrated ridge, to the Bashilo.

A similar spur from Fahla stretches to the water of the Bashilo, and bounds the ravine on its left.

The highest point of this ridge is about 2,000 feet above the bed of the Arogie ravine.

The grand features of the ground rendered it impossible for me, with my small force of infantry, to hold both sides of the ravine. I considered Fahla the key of the position, and determined to occupy the ridge, bearing in different parts the names of Gunborgi and Affijo, which leads to that imposing outwork. Established on this ridge, I could operate on either side of Fahla, as might seem expedient on closer examination.

Between the 4th and 9th instant, my force was increased by six companies of the 45th Regiment, under Lieutenant Colonel Parish, which, though long delayed for want of carriage, had marched from Zoulla in twenty-five days. A wing of the 3rd Bombay Native Infantry, under Lieutenant Colonel Campbell, was detained seven marches in rear, owing to the urgent want of carriage, and I thus lost the services of an able officer and an excellent body of soldiers, on whom I had calculated for the attack.

On the 9th the whole force concentrated on the edge of the plateau overlooking the Bashilo, which flows 3,900 feet below it.

Major Chamberlain, with the 23rd Punjab Pioneers, supported by a wing of the Beloochees, occupied the bed of the Bashilo, and repaired Theodore's road.

The signallers of the 10th Company Royal Engineers maintained communications.

The Royal Engineers and the Madras and Bombay Sappers, under Captain Goodfellow, made up the necessary provision of sand-bags, scaling-ladders, and bags filled with powder for the demolition of gates, stockades, &c.

As the only supply of water between the Bashilo and Magdala was under the enemy's fire, all the water-carriers of the force were organized under command of Captain Bainbridge, Transport Corps, with two subalterns, Lieutenant Mortimer, Transport Corps, and Lieutenant Ramsbottom, Transport Corps, for the purpose of carrying forward regular supplies of water from the Bashilo.

The bandsmen and a party of Punjab muleteers were also organized under command of Captain Griffith, aided by Lieutenant Gaselee, Transport Corps, and furnished with stretchers, for the removal of wounded men from the field.

Action of the 10th April.

All preparations having been completed, I placed the cavalry* under Colonel Graves to hold the Bashilo, but ready to advance, and moved the remainder of the force across the river under the immediate command of Sir Charles Staveley.

The second Brigade,† under Brigadier General Willby, to remain in the bed of the Bashilo in support, the first Brigade,* under Brigadier General Schneider, to occupy the Gunborgi spur and advance to a suitable place for encampment, and also to cover a reconnoissance, by the Deputy Quarter Master General, of the enemy's position.

The Deputy Quarter Master General reported that the ascent to Gunborgi was extremely steep and difficult, and that the King's road up the Arogie ravine was easy and secure for the mountain-guns and baggage; they were, therefore, ordered to take that route.

When the leading part of the column had reached Affijo, I arrived at the front.

The King's road emerges from the Arogie pass, at a distance of 1,200 yards from Affijo, and 700 feet below it.

I ordered Major Chamberlain's Punjab Pioneers† to be sent immediately to cover the head of the pass and the remainder of the Brigade to be closed up as soon as possible.

The men were greatly distressed by the heat, the severe ascent, and want of water.

Shortly after Major Chamberlain had taken up his position, the Naval Rocket Brigade, under Captain Fellowes, appeared, rising from the pass, followed by Lieutenant Colonel Penn's steel battery, escorted by detachments of infantry.

At this time the enemy opened his guns from Fahla and Islamgie, making good practice at the Punjabees and at the position of Affijo.

Notwithstanding the distance, which was more than 3,000 yards, the enemy's shot ranged well into the positions, owing to the great command and probably to excessive charges of powder; but the fire being a plunging one, no casualties ensued. Almost simultaneously with the opening of the enemy's artillery, a large force was seen pouring down from Islamgie and the sides of Fahla, descending at speed the steep road and the faces of the mountains, until they filled the whole plain of Arogie.

Many of the enemy were dressed in red, and almost bore the appearance of our own troops in the distance. About 500, principally chiefs, were mounted.

The Naval Brigade hastened up the road to Affijo, and as each rocket tube came into position, it opened on the advancing masses of the enemy, who were startled, checked, and driven back at some points, but only to press forward at others.

I directed Sir Charles Staveley to bring forward the remaining infantry, which by this time had closed up to repel the attack.

The 4th K. O. Regiment, under Lieutenant Colonel Cameron, closely followed by Beville's Belochees and the Royal Engineers, commanded by Major Pritchard, and the Bombay Sappers, under Captain MacDonnell, R.E., descended rapidly the steep path leading down to the Arogie plain, with unrestrained expressions of delight at having at last their enemy before them.

Opening into skirmishing order, they ascended a suitable slope which separated them from the plain of Arogie, and immediately came in contact with the enemy, drove them back, in spite of the efforts of their leaders, in masses, on which the fire of the Snider told with terrible effect.

Several gallant attempts were made by the Abyssinians to rally, but many of their chiefs fell, and they were driven down the slopes of Arogie towards the ravines on our left front.

A portion of them withdrew up the sides of Fahla, and taking cover in a thicket of cactus trees, opened a teasing fire on Staveley's right, causing some casualties.

Captain Fellowes having maintained the fire of his rockets until masked by the advance of the infantry, had been sent to support Sir Charles Staveley.

The fire of the rockets, together with some volleys from Beville's Beloochees and the Royal Engineers, supported by two of Penn's guns under Lieutenant Taylor, cleared Staveley's flank from further annoyance.

The rockets were then turned on the summit of Fahla; they were well directed, and as I subsequently learned produced a very great effect.

A party of the enemy attempted to pass round the sides of Affijo to turn our right, but were checked by a few rockets, and dispersed by the K. Company, Madras Sappers, under Major Prendergast, V.C., Lieutenant Colonel Loch, with a detachment of the 3rd Bombay Cavalry accompanied the infantry in support.

Towards the left Colonel Milward ascended from the Arogie Pass with Penn's Battery, escorted by detachments of the 4th King's Own Regiment under Captain Kittoe, and the 23rd Pioneers under Captain Paterson at the time when the guns opened from Fahla and Islamgie.

On perceiving the troops of Theodore descending from Islamgie, Colonel Milward took up a strong position and opened fire from Penn's Battery. Major Chamberlain, who was holding the Pioneers in hand to cover the head of the pass, moved to his left and joined Colonel Milward.

A considerable body of Abyssinians bore down upon Milward's position. Notwithstanding the evident effect of Penn's guns, they continued to advance with much determination and order.

Chamberlain with his Pioneers met their attack in the most prompt and spirited manner, driving them with great slaughter into the ravines to his left front, not, however, without gallant resistance on the part of the Abyssinians, who closed fearlessly with the Punjabees; the spear wounds received bore witness to the closeness of the conflict.

On the extreme left, the enemy pressed in large numbers towards the head of the Arogie ravine where the baggage had arrived.

The Baggage Master, Lieutenant Sweeny, King's Own Regiment, with great readiness massed the baggage in a safe position, and the baggage guard, consisting of two companies of the 4th King's Own Regiment, and one of the 10th Native Infantry, under Captain Roberts, of the former Corps, until disabled, and subsequently under Lieutenants Abadie (11th Hussars) and Sweeny, were brought forward and most effectually checked the attempt of the enemy to penetrate into the Arogie ravine.

Arrested at the head of the ravine and driven back by the baggage guard; closed in upon by Chamberlain's Pioneers and two companies of the 4th King's Own Regiment, whom Sir Charles Staveley had wheeled on to their flank; the enemy suffered most severely; large numbers were seen to fall from the admirably directed fire of the mountain guns.

Theodore's troops had advanced with the full confidence of men accustomed to victory; they had cast themselves off from their vantage ground to which there was no return.

They had been promised by Theodore that they should be enriched by the spoils of the English, and it was not without a stout resistance that they were finally driven off the field.

A heavy rain continued during the greater part of the action. The troops, thoroughly wet and tired, but highly elated with their victory, bivouacked for the night, covering the road to Arogie Pass, and before daylight had re-occupied their commanding position on Affijo, from which they had descended to meet the enemy.

The wounded were promptly attended to under the direction of Dr. Currie, C.B., Inspector General of Hospitals.

Many wounded Abyssinians were also carried off the field by our troops, and were carefully attended to in our hospitals.

The 2nd Brigade, which came up in the night, occupied the ground which had been held after the action by the 1st Brigade.

According to the best information, the probable number of the enemy was not less 5,000, of whom at least 3,000 were the regular musketeers, and the remainder less efficiently armed. Theodore distributed new arms to his troops on the day preceding the battle.

The loss of the enemy cannot be correctly estimated; three hundred and forty-nine dead were buried in front of the left of our position alone, and exclusive of those who fell in Staveley's first attack, thirty very badly wounded Abyssinians were carried to our hospital.

Theodore's Lieutenant, Fetararee Gabsie, and many chiefs of note were amongst the slain.

Nearly all night the calls of the Abyssinians to their wounded friends were heard, and the greater number of the latter were carried from the field. We saw a large number of wounded when Theodore's army surrendered.

The British loss was only twenty wounded, two mortally; this disparity of loss resulted from the determined and persistent attack of the Abyssinians against a better disciplined and better armed force, not better armed, however, as regarded the 23rd Pioneers, whose smooth bore is hardly equal to the double barrelled percussion gun of the Abyssinians.

There was no hasty flight; the enemy returned again and again to the attack whenever the ground favoured them.

I issued orders to provide against the pursuit being carried too far up the hill, which could only have ended by our retiring and giving renewed confidence to the enemy.

On the morning of the 11th, Lieutenant Prideaux and Mr. Flad arrived in my camp, accompanied by Dejach Alema, a son-in-law and confidential chief of Theodore, with a request for peace.

I replied that if Theodore would bring all the European captives to my camp, and submit to the Queen of England, I would promise honourable treatment for himself and his family.

Lieutenant Prideaux returned to Magdala with the letter containing these terms. In the course of the forenoon, he returned again to the British camp with Mr. Flad, but without Dejach Alema; he brought a letter without seal or signature from Theodore refusing my terms. My letter was returned.

I sent back Lieutenant Prideaux and Mr. Flad to intimate that no other terms would be granted.

I considered that a fuller atonement than the surrender of the captives when they could be retained no longer, was absolutely required, and must be exacted; and painful as was the thought of the possible consequences to the captives if Theodore's rage should become excited, I relied for their safety on the apprehension of a renewal of the conflict which demoralized Theodore's troops, and from which Theodore himself was not free, as was involuntarily betrayed by Dejach Alema. I relied also on my threat, which I impressed on Dejach Alema of unrelenting pursuit and punishment of all who might in any way be concerned in the ill treatment of the European captives. I pointed out how the power of Great Britain had already reached Magdala, that no corner of Abyssinia, however remote, could screen any one whom we wished to punish.

Lieutenant Prideaux was met on his return to Magdala by Mr. Rassam, and the remainder of the British prisoners and several of those of other nations, all of whom arrived in my camp before evening.

My further conditions were not complied with. At the request of Dejach Alema, I had promised to abstain from hostilities for twenty-four hours. After the lapse of forty-eight hours, Theodore had not surrendered himself; reliable information reached me that his army was recovering from their defeat, that many soldiers who had been unable to return to Magdala on the night of the 10th had since rejoined their ranks, that fresh defensive arrangements were being made, and that Theodore and his chiefs even contemplated a night attack on the 2nd Brigade encamped on the lower ground. I, therefore, prepared to attack the enemy's position.

I had originally intended first to assault Fahla from the side which fronted our camp, and was screened from the fire of Islamgie and Selassie. But under the altered condition of the enemy, Theodore having by death, wounds, and desertion lost half of his army and his bravest chiefs, I determined to attack Islamgie by the King's road.

All arrangements for this had been considered, and the positions for the artillery reconnoitred and fixed upon, when information was brought to me that Theodore had left Magdala, and that many of the chiefs with their followers wished to surrender.

I agreed to accept their submission, and ordered Sir Charles Staveley to advance on Islamgie, relaxing no precautions that I had considered necessary for the attack.

The scarcity of water rendered it impossible to retain any considerable body of cavalry before Magdala; my personal escort, under a native officer, only remained, and with a few details of other corps was sent under command of Lieutenant Scott, A.D.C., to watch the west side of Magdala, where they took up a good position, until the arrival of the cavalry, under Colonel Graves,* who completed the investment up to the Kaffir Burr Gate, which was watched by the Gallas.

The Beshilo was held by the Head Quarter Detachment of the Sind Horse, under Major Briggs, and detachments of the 3rd Dragoon Guards, 3rd and 12th Cavalry, under Major Miller, to secure that point and provide against the escape of the enemy in that direction by the Minjerra ravine.

A detachment of the Beloochees, under Lieutenant Beville, ascended by the spurs of Fahla, and occupied that important position where they were reinforced from the 2nd Brigade by the Head Quarters Wing of the 10th Native Infantry, under Colonel Field.

The artillery was placed in position, and the troops advanced, preceded by Captain Speedy, of the Intelligence Department, with a small escort of the 3rd Light Cavalry, under Lieutenant Colonel Loch, to communicate with the chiefs who wished to surrender, and to prevent any misunderstanding.

No resistance was offered.

Sir Charles Staveley effected an entrance to Islamgie and Selassie through a difficult crevice in the rocky escarps.

It would be impossible to arrive at any correct estimate, either of the numbers of the armed men who laid down their weapons, or of the masses of people, men, women, and children whom we found on Islamgie.

It was necessary to collect and guard the arms that were surrendered.

It was also necessary to send down all the disarmed soldiers, and the miscellaneous multitude that followed them to the plain below, before I could proceed actively against Magdala.

Theodore himself having abandoned his attempt to escape, was making preparations for defence, and offering us defiance in front of Magdala.

By three o'clock the Abyssinians having nearly all cleared away from Islamgie, I ordered the attack of Magdala to be at once carried out.

The entrance of Magdala is 300 feet above the terraplain of Islamgie, and the ascent is by an extremely steep and rugged path.

Viewing the very difficult nature of the approach, I made the attack as strong as possible, and massed the whole of my artillery† fire to cover it, in order to overpower the enemy's resistance and prevent the heavy casualties which I should otherwise have incurred.

The assaulting force consisted of the 2nd Brigade, led by the 33rd Duke of Wellington's Regiment, accompanied by detachments of the Royal Engineers and Madras and Bombay Sappers and Miners, with means of clearing away obstacles.

The 1st Brigade to be in close support.

I concentrated the fire of the artillery on the gateway and the north end of the fort, which were crowded with the houses of the soldiers, avoiding as much as possible the higher part of the interior, occupied by the Abyssinian prisoners and non-combatants.

The enemy carefully concealed themselves from view, so that the place seemed almost deserted, although, when entered by our troops, it was found to be thronged with soldiers, who had thrown away their arms, released prisoners, and the numerous voluntary and involuntary followers of Theodore's fortunes.

The artificial defences consisted of stone walls, loop-holed and surmounted by strong and thick barricades of thorny stakes, with narrow stone gateways. The lower one built up in the interior, the higher one being seventy feet above the lower, and approached by a very steep narrow path winding amongst the soldiers' huts.

The attack was ably conducted by Sir Charles Staveley, whose report is annexed, and gallantly carried out by the troops. Fortunately the defences were very unscientifically constructed, and though the attack was met by a sharp fire from the enemy, yet they could not direct it on the head of the storming party without exposing themselves to the rapid and fatal fire of the Snider rifle, and our loss was in consequence very small.

The Royal Engineers and Sappers and leading sections of the 33rd Regiment were long before they could force an entrance, and during that time nine officers and men of the Royal Engineers and Sappers received wounds or contusions.

At length an entrance was found by means of the ladders, near the gate and by the leading men of the 33rd, who scaled a rock and turned the defences of the gateway, the enemy was driven to the second barricade, and when that was carried, all resistance ceased.

Amongst the dead near the outer gateway were found several of Theodore's most devoted chiefs; one of them, Dejach Enjeda, had urged Theodore to massacre all the prisoners, a course from which he was dissuaded by others; close to the second gateway lay the body of Theodore.

At the moment when the barricade was forced by the 33rd, Theodore; fell, as I have since learned, by his own hand; his troops immediately fled, some by the Kaffir Burr Gate, which was found choked with arms that had been cast away in their flight.

Of these fugitives, the greater part fell into the hands of the Gallas, and the remainder, seeing the fate of their comrades, and hearing the taunting invitations of the Gallas, returned to Magdala and surrendered.

The command of Magdala was entrusted to Brigadier General Wilby, who held it with the 33rd and wing of the 45th Regiments.

So thickly was the fortress inhabited, and so great was the crowd of people, that it was no easy matter to establish order.

Guards were placed at the gates and such place as required protection.

The family of Theodore were committed to the care of Mr. Rassam, who was requested to do all that was in his power for their comfort and protection.

The Abyssinian prisoners were released from their chains, and the very numerous body of Abyssinians whose histories and condition it was impossible at the time to investigate, were collected in an open space in the centre of the fortress, where they could be protected, and where they quickly threw up small huts for themselves, and remained until their final departure.

On the 15th, the 4th King's Own Regiment relieved the 33rd in Magdala, and the 45th were moved to Islamgie to reinforce the detachment of the 10th Native Infantry under Colonel Field, for the protection of the captured arms and ordnance, and to furnish working parties for their destruction.

The inhabitants of Magdala were collected at Arogie, where great vigilance was necessary to protect them from the Gallas, who were lying in wait, both day and night, for opportunities of plundering and destroying them.

Notwithstanding the friendly relations with the Queens of the Gallas, their people were so little under restraint that it was frequently necessary te fire upon them to drive them from molesting our water-parties and carrying off the mules. A party of them in search of plunder even dared to make their way into Magdala, where they were captured by the guard of the 33rd Regiment.

On the 15th and 16th the disarmed soldiers and people of Magdala made their exodus from Arogie.

Every consideration was shown them, and they were allowed to take all their property.

The Arogie defile was guarded by infantry, and their procession, after crossing the Bashilo, was guarded by cavalry patrols until they reached Waddeba.

No doubt many of these people deserved little mercy at the hands of the peasants of Dalanta, who had suffered so much misery from Theodore's troops; but having surrendered to the British force, it was incumbent on us to protect them until they reached a point of safety, from whence they could go to their native districts.

On the morning of the 17th, orders were issued to clear every one out of Magdala by 4 P. M. At that hour the whole of the captured ordnance having been destroyed, the gates of Magdala were blown up, and the whole of the buildings were committed to the flames.

The wounded Abyssinians, who had no friends to take charge of them, were conveyed into our hospitals.

The elephants and heavier ordnance having been sent in advance on the 15th, on the 18th of April, the force re-crossed the Bahsilo on its return to the coast.

I have the honor to enclose plans and photographs to illustrate the course of the operations.

I regret that I have not been able to complete my despatch earlier, but owing to the marching in a difficult country, which has occupied the greater part of the days, and the many demands on my time, it has been quite out of my power.

By the next mails I hope to submit the conclusion of my despatch, which will include the re-embarkation of the greater part of the force, and I shall then have the satisfaction to represent for the favourable consideration of Her Majesty's Government the services of the officers and men of the force which I have had the honour to command, of which it is impossible for me to write in too high terms, and to which I could not now do adequate justice.

I have, &c.,

From Major General Sir Charles Staveley, K.C.B., Commanding the 1st Division of the Abyssinian Expeditionary Force, to the Deputy Adjutant General.

HEAD QUARTERS, CAMP BEFORE MAGDALA,
14th April 1868.

SIR,—Having been directed by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to report on the disposition made of the division under my command for the attack of Magdala on the 13th instant, a brief description of the place will first be necessary.

The defences consist of three very steep mountains, named Fahla, Selassie, and Magdala, each being surrounded at the top by steep and precipitous scarps. Fahla and Magdala are joined to Selassie by saddles, and are nearly at right angles to it. A tolerably good, but in some places very steep, road leads from the British camp up the north side of Fahla, over the saddle along the south of Selassie, and over the next saddle called Islamgie, into Magdala. A pathway branches off this road at the Fahla saddle to the left, along the foot of the Selassie scarp for some distance, and then turns up a zigzag to the top; another pathway leads direct up to Selassie from the Fahla saddle. Neither of these paths were found practicable for mules, although we had been informed that they were. The summits of Fahla and Magdala are flat, that of Selassie slopes upwards from the scarp to the centre, and commands the other two mountains.

On the morning of the 13th instant at seven o'clock, a detail of 50 sabres of the 3rd Light Cavalry (Bombay) and 12th Bengal Cavalry, under Lieutenant Colonel Loch, of the 3rd Light Cavalry, was sent up to the Fahla saddle, and placed at the disposal of Captain Speedy, of the Intelligence Department, to communicate with those of the King's troops who had surrendered.

On the advance being ordered at half-past eight A. M., according to instructions received from the Commander-in-Chief, the G. 14, R. A., under Captain Murray, and the two 8-inch mortars under Captain Hills, R. A., were placed under Colonel Wallace, R. H. A., in a position covering the troops with Selassie in front and Fahla on the right, the A 21 Mountain Battery, under Lieutenant Colonel Penn, having ascended a short distance with the column was placed in position on a spur to the left of the road to cover the head of the ascent, whilst the B 21 R. A., under Captain Twiss, followed next in rear of the leading battalion of infantry.

The 3rd Dragoon Guards, under Lieutenant Colonel Tower, the 3rd Light Cavalry, under Captain Moore, and the 12th Bengal Cavalry, under Major Gough, V.C., the whole under the command of Colonel Graves, of the 3rd Bombay Light Cavalry, were sent round to the south and below the mountain to prevent the escape of the Magdala garrison in that direction.

The division moved up the road, the 2nd Brigade, with a ladder party of Sappers, leading. A company of the Belooch Battalion was sent up the first accessible spur on the right into Fahla, and two companies of the 10th Regiment Native Infantry up the next spur.

On arriving at the saddle, the advanced guard of two companies of the 33rd Regiment were sent up the direct path to Selassie, and the remainder of the 2nd Brigade, and B. 21, R. A., by the pathway above described to the left. The path up the zigzag was so bad that, although practicable for infantry, only three mountain guns could be passed up, and those by hand. The 1st Brigade moved along the high road to the south of Selassie, followed now by Captain Murray's battery, the two 8-inch mortars, and the Naval Rocket Brigade.

The 2nd Brigade crowned Selassie before the 1st Brigade had moved along its southern side. I mention this because Mr. Waldemar, one of the released European prisoners and my guide on the occasion, informed me afterwards, from information he had received, that King Theodore imagined we should advance by the high road along the south of Selassie, without first occupying Selassie, and had arranged accordingly to fall on our troops from the heights overlooking that part of the road, so far, for reasons which it is unnecessary for me to explain, no opposition was offered to our advance.

The 2nd Brigade having occupied Salassie, the King's troops were ordered to lay down their arms, and retire to the plain below; the first order was immediately carried out, and thousands of men, women, and children left the mountain so soon as the narrow exit permitted.

Some of the enemy, and amongst them the King, being observed on the Islamgie saddle, below Selassie, a company of the 23rd Regiment under Captain Campbell was pushed down the slope to the saddle, and the Cavalry, under Lieutenant Colonel Loch, advanced along the road; these parties were fired on by the enemy, but the fire being returned, and some of the King's guns being turned on him, by order of Lieutenant Colonel Loch, he soon retired into Magdala.

I now received the orders of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to make the following dispositions for the assault of Magdala by the 2nd Brigade supported by the 1st.

The 33rd Regiment, ten companies strong, to advance across Islamgie, two companies skirmishing, and two in support, the remaining six companies, under Major Cooper, commanding the Regiment, headed by a detachment of the Royal Engineers, under Major Pritchard, and the K. Company, Madras Sappers and Miners, under Captain Elliott, with powder bags, crow bars, and ladders to form the storming party.

Two companies of Bombay Sappers and Miners, under Captain Leslie and Lieutenant Leacock, to follow in rear of 33rd Regiment.

On nearing the steep ascent to Magdala Gate, the skirmishers to halt, and be reinforced by the supports, and keep up a fire at the gate and defences during the ascent of the storming party.

The 45th Regiment, under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Parish, to advance in line in rear of the 33rd Regiment, and the 1st Brigade in column some distance in rear in reserve, except the Punjab Pioneers, left with two companies of the 10th Bombay Native Infantry to guard the camp.

Two companies of the 10th Native Infantry, under Colonel Field, to remain on Selassie to guard the arms, and clear the Abyssinians off the mountain.

The two mountain and the Naval Rocket Batteries, under Lieutenant Colonel Milward, to be placed on the north end of Islamgie, to cover the advance and keep up a fire at Magdala Gate.

The G. 14 R.A. and 2 8-inch mortars, under Lieutenant Colonel Wallace, now arrived on elephants from below, to advance along the main road south of Selassie as far as practicable, and also cover the advance of the troops.

I leave it to His Excellency how far these dispositions were carried out.

There were two lines of defence, with a gate in each, at the head of the very steep and strong ascent of the point of attack; the first gate had a porch 15 feet deep, filled up as high as 12 feet with large stones. From this line of defence, the enemy kept up a fire through the loop-holes of a wall, topped with a strong fence, and a passage for the column could not be effected here until a ladder had been passed over a wall to the right of the gate.

In the mean time, some men of the 33rd Regiment scrambled up a cliff to the right; and succeeding with much difficulty in surmounting the wall and fence, turned the enemy at the gate, and with the head of the column drove him to the second line of defence above; this being comparatively weak, no further resistance was offered.

On entering the second, the body of King Theodore was found shot through the head by his own hand.

The only two gates by which the garrison might have moved out being watched, the one to the south by our cavalry, and the other to the east by the Gallas, the men laid down their arms, and begged for mercy; this was accorded, and not a man was injured.

I enclose a return of our wounded, all of whom were taken the night of the assault to the field hospital, 2nd Brigade, where they received every attention from Surgeon Major Wyllie, the Medical Officer in charge.

I also enclose a return, showing the number of rank and file of the corps who took part in the attack, and a return of the ordnance found on the three mountains and destroyed; also a photograph of the attack on Magdala, from a sketch by Major Baigrie, Assistant Quarter Master General.

I wish to bring the names of the following officers to the notice of His Excellency:—

Brigadier General Wilby, who commanded the 2nd Brigade and led it to the assault. He mentions the very effective service rendered him by Captain Hicks, his Brigade Major, Captain James, Deputy Assistant Quarter Master General, and Captain Capel, 12th Bengal Cavalry, A.D.C.

Major Pritchard, R.E. (who was wounded), the senior officer with the Royal Engineers and Sappers, and who mentions the able assistance he received from Captain Elliott, commanding K Company, Madras Sappers.

Captain Foord, Lieutenant Bird, Cornet Dalrymple, and Surgeon Pearl, of the Madras Sappers, Sergeants Harrold and Dean, R.E., Corporal McDonagh, and Sapper Bailey.

Major Cooper, commanding 33rd Regiment, who led his regiment to and over the gate, and I beg here to bring especially to notice No. 3691, Drummer Michael Magner, and No. 949, Private James Bergin, 33rd Regiment, the two men who first forced an entrance to the extreme and turned the gate.

Captain Elliott, who commanded the Madras Sappers.

Captain MacDonnell, commanding Bombay Sappers; Lieutenant Colonel Parish, commanding 45th Regiment; Colonel Field, commanding 10th Regiment Native Infantry; Brigadier General Schneider, commanding 1st Brigade; Lieutenant Colonel Cameron, commanding 4th King's Own Royal Regiment; Major Beville, commanding Wing Belooch Regiment; Major Chamberlain, commanding 23rd Punjab Pioneers; Brigadier General Petrie, commanding Royal Artillery; Lieutenant Colonel Wallace, Commanding Division Royal Artillery; Lieutenant Colonel Milward, commanding Division Royal Artillery; Lieutenant Colonel L. W. Penn, commanding A 21 Royal Artillery.

Commander Fellowes, commanding Naval Rocket Batteries.

Captain Twiss, commanding B 21, Royal Artillery.

Colonel Graves, 3rd Bombay Light Cavalry, commanding Cavalry Brigade; Lieutenant Colonel Tower, commanding 3rd Dragoon Guards; Major Gough, V.C., commanding 12th Bengal Cavalry; Major Briggs, commanding Sind Horse; Lieutenant Colonel Loch, commanding Details of Cavalry; Captain Moore, commanding 3rd Bombay Light Cavalry; Lieutenant W. HOME DEPARTMENT.

ABSTRACT OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNCIL OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA, ASSEMBLED FOR THE PURPOSE OF MAKING LAWS AND REGULATIONS UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE ACT OF PARLIAMENT, 24 & 25 VIC., CAP. 67.

The Council met at Simla on Wednesday, the 15th July 1868.

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, presiding.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, G.C.S.I., K.C.B.

The Hon'ble G. N. Taylor.

The Hon'ble Major General Sir H. M. Durand, C.B., K.C.S.I.

The Hon'ble H. S. Maine.

The Hon'ble John Strachey.

The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple, K.C.S.I.

The Hon'ble F. R. Cockerell.

NEILGHERRY COMMISSIONER'S SMALL CAUSE JURISDICTION BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. MAINE moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill for investing the Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner of the Neilgherry Hills with the powers of a Court of Small Causes, be taken into consideration. He said that it was unnecessary to add anything to the explanation given when he had introduced the Bill. It was a mere supplement to the Madras Act for appointing a Commissioner to administer civil and criminal justice on the Neilgherry Hills, and was necessitated by the Local Council's want of legislative power.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. Maine moved that in the preamble, the number of the Madras Act there mentioned should be changed from "II" to "I." The change had been suggested by a telegram recently received from Madras.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. MAINE then moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

INOCULATION (KUMAON AND GARHWAL) BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. STRACHEY introduced the Bill to prohibit the practice of inoculation in Kumaon and Garhwál, and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee, with instructions to report in one month. He said that when he moved for leave to introduce the Bill, he had sufficiently explained its object. The Bill had been prepared at the request of the Local Government. Its most important section was taken from the English statute 3 and 4 Vic., C. 29 (An Act to extend the practice of vaccination).

The Motion was put and agreed to.

NON-REGISTRATION OF SETTLEMENT RECORDS BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. COCKERELL introduced the Bill to exempt certain Instruments from the Indian Registration Act, 1866, and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee, with instructions to report in one month. He said that the first and third clauses of the schedule related to documents connected with the settlement of the land revenue, the object and grounds of exemption of which were explained when leave was asked for the introduction of the Bill. The proposed exemption of survey records provided for in the second clause was governed by precisely similar considerations. In regard to the sanads covered by the fourth clause, the case was somewhat different. Whilst on the one hand, it might be said that the object of registration was as fully attained, as in the case of settlement papers, by the record which was carefully prepared and preserved in the Collector's office, it must be admitted, on the other, that there was no valid plea for the remission of the obligation to register such instruments on the score of the trouble and expense which the procedure would entail on the individual grantee or holder of them.

The object of the proposed exemption of this class of documents was to rectify past omissions. It appeared that since the 1st January 1865, the date on which the Registration Act came into operation, upwards of 1,400 sanads or instruments of grant had issued in the North-Western Provinces, the holders of which, through ignorance of the requirements of the law, had neglected to register them. The time within which such registration could be legally effected had passed, their registration now was impracticable, and in default of registration, their legal validity, under section 49 of the Indian Registration Act, was liable to be called into question. It was at first proposed to get over the difficulty by granting fresh instruments in lieu of the unregistered sanads; the objections raised to that course were, 1st, that the measure would entail considerable expense on the Government, and, 2nd, that the necessary surrender by the grantees of their original instruments would be likely to excite doubts and fears in their minds as to the good faith of the Government in the matter, for they would be slow to comprehend the necessity of any further legal formalities in connection with their grants. In those circumstances, the Government of the North-Western Provinces recommended recourse to legislation either in the form of exempting those documents from registration, or specially extending on their behalf the period of limitation prescribed by the Act. Advantage had accordingly been taken of the opportunity afforded by this Bill for including those sanads in the category of instruments exempted from compulsory registration. This ground of exemption however applied simply to sanads issued since the Registration Act came into operation, the proper period for the registration of which had lapsed. But he thought that there were no less cogent reasons for making the exemption applicable to documents of this class that might be issued hereafter, equally with those which had been heretofore granted. He held that such grants, made by the Government as a reward for special service, stood on a very different footing from ordinary conveyances, and that it was politically inexpedient that the law should admit of any question of the validity of such documents, owing to the non-observance by the grantees of the form of obtaining their registration. The maintenance of the obligation to register those instruments was calculated to weaken their prestige in the minds of the grantees, and as such registration was, as regards the main object and purpose of the Registration Act, unnecessary, it might not unreasonably be dispensed with.

Provision had been made in section 1 for determining the effect of exemption as regards the value to be attached by the Courts to the exempted documents, when put in evidence, and for giving retrospective effect to the privileged status conferred by the Bill.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

TENANCY OF LAND (PANJAB) BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir R. TEMPLE presented the preliminary report of the Select Committee on the Bill to define and amend the law relating to the tenancy of land in the Punjáb. He said it was only necessary to state that, with the general consent of the Council, the Bill would be referred to the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjáb, with a request that he would obtain the opinions thereon of the Judges of the Chief Court and of such local officers as he might think fit to consult.

The following Select Committees were named:—

On the Bill to prohibit the practice of inoculation in Kumaon and Garhwál —the Hon'ble Messrs. Maine, Cockerell and the mover.

On the Bill to exempt certain Instruments from the Indian Registration Act, 1866—the Hon'ble Messrs. Maine, Strachey and the mover.

The Council adjourned till the 22nd July 1868.

MR. WHITWORTH'S SCHOLARSHIPS FOR MECHANICAL SCIENCE.

Despatch from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, to His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Governor General of India in Council,—(Educational), No. 11, dated 28th May 1868.

I herewith forward a memorandum by Mr. Joseph Whitworth, which has been communicated to me by the Lord President of the Council, respecting thirty scholarships for Mechanical Science of £100 each, endowed by Mr. Whitworth, to be open to all Her Majesty's subjects of the United Kingdom, India, and the Colonies, who do not exceed the age of 26 years.

2. I desire that your Excellency in Council will take the necessary measures for making known, throughout the territories under your control, the liberal intentions of Mr. Whitworth.

Science and Art Department of the Committee of Council on Education, South Kensington.

At Whitehall, the 5th day of May 1868.

BY THE RIGHT HON'BLE THE LORDS OF THE COMMITTEE OF HER MAJESTY'S MOST HON'BLE PRIVY COUNCIL ON EDUCATION.

My Lords read Mr. Whitworth's letter of 4th May 1868, transmitting a memorandum on his scholarships and on the establishment of sixty exhibitions of £25 for the present year, preparatory to the competition for his scholarships, and requesting that the Science and Art Department may conduct the necessary examinations and correspondence.

Their Lordships have great pleasure in acceding to Mr. Whitworth's request, and giving every assistance in their power in carrying out his patriotic munificence.

From J. WHITWORTH, Esq., to the Secretary of the Science and Art Dept.,—dated 4th May 1868.

Referring to your letter of March 20th, by which you transmit to me a copy of the Minute which the Lords of the Committee of Council on Education had passed in acknowledgment of my endowment of scholarships for promoting mechanical science, and to the concluding sentence of the Minute which invites further suggestions, and offers to render assistance in carrying out the intentions of the endowment,—

1. I beg leave to enclose, for the information of the Lords of the Committee of Council on Education, a memorandum on the subject of the endowment which, I trust, will meet with the approval of their Lordships, and that they will cause it to be circulated, and the necessary correspondence arising out of it to be conducted by the Science and Art Department.

2. I would beg leave to ask the Lords of the Committee of Council on Education to undertake the examinations for these scholarships.

3. As respects the preparation of the necessary details for the examinations in the use of tools, I am willing to be responsible myself with the aid of friends, and I propose to obtain the consent of a few gentlemen to advise with me from time to time in whatever may arise in the future for my consideration.

4. In reply to the invitation of their Lordships to submit any suggestions, I venture to submit for consideration whether honours in the nature of Degrees might not be conferred by some competent authority on successful students each year, thus creating a Faculty of Industry analogous to the existing Faculties of Divinity, Law, and Medicine. I am of opinion that such honours would be a great incentive to exertion, and would tend greatly to promote the object in view.

5. I venture further to express a hope that the Government will provide the necessary funds for endowing a sufficient number of Professors of Mechanics throughout the United Kingdom.

6. In conclusion, I inform you that the necessary arrangements for securing the endowment have been made, and I have given instructions for the preparation of the Draft of a Deed of Trust, which will be sent for the approval of the Lord President.

MEMORANDUM ON SCHOLARSHIPS FOR MECHANICAL SCIENCE TO BE COMPETED FOR IN MAY 1869.

I. Having offered to the Lords of the Committee of Council on Education to "found thirty scholarships of the annual value of £100 each, to be applied for the further instruction of young men, natives of the United Kingdom, selected by open competition for their intelligence and proficiency in the theory and practice of mechanics and its cognate sciences, with a view to the promotion of engineering and mechanical industry in this country," I propose that the following should be the general arrangements in the first instance, which may be modified after the first competition has taken place in May 1869.

II. That the thirty scholarships of £100 each should be open to all of Her Majesty's subjects, whether of the United Kingdom, India, or the Colonies, who do not exceed the age of 26 years, and be held either for two or three years, as experience may prove to be desirable; that ten scholarships should be competed for and awarded in May 1869, at the Annual National Examinations in Science, provided that a sufficient number of candidates prove themselves to be competent; that the successful candidates should be required to spend the period of holding the scholarships in the further satisfactory prosecution of the studies and practice of mechanical engineering, and pursue their studies according to the spirit of the endowment, making periodical reports of them; that the student should state where he proposes to pursue his studies, the Lord President of the Council deciding if the proposal can be allowed, also if the student's progress be satisfactory, and the manner in which it shall be tested from year to year. In deciding if the plan of study proposed by the student be satisfactory, as much latitude as possible may be allowed. If the student wish to complete his general education, instead of continuing his special scientific study, he may be permitted to do so. He may go to the Universities or Colleges affording scientific or technical instruction, or he may travel abroad. The successful artisan should be encouraged to study theory, and the successful competitor in theory aided in getting admission to machine shops and other practical establishments. All further details would be hereafter prepared and issued by the Science and Art Department.

III. The candidates must be of sound bodily constitution.

IV. The first competition should be in the following theoretical subjects:—

1. Mathematics (elementary and higher).
2. Mechanics (theoretical and applied).
3. Practical Plane and Descriptive Geometry, and Mechanical and Freehand Drawing.
4. Physics.
5. Chemistry, including Metallurgy.

And in the following handicrafts:—

1. Smiths' Work.
2. Turning.
3. Filing and Fitting.
4. Pattern-making and Moulding.

V. No candidate should obtain a scholarship who has not shown a satisfactory knowledge of all the following theoretical subjects:—

1. Elementary Mathematics.
2. Elementary Mechanics.
3. Practical Plane and Descriptive Geometry, and Freehand Drawing.

With the power to use one or more of the following classes of tools:—

a. The Axe.
b. The Saw and Plane.
c. The Hammer and Chisel.
d. The File.
e. The Forge.

I propose that the maximum number of marks obtainable in the theoretical subjects, and those obtainable by the most skilled workman, should be about equal.

VI. My object in devising the foregoing scheme has been, while requiring a practical acquaintance with a few simple tools as a sine qua non, to render the competition accessible on fairly equal terms to the student who combines some practice with his theory, and to the artisan who combines some theoretical knowledge with perfection of workmanship.

PREPARATORY EXHIBITIONS OF £25 FOR THE YEAR 1868.

VII. As the scholarships' scheme can only come into full operation by degrees, I propose from the fund ultimately available for the scheme, at once to create sixty exhibitions or premiums, of the value of £25 each, tenable until April 1869, and to place them at the absolute disposal of the governing bodies of the following educational institutions and towns, in order that they may award them to youths under 22 years of age, who may thus be aided to qualify themselves, and must undertake to compete for the scholarships of £100 in May 1869.

VIII.—Eight Exhibitions to Owen's College, and 2 to the Grammar School, Manchester, the seat of my workshops.

3 University of Oxford.
3 University of Cambridge.
3 University of London.

And one to each of the following Universities, Colleges, and Public Schools :—

University of Durham.
University of Dublin.
University of Edinburgh.
Watt Institution, Edinburgh.
University of Glasgow.
Andersonian University, Glasgow.
University of St. Andrew's.
University of Aberdeen.
To each of the Queen's Colleges at Belfast, Cork, Galway, Ireland.
King's College, London.
University College, London.
Eton.
Harrow.
Rugby.
Charter House.
Westminster.
Winchester.
St. Paul's, London.
Merchants Tailors.
Christ's Hospital.
City of London.
Shrewsbury.
Marlborough.
Cheltenham.
Chester.
Clifton.
Brighton.
Liverpool.

2 to the College of Preceptors.
3 to the Science and Art Department.

I propose that the following exhibitions shall be given to artisans only :—

3 to the Society of Arts.

Also one for artisans to each of the following towns :—

Birmingham.
Bristol.
Swansea and Cardiff.
Huddersfield or Halifax.
Leeds.
Northampton.
Sheffield.

And if there be any of the above unapplied, they may be given by the Science and Art Department to any other scholastic institution which makes satisfactory arrangements for affording instruction in Mathematics and Mechanics, Freehand and Mechanical Drawing.

IX. I would point out that the exhibitions to artisans may perhaps be increased to £50 for the year, by connecting them with the Science and Art Department, under the Minute of the 21st December 1867.

MANCHESTER, The 4th May 1868. (Signed) JOSEPH WHITWORTH.

Minute on Mr. Whitworth's offer to endow Scholarships.

At Whitehall, the 27th day of March 1868.

BY THE RIGHT HON'BLE THE LORDS OF THE COMMITTEE OF HER MAJESTY'S MOST HON'BLE PRIVY COUNCIL ON EDUCATION.

My Lords consider Mr. Whitworth's letter to the First Lord of the Treasury, dated 18th March 1868. In this letter Mr. Whitworth offers to found thirty scholarships of the annual value of £100 each, to be applied for the further instruction of young men, natives of the United Kingdom, selected by open competition for their intelligence and proficiency in the theory and practice of mechanics and its cognate sciences, with a view to the promotion of engineering and mechanical industry in this country; and he expresses hopes that means may be found for bringing science and industry into closer relation with each other than at present obtains here.

It is unnecessary now to repeat the thanks which the First Lord of Her Majesty's Treasury and the Lord President of the Council have already conveyed to Mr. Whitworth for his generous offer which they are convinced the country will fully appreciate.

Mr. Whitworth proposes that these scholarships should be tenable on conditions to be defined by a Deed of Trust regulating the administration of the endowment fund during his life, and that thereafter the management of this fund, subject to the conditions specified therein, should rest in the Lord President of the Council or other Minister of Public Instruction for the time being.

It is the wish of my Lords to see provision made in several large centres of manufacturing industry in the United Kingdom for affording to all classes of Her Majesty's subjects ample opportunities for acquiring instruction in the sciences which are applicable to productive industry. My Lords are of opinion that, by the union of local and private efforts supplemented as far as is proper by State assistance, this provision will be best made.

This will be rendered easy if the munificent example set by Mr. Whitworth shall be extensively followed by others.

My Lords will be happy to receive any further suggestions from Mr. Whitworth, should he desire to make them, and to be informed if the Department can render him any assistance in carrying out his liberal intentions.

QUARANTINE STATION IN THE RED SEA.

Despatch from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, to His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Governor General of India in Council (Sanitary),—No. 18, dated 28th May 1868.

With reference to your Excellency's Despatch* dated the 30th November, No. 209 of 1867, transmitting some reports relative to the selection of Massowah as a quarantine station in the Red Sea, I now forward a copy of a Despatch† from the Foreign Office, with accompaniment, from which it appears that, in accordance with the views expressed by several of the officers whom your Excellency in Council consulted, the Island of Camaran, near Hodeida, has been chosen as the quarantine station.

* Public Department.

From JAMES MURRAY, Esq., to the Under Secretary of State, India Office,—dated 24th March 1868.

With reference to your letter of the 6th ultimo, I am directed by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to transmit to you, for the information of Secretary Sir Stafford Northcote, the accompanying copy of a Despatch* which has been received from Her Majesty's Consul General in Egypt, reporting that the Island of Camaran, near Hodeida, has been selected as the quarantine station for the Red Sea.

From E. STANTON, Esq., to the Right Hon'ble LORD STANLEY, M.P.,—No. 28, dated 12th March 1868.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's Despatch No. 9, Consular, of the 11th of February, transmitting for my information copies of reports from Colonel Merewether, Captain Howe, and Major Davies, communicated to your Lordship by the Secretary of State for India, as to the capabilities of Massowah as a quarantine station.

Since the date of my report to your Lordship on this subject, No. 45 of the 22nd of April last, a Commission specially appointed for the purpose, has visited the various ports of the Red Sea with the view of selecting the most available locality for the proposed quarantine establishment, and the Island of Camaran, near Hodeida, has been selected for this purpose as offering more advantages than any other port in the Red Sea. It may, therefore, be presumed that the idea of making these establishments at Massowah has been abandoned, and I have reason to believe that the selection made by the Commission is not open to any serious objection, but is in reality the best that could have been made for this purpose.

CONDITION OF IMMIGRANTS IN THE COLONY OF ST. VINCENT.

Despatch from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, to His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Governor General of India in Council (Public),—No. 101, dated 28th May 1868.

I forward herewith, for the information of your Excellency in Council, a copy of a despatch* from the Governor of the Windward Islands, enclosing the report of the Immigration Agent of St. Vincent for the last half of the year 1867. I also transmit a copy of a letter* from the Chairman of the Emigration Board, containing observations upon these papers, and I am glad to perceive that the report is in all respects satisfactory.

* Dated 14th March 1868, No. 521, with five enclosures.

* Dated 2nd May 1868.

From JAMES WALKER, Esq., C.B., to His Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos,—No. 521, dated 14th March 1868.

I have the honor to forward to your Grace a despatch* from the Lieutenant Governor of St. Vincent, enclosing the Immigration Agent's half-yearly report to the 31st December last, on the condition of the indentured immigrants in that island.

* No 423, dated 11th March 1868.

From GEORGE BERKELEY, Esq., to the Governor of the Windward Islands,—No. 423, dated 11th March 1868.

I have the honor to transmit to your Excellency the report* of the Immigration Agent for the half-year ended the 31st December 1867, which I hope will prove satisfactory.

* Dated 9th March 1868.

2. With reference to the increase in the mortality for the half-year to which notice is called in the report, I would advert to my despatch* No. 400 of the 8th January, in which I describe the steps taken in the case of the coolies on the Montrose Estate, which, I am happy to say, were attended with the most satisfactory results, as the sickness has long since entirely ceased among the laborers who have returned to their barracks upon the estate.

* Transmitted in Governor Walker's Despatch No. 505 of the 17th January 1868.

From J. H. BROWN, Esq., Immigration Agent, St. Vincent, to the Colonial Secretary,—dated 9th March 1868.

As Agent for immigration in this Colony, I beg leave to present my report for the half-year ended 31st December 1867.

His Grace the Secretary of State for the Colonies in his despatch, of which you did me the honor to furnish me with a copy, acknowledging my report to the 30th of June 1867, is pleased to express his "gratification" at its contents, "which were in every way satisfactory."

These words and from so high a source are very cheering, the more so as, I am most happy to say, I have no circumstances to bring under your notice on this occasion at all calculated to disturb the impressions arrived at by His Grace, or to weaken in any way the just conclusions he has been enabled to form relative to the working of the scheme of immigration in St. Vincent.

In fact, my present report might, with few exceptions, be a reiteration of its predecessor, and as I have therefore little more to do than submit the required schedules which explain themsleves, my remarks must be excused for coming before you in a very limited compass.

1. Visits to Estates.—In accordance with the instructions of the Act of 1857, I visited, in January and in the early part of last month, every estate on which immigrants are located.

The course I adopt, so that no point can be sheltered from investigation, is to summon the immigrants together, patiently to listen to what they have to say, and, if requisite, enquire into the facts of anything they may allege. I then visit their houses to ascertain their state, and afterwards inspect the official pay lists, the muster roll book, and the medical register.

On the part of the employers, not only have I found the various regulations legally maintained, but judiciously administered; and in a laudably conciliatory spirit. The people are happy and contented, and I cannot say that any matter which I could view as a complaint was brought by them to my attention.

Their health is good, and their earnings, unavoidably small on their arrival (from causes chiefly physical, and the consideration of the employers in gradually training them to their duties entailing upon the properties no inconsiderable expense, although not in the direct shape of wages), are increasing.

Most of the Newcastle people, who were puny and weak, have become robust, and their muscular development is in some instances remarkable.

They can now on many estates accomplish a day's task equivalent to that of the Native and trained laborer, and as a test of their becoming more inured to agricultural work, they are generally cultivating their provision grounds, which yield a remunerative return.

My duty brings me daily into contact with the questions to which I have alluded, and although they require surveillance, and circumstances occasionally will crop out demanding interposition, I consider I am a faithful exponent of the truth when I record as the conscientious summation of my views, that the scheme is proceeding with little interruption to its great objects, the promotion of our agricultural interests, and the physical and moral improvement and general happiness of a large body of people.

2. Schedule A.—Crime.—Amongst the body of immigrants only 12 have been sent to gaol, 11 of these cases are not of an aggravated description.

3. Schedule B.—Births.—The births will be found to be 10.

4. Schedule C.—Deaths.—The deaths, 12 in number, are 2 in excess of births. The man who committed suicide was considered on board the Newcastle, where he was subjected to a close insight, to be not always of sane mind.

The deaths are larger than usual in this healthy colony, but I fear it must be expected when a large batch of people arrived, as per Newcastle, culled amongst the castes where poverty and distress have been prevalent, that the seeds of disease and death are lurking in many, and notwithstanding all the care bestowed, a certain number must succumb in the first few months, and it really amounts to this that, whereas in their own land they would have met death surrounded by misery, they have passed away here their sufferings, and end soothed by care and attention.

4. Schedule D.—Portuguese and Africans.—Showing number under indenture.

5. Schedule E.—Showing the number of Indian immigrants under indenture, 31st December 1867, comparatively with those similarly placed on 30th June, and the earnings made in the last half-year.

6. In concluding this necessarily brief report, I have gratefully to acknowledge the consideration with which all instructions are issued to me by the executive Government, the prompt attention to my applications, and the kind assistance extended to me on all occasions.

The fifteen Indian immigrants shown per Return 30th June to have been indented to Plantation Peters Hope from 280 passed out of five years' indenture are at work there all well.

Total indented Immigrants at work, 31st December, 680 and 15 = 695, less 4 at work.

Wages—1st class labour 10d., 2nd class 5d., 3rd class 3d. (with houses, provision grounds, medical attendance, &c.); 2d. per hour for work over 9 hours or commuted task, and a corresponding deduction if due work is not performed.

These earnings are made in the first half-year; that 471 of the people have been at work, 473 were indented in last June. Upo mome properties where all were strangers, and no old coolies to set an example, next to nothing was done, and the employers gave them full time to recruit and get settled down. At Lot 14, where $21¼ has been earned, sugar-making extended over several months, and the people were chiefly employed at the mill-yard, and in the works where the work is light, and they can earn $26 by working after their hours.

At Pembroke, where $21¼ is contrasted by 9½, such was not the case, and the people suffered here much from sore-feet; a number for sometime seldom working for more than an hour to two hours per diem

From T. W. C. MURDOCH, Esq., to Sir F. ROGERS, Bart.,—dated 2nd May 1868.

I have to acknowledge your letter of 27th ultimo, with the copy of a despatch* from the Governor of the Windward Islands, enclosing the report† of the Immigration Agent of St. Vincent for the six months ending 30th December last.

* No. 521, dated 14th March.

† Dated 9th March.

2. This report is of a satisfactory character. The number of Indian immigrants under indenture on the 31st December last was 691, besides 4 not under indenture, and 216 women and 116 children, making a total of 1,027 Indians. The aggregate number of days on which labour was performed during the half-year was 57,800. The number of days absent from sickness or holidays was 24,284, and from idleness 9,009. The gross amount of earnings was $8,821, and the average individual earnings was 15¼ cents per day. The daily rate of wages was for 1st class labourers 10*d.*, for 2nd class 5*d.*, and for 3rd class 3*d.*, with houses, provision grounds, and medical attendance gratis: 2*d.* per hour is also paid for work over 9 hours.

3. There were 10 births and 12 deaths, including one suicide, during the half-year. This mortality is larger than that in the preceding half-year, when there was only one death. It is attributed to the new arrivals by the Newcastle, which vessel reached the colony on the 1st June last with 477 coolies from Calcutta, and it is notorious that the heaviest mortality occurs in the first 12 months after the introduction of the people during the progress of their acclimatization. The coolies by the Newcastle are said to have been weak and puny at the time of their arrival, but at the date of the report had become robust.

4. There were twelve committals to prison during the half-year, of which one was for arson, three for larceny, five for breach of contract, and the remaining three for petty offences.

5. Besides the coolies, there were 93 Africans and Portugues in the island, of whom 36 Africans and 16 Portuguese were under indenture.

6. The employers are said to have carried out the prescribed regulations in a conciliatory spirit, and the people to be in good health, happy, and contented.

7. The papers do not appear to call for any special remark from the Secretary of State.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

LEGISLATIVE.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 15th July 1868, and is hereby promulgated for general information:—

Act No. XVIII of 1868.

An Act for investing the Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner of the Neilgherry Hills with the powers of a Court of Small Causes.

Preamble.

Whereas it is expedient that the Commissioner and the Assistant Commissioner of the Neilgherry Hills appointed under the provisions of Madras Act No. I of 1868 (for the appointment of a Commissioner for the administration of Civil and Criminal justice and for the superintendence and collection of the revenues on the Neilgherry Hills) should be invested with the powers of a Court of Small Causes constituted under the provisions of Act No. XI of 1865 (to consolidate and amend the law relating to Courts of Small Causes beyond the limits of the ordinary original Civil jurisdiction of the High Courts of Judicature); it is hereby enacted as follows:—

Power to invest Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner of Neilgherry Hills with Small Cause jurisdiction.

1. The Governor of Fort St. George in Council may, by notification in the local official Gazette, authorize the said Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner to exercise jointly or separately within the territorial limits of the jurisdiction of the said Commissioner the powers of a Judge of a Court of Small Causes constituted under the provisions of the said Act No. XI of 1865; but subject to the rules hereinafter referred to.

Power to make rules.

2. The said Governor in Council may frame rules providing for the distribution of business between the said Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner in their capacity of Judges of a Court of Small Causes, and generally for defining their duties and relative positions when acting in such capacity, and may also from time to time alter and add to the rules so made: Provided that such rules, alterations and additions are consistent with the provisions of this Act.

Opinion of Commissioner to prevail in case of difference.

3. Whenever there is a difference of opinion between the said Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner sitting together as aforesaid upon any question of fact, law or practice, or upon any usage having the force of law, the opinion of the Commissioner shall prevail.

Pending suits.

4. Suits and proceedings pending before the Civil Judge at Ootacamund, in his capacity of a Judge of a Court of Small Causes, when this Act comes into operation, shall be heard and determined by the said Commissioner or Assistant Commissioner in accordance with the rules to be made under section 2.

Commencement of Act.

5. This Act shall come into operation on such day as the said Governor in Council shall notify in the said Gazette.

An Act to consolidate and amend the Law relating to Rent in Oudh.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to rent in Oudh and to other matters connected therewith; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

Short title and extent of Act.

1. This Act may be cited as "The Oudh Rent Act," and shall extend only to Oudh.

Repeal of laws, &c.

2. All laws, orders having the force of law and rules in force in Oudh, inconsistent with any of the provisions of this Act, are repealed.

Interpretation clause.

3. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context—

"Oudh."

"Oudh" means the territories under the administration of the Chief Commissioner of Oudh at the time of the passing of this Act:

"Court."

"Court" means any judicial officer presiding in a Court of revenue for the disposal of matters under this Act:

"Suit."

"Suit" means a suit under this Act:

"Assistant Commissioner."

"Assistant Commissioner" includes an Extra Assistant Commissioner:

"Land."

"Land" applies only to land assessed to the land-revenue, and includes land whereof the revenue has been assigned by Government: it also includes the ungathered produce of land, whether spontaneous or otherwise, and whether growing in earth or water:

"Revenue" means the money payable to the Government on account of land:

"Revenue."

"Rent" means the money or the portion of the produce of land, payable on account of the use or occupation of land, or on account of the use of water for irrigation:

"Rent."

"Proprietor" does not include an under-proprietor. Where there are two private rights of property, one superior and the other subordinate, in the same land, "proprietor" means the holder of the superior right only:

"Proprietor."

"Proprietary right" means a proprietor's right in land:

"Proprietary right."

"Under-proprietor" means any person possessing a heritable and transferable right of property in land for which he is liable to pay rent:

"Under-proprietor."

"Under-proprietary right" means an under-proprietor's right in land:

"Under-proprietary right."

"Tenant" means any person, not being an under-proprietor, who is liable to pay rent:

"Tenant."

"Landlord" means any person to whom an under-proprietor or tenant is liable to pay rent:

"Landlord."

"Representative" means an heir or any other person taking by operation of law or by will a beneficial interest in the property of a deceased person. It includes the guardian of a minor and the legal curator of a lunatic or idiot: and

"Representative."

"Lumberdár" means any person who has executed an engagement for the payment of the revenue to Government, or for the payment to a landlord of the rent due from under-proprietors holding a sub-settlement.

"Lumberdár."

4. Nothing in sections 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25 and 28 shall affect the terms of any agreement in writing heretofore or hereafter entered into respecting the subject-matter of the said sections respectively.

Saving of written agreements.

Nothing in the Index to this Act shall be deemed to have the force of law.

Index not to have force of law.

CHAPTER II.

OF CERTAIN RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF LANDLORDS, UNDER-PROPRIETORS AND TENANTS.

Right of Occupancy.

5. Tenants who have lost all proprietary right, whether superior or subordinate, in the lands which they hold or cultivate, shall, so long as they pay the rent payable for the same according to the provisions of this Act, have a right of occupancy under the following rule:—

Tenants having a right of occupancy.

Rule.

Every such tenant, who, within thirty years next before the thirteenth day of February 1856, has been, either by himself, or by himself and some other person from whom he has inherited, in possession as proprietor in a village or estate, shall be deemed to possess a heritable but not a transferable right of occupancy in the land which he cultivated or held in such village or estate on the twenty-fourth day of August 1866: Provided that such land has not come into his occupation, or the occupation of the person from whom he has inherited, for the first time since the said thirteenth day of February 1856: Provided also that no such tenant shall have a right of occupancy in any village or estate in which he or any co-sharer with him possesses any under-proprietary right.

Nothing contained in the former part of this section shall affect the terms of any agreement in writing hereafter entered into between a landlord and tenant.

6. If a tenant having a right of occupancy be ejected, in accordance with the provisions of section 41, from the land in which he possesses such right, he shall thereupon lose his right of occupancy in such land.

Loss of right of occupancy.

Tenants' Right to Leases.

7. Every tenant is entitled to receive from his landlord a lease executed by him and containing the following particulars:—

Tenant's right to a lease.

The quantity of land; and, where the fields comprised in the lease have been numbered in a Government survey, the number of each field:

The term for which the lease is granted:

The amount of rent payable:

The instalments in which and the times at which the same is to be paid:

Any special conditions of the lease:

And, if the rent is payable in kind, the proportion of produce to be delivered, and the time, manner and place of delivery.

8. Tenants having a right of occupancy are entitled to receive leases at rates of rent determined in accordance with the provisions contained in sections 32, 33 and 34.

Lease to which tenant having right of occupancy is entitled.

9. Tenants not having a right of occupancy are entitled to leases only on such terms as may be agreed on between them and the landlord.

Lease to which tenant not having right of occupancy is entitled.

Landlords' Right to Counterparts.

10. Every landlord who grants a lease is entitled to receive from the tenant a counterpart executed by him.

Landlord entitled to counterpart.

Cancelment of Leases.

11. When any landlord or any tenant not having a right of occupancy fails to perform or observe any of the stipulations contained in the lease, such lease shall be liable to be cancelled by a decree.

Cancelment of lease.

If after such decree, the ejectment of the tenant is postponed in accordance with the provisions of section 38, he shall be liable, so long as he remains in occupation of the land comprised in the lease, to pay the rent reserved thereby.

Arrears of Revenue or Rent.

What to be deemed an arrear of revenue or rent.

Provided that, unless the proprietor and under-proprietor shall have otherwise agreed in writing, the rent payable to the former by the latter shall be held to become due one month before the date fixed for the payment of the revenue on account of the village in which the land in respect of which such rent is payable is situate, and to be payable in the same number of instalments as the said revenue; and the amount of each instalment of such rent shall bear the same proportion to the whole of such rent payable for the year as the amount of each instalment of such revenue bears to the whole of such revenue payable for the year.

Receipts.

Receipts for rent.

13. Receipts for rent and acknowledgments of the tender of rent shall specify the year or years on account of which it has been paid or tendered; and any refusal to make such specification shall be held to be a withholding of a receipt or acknowledgment.

If such receipt or acknowledgment is withheld from any under-proprietor or tenant without sufficient cause, he may recover compensation from the landlord not exceeding the amount so paid or tendered.

Deposit of Revenue or Rent in Court without Suit.

Power to pay into Court, without suit brought, amount of revenue or rent due.

14. If any co-sharer, under-proprietor or tenant having a right of occupancy, or holding under an unexpired lease or under an agreement or decree shall, at the place where the revenue or rent of the land held or cultivated by him is usually payable, tender to the person authorized to receive the same payment of the full amount of such revenue or rent due in respect of such land, and if such amount is not accepted, and a receipt in full forthwith granted, it shall be lawful for the co-sharer, under-proprietor or tenant, without any suit having been instituted against him, to deposit such amount in Court to the credit of the person authorized to receive it.

Such deposit shall, so far as regards the co-sharer, under-proprietor or tenant and all persons claiming through or under him, operate as a payment then made to the lumberdár or landlord of the amount so deposited.

Procedure on making and withdrawing such payment.

15. The Court shall receive such deposit on the written application of the co-sharer, under-proprietor or tenant or his recognized agent: the application shall bear a stamp of eight annas; and on such co-sharer, under-proprietor, tenant or agent, making a declaration in the form set forth in Schedule A hereto annexed, or as near thereto as circumstances will admit, the Court shall give him a receipt for the deposit.

Such declaration shall be verified in the manner prescribed for the verification of plaints in the Code of Civil Procedure, and the provisions of section 24 of the said Code shall apply to the person making the verification.

Upon receiving the money so deposited, the Court shall issue to the person to whose credit it has been deposited a notice in the form set forth in Schedule B hereto annexed.

Service of notice.

Such notice shall be served by the proper officer without the payment of any fee upon the person to whom it is addressed or upon his recognized agent.

In the absence of any such agent, it may be served by putting up a copy of the same at the Court-house, and another copy at the ordinary place of residence within the jurisdiction of the Court of such person, or if there be no such place, at the place where the revenue or rent is usually paid to the lumberdár or landlord, as the case may be, for the land in respect of which the money has been deposited.

If the person on whom such notice is served or his recognized agent appears and applies that the money in deposit be paid to him, it shall immediately be paid accordingly.

Limitation of suits for balance of revenue or rent.

16. Whenever a deposit has been made under the provisions of this Act, no suit shall be brought against the depositor or his representative on account of any revenue or rent which accrued due in respect of the land last hereinbefore mentioned prior to the date of the deposit, unless such suit is instituted within six months from the date of the service of the notice mentioned in section 15.

Compensation for non-acceptance of revenue or rent.

17. If, at the time of passing the decision in any such suit, the Court is satisfied that the full amount of revenue or rent due at the time of the deposit was tendered to, and was not accepted by, the lumberdár or landlord or his recognized agent, as the case may be, or that a receipt or acknowledgment was withheld for such amount without sufficient cause, the Court may award to such depositor compensation from the lumberdár or landlord, not exceeding the amount so paid or tendered.

If the Court be satisfied that the amount of the deposit was less than the amount of revenue or rent due, the Court shall pay the amount of the deposit to the lumberdár or landlord, and shall make a decree for the balance due by the depositor.

Illegal Enforcement of Payment of Rent.

Compensation to under-proprietor or tenant for illegal enforcement of payment.

18. If payment of rent or of any sum in excess of the rent legally claimable is illegally enforced, and any under-proprietor or tenant institutes a suit to recover compensation for such enforcement, the Court may award to him compensation not exceeding the sum of Rupees two hundred, in addition to any amount for which it makes a decree in respect of such payment.

An award of compensation under the former part of this section shall not bar any prosecution to which the person enforcing such payment may be liable under any law for the time being in force.

Abatement of Rent.

Suits for abatement of rent by under-proprietor or tenant.

19. No suit for an abatement of rent shall be brought by any under-proprietor or tenant, except on the ground that the area of the land has been diminished by diluvion, or on some ground specified in any lease, agreement or decree under which he holds:

Provided that, if the under-proprietor hold a sub-settlement in a revenue-paying estate, no such abatement shall be allowed to the under-proprietor unless a remission of revenue has been allowed on the same ground and by competent authority in the same estate.

Remission of Rent.

When Court may allow remission from rent.

20. Notwithstanding anything contained in sections 19, 35 and 36, the Court, in making a decree for an arrear of rent, may allow such remission from the rent payable by any under-proprietor or tenant as appears equitable, if the area of the land in his occupation has been diminished by diluvion or otherwise, or if the produce of such land has been diminished by drought or hail, or other calamity beyond his control, to such an extent that the full amount of rent payable by him cannot, in the opinion of the Court, be equitably decreed:

Provided that, if the under-proprietor hold a sub-settlement, or if the tenant hold a lease for a term of not less than five years or have a right of occupancy in a revenue-paying estate, no such remission shall be allowed to him unless a remission of revenue shall have been allowed on the same ground and by competent authority in the same estate.

Relinquishment of Land.

Relinquishment of land by tenant.

21. Every tenant shall continue liable for the rent of the land in his holding, unless on or before the fifteenth day of May in any year he gives notice to the landlord or his recognized agent of his desire to relinquish such land, and relinquishes it accordingly, or unless it has been let to any other person by such landlord or agent.

If the landlord or his recognized agent refuse to receive such notice, the tenant may apply to the tahsíldár or proper officer, and written notice of such desire shall thereupon be served on such landlord or agent, and the tenant shall pay the costs of service.

The notice shall, if practicable, be served personally on the landlord or agent. But if he cannot be found, service may be made by affixing the notice at his usual place of residence, or, if he does not reside in the district wherein the land is situate, at the chaupál or other conspicuous place in the village wherein the land is situate.

Compensation for Tenants' Improvements.

Tenants' right to compensation for improvements.

22. If any tenant, or the person from whom he has inherited, make any such improvements on the land in his occupation as are hereinafter mentioned, the rent payable by him or his representative shall not be enhanced, nor shall he or his representative be ejected from the same land unless and until he or his representative, as the case may be, has received compensation for the outlay, in money or labour, or both, expended in making such improvements, by him, or the person from whom he has inherited, or whom he represents, within thirty years next before the date of such enhancement or ejectment.

"Improvements" defined.

23. The word "improvements," as used in section 22, means works by which the annual letting value of the land has been, and, at the time of demanding compensation continues to be, increased, and comprises—

1*st.*—The construction of works for the storage of water, for the supply of water for agricultural purposes, for drainage, and for protection against floods; the construction of wells; the reclaiming and clearing of waste lands and jungles; and other works of a like nature;

2*nd.*—The renewal or reconstruction of any of the foregoing works, or such alterations therein or additions thereto, as are not required for maintaining the same, and which increase durably their value.

Compensation how made.

Such compensation may, at the option of the landlord or his representative, be made—

(1.)—By payment in money;

(2.)—By the grant of a beneficial lease of the land by the landlord or his representative to the tenant or his representative; or

(3.)—Partly by payment in money and partly by the grant of such lease as aforesaid.

Provision for difference as to amount or value of compensation.

25. In case of difference as to the amount or value of the compensation tendered, either party may present an application to the Court, on a paper bearing a stamp of eight annas, stating the matter in dispute and requesting a determination thereof.

On receiving such application the Court shall cause notice thereof to be served on the other party, and, after taking such evidence as the parties or either of them may adduce, and after such further enquiry (if any) as it may deem necessary, determine (as the case may be) the amount of the payment or the terms of the lease or both.

In determining such amount, the Court shall take into account any assistance given by the landlord, either directly in money, material or labour at the time of making such improvements, or indirectly by subsequently allowing the tenant to hold at a rate of rent more favourable than the rate at which he otherwise would have held.

The proceedings on any such application shall be deemed to be a suit for the purposes of chapter six (as to reference to arbitration) of the Code of Civil Procedure, and of section nine of Act No. XXIII of 1861, (to amend Act VIII of 1859.

Tender of lease for twenty years to bar right to compensation for improvements.

26. If in any case a landlord tenders to a tenant a lease of the land in his occupation, for a term of not less than twenty years from the date of the tender, at the annual rent then paid by the tenant, or at such other annual rent as may be agreed upon, such tender, if accepted by the tenant, shall bar any claim by him or his representative in respect of improvements previously made on such land by the tenant or the person from whom he has inherited.

Survey and Measurement.

Landlord's right to enter and measure lands.

27. Every landlord, his agents and surveyors, may at all reasonable times enter upon any land comprised in his estate for the purpose of surveying and measuring the same.

CHAPTER III.

COMMUTATION AND PAYMENT OF RENT IN KIND.

Commutation of rents in kind.

In any district in which a settlement of revenue is in progress, it shall be in the discretion of any officer employed in making or revising such settlement, in any case in which the rent of a tenant having a right of occupancy is paid in kind, or by the estimated value of a portion of the crop, to commute, on the application either of the landlord or the tenant, such rent into a rent in money.

The amount of rent thus fixed shall be binding upon the parties concerned.

All decisions already passed by any such officer, commuting rents in kind or by valuation to rents in money, shall, subject to the same appeal as is given by this Act in respect of decisions passed in suits, be binding on the parties concerned.

Chief Commissioner may extend section 28, and declare officers to hear and decide cases thereunder.

29. The Chief Commissioner of Oudh may extend the provisions of section 28 to any district or portion of a district in which a settlement of revenue is not in progress; and may declare what officers are empowered to hear and decide cases under this section;

and may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General of India in Council, make rules for the guidance of officers acting under this section and section 28, and from time to time, with the like sanction, alter and add to the rules so made:

Provided that such rules, alterations and additions are consistent with this Act.

Division or appraisement of produce taken for rent.

30. Wherever rent is taken by division of the produce in kind, or by estimate or appraisement of the standing crop or other procedure of a similar nature requiring the presence both of the tenant and landlord either personally or by a recognized agent, if either party neglect to be present at the proper period, or if a dispute arise between the parties regarding such division, estimate, or appraisement, either party may present an application to the Court on a paper bearing a stamp of eight annas, requesting that a proper officer be deputed to make the division, estimate, or appraisement.

Procedure in case of dispute.

31. On receiving such application, the Court shall issue a written notice to the other party to attend on the date and at the place specified in the notice, and shall depute an officer before whom the division, estimate or appraisement shall be made.

The award of such officer in respect of such division, estimate or appraisement shall be final, unless within one month from the date thereof, either party institutes a suit to set it aside.

CHAPTER IV.

ENHANCEMENT AND FIXING RATES OF RENT.

A.—Tenants with Right of Occupancy.

Enhancement of rent of tenant with right of occupancy.

32. No tenant having a right of occupancy in any land shall, in case of dispute as to the rent to be paid in respect of such land, be liable to an enhancement of the rent except in pursuance of a decree made under this Act on some one of the following grounds (that is say):—

1st Ground.—That the rate of rent paid by him is below the rate of rent usually paid by the same class of tenants having a right of occupancy for land of a similar description, and with similar advantages, situate in the same village.

Rule.—In this case the Court shall enhance his rent to such amount as the plaintiff demands, not exceeding such rate.

2nd Ground.—That the rate of rent paid by him is more than 12½ per cent. below the rate of rent usually paid by tenants of the same class not having a right of occupancy for land of a similar description, and with similar advantages, situate in the same village.

Rule.—In this case the Court shall enhance his rent to such amount as the plaintiff demands, not exceeding such rate less 12½ per cent.

3rd Ground.—That the quantity of land held by him exceeds the quantity for which he has previously paid rent.

Rule.—In this case the Court shall decree rent for the land in excess at rates to be fixed by the first or the second of the Rules contained in this section, as the case may be.

Nothing contained in the previous part of this section shall affect the terms of any agreement in writing hereafter entered into between a landlord and tenant.

Term for re-enhancement, after decision fixing rent under section 32.

in the case referred to in section 34, until by re-assessment, within the said term of five years, the revenue of such land has been increased.

Enhancement on re-assessment of revenue.

34. On such re-assessment, if the rent of such tenant cannot be enhanced under section 32, by reason of the absence of the grounds therein mentioned, the landlord may institute a suit to enhance the rent to a sum not exceeding double the average amount of the revenue imposed at such re-assessment upon land of a similar description and with similar advantages, held by tenants of the same class in the same village.

B.—Tenants not having Right of Occupancy.

Court not to enquire into propriety of rate of rent payable by tenant not having right of occupancy.

35. The Court shall in no case enquire into the propriety of the rate of rent payable by a tenant not having a right of occupancy.

The rent payable by such tenant for any land in his occupation shall be such amount as may be agreed upon between him and the landlord; or, if no such agreement has been made, such amount as was payable for the land in the last preceding year.

Suits in which there is evidence in writing of agreement to alter rent.

36. If in any suit between a landlord and a tenant not having a right of occupancy, the amount of rent payable by such tenant shall be disputed, he shall not be held liable to pay rent other than that payable by him for the last preceding year, unless the Court is satisfied by evidence in writing that the parties have agreed that the rent so payable shall be altered.

CHAPTER V.

EJECTMENT.

General Provisions.

Grounds on which tenant may contest liability to ejectment.

37. A tenant may contest his liability to be ejected from the land which he holds on any of the following grounds:—

First.—That he holds a lease or an agreement, or a decree of Court, under the terms of which he is not liable to such ejectment:

Second.—That he has a right of occupancy in the land:

Third.—And if he be a tenant not having a right of occupancy, that notice of ejectment has not been served upon him in manner provided by section 43.

Time of ejectment of tenant.

38. No tenant, except a sub-lessor, shall in any case, whether in execution of a decree or otherwise, be ejected from the land in his occupancy, except between the first day of April and the fifteenth day of June in any year after the passing of this Act; unless while his rent is in arrear, he has failed to cultivate the land in his possession in accordance with the terms on which he holds it.

Time of ejectment of sub-lessor.

39. A sub-lessor liable to be ejected under the provisions of this Act may be ejected at any time during his tenancy.

Ejectment for arrears of rent.

40. Any tenant, other than a sub-lessor, from whom an arrear of rent remains due on the fifteenth day of May in any year after the passing of this Act, and any sub-lessor from whom an arrear of rent remains due at any time during his tenancy may, subject to the provisions of sections 38, 39 and 41, be ejected from the land in respect of which the arrear is due.

Tenant with Right of Occupancy.

Ejectment of tenant having a right of occupancy.

41. No tenant having a right of occupancy, or holding under an unexpired lease, or special agreement, or decree of Court, shall be ejected otherwise than in execution of a decree for ejectment.

Provided that if the tenant have a right of occupancy in the land from which the landlord desires to eject him, the decree shall not be made unless at the date of the decree a decree against such tenant for an arrear of rent in respect of such land has remained unsatisfied for fifteen days or upwards.

Tenant without Right of Occupancy.

Ejectment of tenant not having a right of occupancy.

42. A tenant not having a right of occupancy and not holding under an unexpired lease or an agreement or a decree of Court, may be ejected in accordance with the provisions of this Act; first, in execution of a decree for arrears of rent or for ejectment; or second, by notice given by his landlord in the manner described in section 43.

Notice.

Notice of ejectment of tenant not having right of occupancy.

43. The notice mentioned in section 42 shall be written in Hindí and in Urdu: it shall specify the land from which the tenant is to be ejected; and it shall inform him that if he means to dispute the ejectment, he must institute a suit for that purpose on or before the fifteenth day of May next after the service of the notice, or vacate the land on or before that date.

Service of Notice.

On the application of the landlord to the Tahsíldár, or officer authorized to serve such notices, the notice shall be served by such officer on or before the fifteenth day of April in each year, and the landlord shall pay the costs of service.

The notice shall, if practicable, be served personally on the tenant. But if he cannot be found, service may be made by affixing the notice at his usual place of residence, or, if he does not reside in the district wherein the land is situate, at the village chaupál or other conspicuous place in the village wherein the land is situate.

Cessation of Tenancy.

If notice is not contested, tenancy to be held to cease.

Assistance to eject.

When assistance to eject may be given by Court.

45. If no such suit be brought, and the landlord require the assistance of the Court to eject any person whose tenancy is alleged to have ceased under the provisions of section 44, he may apply for such assistance, and if the Court is satisfied that notice of ejectment was duly served on such person, it shall give such assistance accordingly:

Provided that nothing done by the Court under the previous part of this section shall affect the right of any tenant to institute a suit against his landlord on account of illegal ejectment and to recover compensation for the same.

Growing Crops.

Compensation to ejected tenant for growing crops.

46. Any tenant ejected in accordance with the provisions of this Act, shall be entitled to receive from the landlord the value of any growing crops or other ungathered products of the earth belonging to such tenant, and being on the land at the time of his ejectment:

Provided that if the land shall have been sown or planted by the tenant after the service on him of the notice mentioned in section 42, he shall not be so entitled unless, after such service, the landlord has expressly authorized him to continue to occupy the land.

CHAPTER VI.

DISTRESS FOR ARREARS OF RENT.

Recovery of arrears of rent by distress.

47. When an arrear of rent is due from any tenant, the landlord may distrain the produce of the land in respect of which the arrear is due, subject to the rules contained in the following sections:

Proviso as to tenants who have given security for payment of rent

Provided that when a tenant has given security for the payment of his rent, the produce of the land in respect of which such rent is payable, shall not be liable to distress so long as the security is in force.

No distress in certain cases.

48. Distress shall not be made for any arrear which has been due for a longer period than one year; nor for the recovery of any sum in excess of the rent payable in the last preceding year for the land in respect of which the arrear is due, unless the tenant has agreed in writing to pay such excess, or unless he has been declared to be liable for the same by a decree of Court.

Power of distress by whom exercisable.

49. The power of distress, vested by section 47 in landlords, may be exercised by managers under the Court of Wards, managing agents and tahsildárs of estates held under khám management, and other persons lawfully entrusted with the charge of land, and also by the agents employed by landlords or any such persons as aforesaid in the collection of rent if expressly authorized by power of attorney to distrain:

Liability of principal of agent.

Provided that, if any such agent, purporting to act in the exercise of the said power, commits an act, which, under the provisions of this chapter, is illegal, the person employing such agent shall be liable, as well as the agent, to be sued for compensation for any injury caused by such act.

Distress by servants.

50. Any person empowered to distrain property under section 47 or 49, may employ a servant or other person to make the distress; but in every such case he shall give to such servant or person a written authority for the same, and the distress shall be made in the name and on the responsibility of the person giving such authority.

Crops liable to distress.

51. Standing crops and other ungathered products of the earth, and crops or other products when reaped or gathered and deposited in any threshing-floor or place for treading out grain or the like, whether in the field or within a homestead, may be distrained by persons invested with powers of distress under this Act.

But no such crops or products, other than the produce of the land in respect of which an arrear of rent is due, or of land held under the same agreement, as the land in respect of which the arrear is due, and no grain or other produce after it has been stored by the cultivator, and no other property whatsoever, shall be liable to distress under this Act.

Demand of arrear before or at time of distress.

52. Before or at the time when any distress is made under this Act, the distrainer shall cause the defaulter to be served with a written demand for the amount of the arrear, together with an account exhibiting the grounds on which the demand is made.

The demand and account shall, if practicable, be served personally on the defaulter, but if he cannot be found, they shall be affixed at his usual place of residence, and shall thereupon be deemed to be duly served upon him.

Value of distress.

53. Unless the amount of the demand is immediately paid or tendered, the distrainer may distrain property as aforesaid of value as nearly as may be equal to the amount of the arrear with the costs of the distress; and shall prepare a list or description of the said property, and deliver a copy of the same to the owner, or if he be absent, affix it at his usual place of residence.

Service of list of property to be distrained.

Reaping and storing standing crops when distrained.

If the tenant neglect to do so, the distrainer may cause the said crops or products to be reaped or gathered, and, in such case, shall store the same either in such granaries or other places as aforesaid, or in some other convenient place in the neighbourhood.

In either case, the distrained property shall be placed in the charge of some proper person appointed by the distrainer for the purpose.

If the crops or products do not, from their nature, admit of being stored, the distress shall be made (if at all) at least twenty days before the time when the crops or products or any part thereof would ordinarily be fit for cutting or gathering.

Application by distrainer in case of resistance.

55. If a distrainer is opposed, or apprehends resistance, and desires to obtain the assistance of a public officer, he may apply to the Court, and the Court may, if it think necessary, depute an officer to assist the distrainer in making the distress.

Withdrawal of distress on tender of arrear and costs.

56. If at any time after property has been distrained as aforesaid, and before the sale thereof as hereinafter provided, the owner tenders payment of the arrear demanded and of the costs of the distress, the distrainer shall receive the same, and give a receipt therefor, and shall forthwith withdraw the distress.

Application for sale.

57. Within five days from the time of storing any distrained crops or products, or if such crops or products do not, from their nature, admit of being stored, within five days from the time of making the distress, the distrainer shall apply for sale of the same to the proper officer authorized to sell property in satisfaction of decrees of the Court within whose jurisdiction the distrained property is situate.

Form of application.

58. The application shall be in writing: it shall contain a list or description of the property distrained, and it shall state the name of the defaulter, his place of residence, the amount due, and the place in which the distrained property is deposited.

Together with the application, the distrainer shall deliver to the proper officer the sum payable for the service of a notice upon the defaulter as hereinafter provided.

Procedure on receipt of application.

59. Immediately on receipt of the application, the proper officer shall send a copy of it to the Court, and shall serve a notice in the form contained in Schedule C hereto annexed or to the like effect on the person whose property has been distrained, requiring him either to pay the amount demanded, or within fifteen days from the receipt of the notice, to institute a suit to contest the demand.

The officer shall at the same time send to the Court, for the purpose of being put up at the Court-house, a proclamation fixing a day for the sale of the distrained property, not less than twenty days from the date of the proclamation: and shall deliver a copy of the proclamation to the peon charged with the service of the notice, to be put up by him in the place where the distrained property is deposited.

The proclamation shall contain a description of the property, and shall specify the demand for which it is sold and the place where the sale is to be held.

Suspension of sale on institution of suit.

60. If a suit is instituted in pursuance of the aforesaid notice, the Court shall send to the proper officer, or, if so requested by the owner of the distrained property, shall deliver to him, a certificate of the institution of the suit.

On such certificate being received by, or presented to, the proper officer, he shall suspend proceedings in regard to the sale:

Provided that if, in his opinion the property distrained is such that delay will cause damage thereto, he may direct its immediate sale.

Suit to contest distrainer's demand.

61. Any person whose property has been distrained as aforesaid, may institute a suit to contest the distrainer's demand at any time before the expiration of the fifteen days mentioned in section 59.

When such suit is instituted, the Court shall proceed in the manner prescribed in section 60.

If application for the sale of the property is afterwards made to the proper officer, he shall send a copy of the application to the Court, and suspend further proceedings pending the decision of the case.

Withdrawal of distress on execution of bond.

62. The person whose property has been distrained may, at the time of instituting any such suit as aforesaid, or at any subsequent period, execute a bond with one or more surety or sureties, for an amount not less than double the value of the property so distrained, binding himself to pay whatever sum may be adjudged to be due from him with costs of suit.

When such bond is executed, the Court shall give to the owner of the property a certificate to that effect, or, if he so requests, shall serve the distrainer with notice of the same.

Upon such certificate being presented to the distrainer by the owner of the property, or served on him by order of the Court, the property shall be released from distress.

Proceeding with sale, if, on expiration of time fixed, no suit is instituted.

63. On the expiration of the period fixed in the proclamation of sale, if the institution of a suit to contest the demand of the distrainer has not been certified to the proper officer in the manner hereinbefore provided, he shall, unless the said demand, with such costs of the distress as are allowed by him, be discharged in full, proceed, with the sanction of the Court, to sell the property, or such part thereof as may be necessary.

Place and manner of sale.

64. The sale shall be held at the place where the distrained property is deposited, or at the nearest ganj, bázár or other place of public resort, if the proper officer thinks that it is likely to sell there to better advantage.

The property shall be sold by public auction in one or more lots as the officer holding the sale thinks advisable; and if the demand, with the costs of distress and sale, be satisfied by the sale of a portion of the property, the distress shall be immediately withdrawn with respect to the remainder.

Postponement of sale where fair price is not offered.

65. If on the property being put up for sale, a price which the officer holding the sale shall think fair be not offered, and if the owner of the property or his recognized agent apply to have the sale postponed until the next day or (if a market be held at the place of sale) until the next market-day, the sale shall be postponed until such day, and shall be then completed at whatever price may be offered.

Payment of purchase money.

66. The price of every lot shall be paid in ready money at the time of sale, or as soon thereafter as the officer holding the sale thinks fit; and in default of such payment, the property shall be put up again and resold.

When the purchase-money has been paid in full, the officer holding the sale shall give the purchaser a certificate stating the property purchased by him and the price paid therefor.

Proceeds of sale.

67. The officer holding the sale shall deduct from the proceeds one anna for every rupee and fraction of a rupee, on account of the expenses attending the sale.

He shall then pay to the distrainer the expenses incurred by him on account of the distress and of the issue of the notice and proclamation of sale prescribed in section 59, to such amount as, after examination of the statement of expenses furnished by the distrainer, the officer thinks proper to allow.

The remainder shall be applied to the discharge of the arrear for which the distress was made, and the surplus (if any) shall be delivered to the person whose property has been sold.

Officers holding sales not to purchase.

68. Officers holding sales of property under this Act, and all persons employed by, or subordinate to, such officers, are forbidden to purchase, either directly or indirectly, property sold by such officers.

Illegal acts of distrainer to be reported.

69. The officer mentioned in section 57 shall bring to the notice of the Court any illegal act which shall come to his knowledge as having been committed by any person in making a distress under this Act.

If in any case, on proceeding to hold a sale under this Act, such officer finds that the owner has not received due notice of the distress and intended sale, he shall postpone the sale and report the case to the Court, and the Court shall direct the issue of another notice and proclamation of sale under section 59, or make such other order as it thinks proper.

Recovery of expenses if no sale takes place.

70. When such officer has gone to any place for the purpose of holding a sale, and no sale takes place, either for the reason stated in section 69, or because the distrainer's demand has been previously satisfied, the said charge on account of expenses attending the sale shall be leviable by the officer, and shall be calculated on the value of the distrained property, as estimated by him, unless the distrainer's demand has been satisfied before the day fixed for the sale, and notice of such satisfaction has been given by him to the officer.

If the distrainer's demand be not satisfied until the day fixed for the sale, the charge shall be paid by the owner of the property, and may be recovered by sale of such portion thereof as may be necessary.

In every other case the charge shall be paid by the distrainer, and may be recovered under the warrant of the Court by attachment and sale of his property:

Provided that in no case shall an amount exceeding ten rupees be recoverable under this section.

Second proclamation of sale when arrears are adjudged to be due.

71. When a suit has been instituted to contest a distrainer's demand, and the property has not been released on security, if the demand or any portion of it shall be adjudged to be due, the Court shall issue an order to the proper officer authorizing the sale of the property.

On the application of the distrainer (which shall be made within five days from the receipt of such order by such officer), such officer shall publish a second proclamation in the manner prescribed in section 59, fixing another day for the sale of the distrained property, not less than five nor more than ten days from the date of the proclamation; and, unless the amount adjudged to be due with costs of distress be paid immediaely, shall proceed to sell the property in the manner hereinbefore provided.

Distrainer to prove the arrear in suits to contest his demand.

72. In all suits instituted to contest a distrainer's demand the defendant must prove the arrear in the same manner as if he had himself brought a suit for the amount under the foregoing provisions of this Act.

If the demand or any part thereof is found to be due, the Court shall make a decree for the amount in favour of the distrainer.

Such amount may be recovered by sale of the distrained property as provided in section 71, and if the distress has not been withdrawn, and if any balance remain due after such sale, by execution of the decree against the person and any other property of the defaulter, or if the distrained property have been released on security, by execution of the decree against the person and property of the defaulter, and, if his surety has been made a party to the suit, against the person and property of such surety.

Compensation for vexatious distress.

73. If the distress is adjudged to be vexatious or groundless, the Court, besides directing the release of the distrained property, may award such compensation to the plaintiff as it thinks fit, not exceeding twice the value of the property distrained.

Suit by third party claiming property distrained.

74. If any person claims, as his own, property which has been distrained for arrears of rent alleged to be due from any other person, the claimant may institute a suit against the distrainer and such other person to try the right to the property, in the same manner and under the same rules as to the time of instituting the suit and as to the consequent postponement of sale, as a person whose property has been distrained for an arrear of rent alleged to be due from him, may institute a suit to contest the demand.

Release on giving security.

75. When any such suit is instituted, the property may be released upon security for its value being given to the satisfaction of the Court.

Order if claim dismissed.

If the claim is dismissed, the Court shall make an order in favour of the distrainer for the sale of the property or the recovery of its value, as the case may be.

Compensation for distress of stranger's property.

If the claim is upheld, the Court shall order the release of the distrained property, and may award such compensation as it thinks fit, not exceeding twice the value of the property distrained.

Landlord's prior claim to distrainable produce in possession of defaulting tenant.

76. No claim to any produce of land liable to distress under this Act, and found at the time of the distress in the possession of a defaulting tenant, whether such claim be in respect of a previous sale, mortgage, or otherwise, shall bar the landlord's prior claim, nor shall any attachment in execution of a decree of any civil Court prevail against such claim.

Stranger claiming to be landlord and to have right of distress to be made a party.

77. Whenever property has been distrained for an arrear of rent, and a suit has been instituted to contest the demand, and the right to distrain for such arrear is claimed by or on behalf of any person other than the distrainer, on the ground of such other person being actually and in good faith in the receipt and enjoyment of the rent of the land, such other person shall be made a party to the suit, and the question of the actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent by him before and up to the commencement of the suit, shall be enquired into, and the suit shall be decided according to the result of such inquiry:

Provided that the decision of the Court shall not affect the right of any person having a title to the rent of the land, to establish such title in a Court of competent jurisdiction, by suit instituted within one year from the date of the decision.

Suit for illegal distress.

78. Any person whose property has been distrained for the recovery of a demand not justly due, or of a demand due or alleged to be due from some other person, and who is prevented by any sufficient cause from bringing a suit to contest the demand or try the right to the property, as the case may be, within the period allowed by sections 59 and 74, and whose property is in consequence brought to sale, may institute a suit to recover compensation for any injury which he has sustained from the distress or sale.

Suit for illegal act of distrainer.

79. If any person empowered to distrain property, or employed for the purpose under a written authority by a person so empowered, distrains or sells any property for the recovery of an arrear of rent alleged to be due otherwise than according to the provisions of this Act, or if any distrained property is lost, damaged or destroyed, by reason of the distrainer not having taken proper precaution for the due keeping and preservation thereof, or if the distress is not immediately withdrawn when any provision of this Act requires such withdrawal, the owner of the property may institute a suit to recover compensation for any injury which he has thereby sustained.

Suit for distress or sale falsely purporting to be under this Act.

80. If any person not empowered by this Act to distrain or sell, nor duly authorized for that purpose by a person so empowered, purports to distrain or sell any property under this Act, the owner of such property may institute a suit to recover compensation from the person so distraining or selling for any injury which the plaintiff has sustained from the distress or sale.

Such suit shall not affect the defendant's liability to be prosecuted under any law for the time being in force.

Procedure in case of resistance to distress.

81. If any person resists a distress of property duly made under this Act, or forcibly or clandestinely removes any distrained property, the Court, upon complaint being made within ten days from the date of such resistance or removal, shall cause the person accused to be arrested and brought before the Court with all convenient speed, and the Court shall proceed forthwith to try the case.

If the case cannot be at once heard and determined, the Court may, if it think fit, require the party arrested to give security for his person, whenever the same may be required, and, in default of such security, may commit him to the civil jail until the case is tried.

Punishment of offender.

82. If such resistance or removal of property be proved, the Court may order the offender to pay a fine not exceeding one hundred rupees, together with all costs and expenses incurred in the case or in making the distress, and, in default of payment, may order him to be imprisoned in the civil jail until payment is made: Provided that no such imprisonment shall continue for more than six months.

CHAPTER VII.

JURISDICTION OF THE COURTS.

Suits cognizable.

Suits cognizable under this Act.

83. The Courts of Revenue in Oudh shall take cognizance of the following descriptions of suits, and such suits shall be heard and determined in the said Courts in the manner provided in this Act, and not otherwise:—

A.—Suits by a Landlord.

(1).—For the delivery by a tenant of the counterpart of a lease under section 9;

(2).—For arrears of rent;

(3).—For the enhancement of the rent of a tenant having a right of occupancy;

(4).—For the ejectment of a tenant or for cancelling any lease on account of the non-payment of arrears of rent, or on account of a breach of the conditions of such lease;

(5).—Suits by landlords against patwáris or agents employed by landlords in the management of land or the collection of revenue or rent, or against the sureties of such patwáris or agents for money received or accounts kept by such patwáris or agents in the course of such employment, or for papers in their possession, or for the rendering and settlement of accounts.

B.—Suits by an Under-proprietor or a Tenant.

(6).—For establishing a right of occupancy;

(7).—For the delivery by a landlord of a lease;

(8).—For contesting a notice of ejectment;

(9).—For compensation—

on account of illegal enforcement of payment of rent, or of any sum in excess of rent due, or on account of the refusal of receipts or acknowledgments for rent paid or tendered,

or on account of illegal ejectment,

or on account of the value of standing crops under section 46;

(10).—For the recovery of the occupancy of any land from which an under-proprietor or tenant has been illegally ejected by the landlord;

(11).—For contesting the exercise of the power of distraint conferred on landlords and others by this Act, or any acts purporting to be done in exercise of the said power, or for compensation for illegal distraint;

(12).—For abatement of rent in accordance with the provisions of section 19;

(13).—For the recovery of compensation for improvements in accordance with the provisions of section 22.

C.—Suits regarding the Division or Appraisement of Produce.

(14).—Suits under section 31, regarding the division, estimate, or appraisement of the produce of land.

D.—Suits by, and against, Lumberdárs, Co-sharers and Muáfídárs.

(15).—Suits by a sharer against a lumberdár or co-sharer for share of the profits of an estate, or any part thereof, or for the rendering and settlement of accounts in respect of such profits;

(16).—Suits by a lumberdár or pattídár who is entitled to collect the rents of the pattí, for arrears of revenue or rent payable through him by the co-sharers whom he represents, and by a lumberdár for village-expenses and other dues for which the co-sharers may be responsible to him, or against a joint lumberdár for compensation for revenue or rent paid by such lumberdár on account of such joint lumberdár;

(17).—Suits by co-sharers against lumberdárs, or by proprietors or lessees against muáfídárs or assignees of revenue, for compensation on account of exaction in excess of revenue or rent, or on account of the refusal of receipts or acknowledgments for revenue or rent paid or tendered;

(18).—Suits by muáfídárs or assignees of revenue for arrears of revenue.

Grades of Courts.

Grades of Courts for the purposes of this Act.

84. For the purposes of this Act, the Courts of Revenue shall consist of six grades of Courts, namely—

(1).—The Court of the Assistant Collector of the second class;

(2).—The Court of the Assistant Collector of the first class;

(3).—The Court of the Deputy Collector;

(4).—The Court of the Collector;

(5).—The Court of the Commissioner;

(6).—The Court of the Financial Commissioner.

Chief Commissioner may declare grade of Tahsíldár or Assistant Commissioner.

85. Subject to any orders that may from time to time be issued by the Governor General in Council, the Chief Commissioner of Oudh shall have power to declare to which of the first three grades any Assistant Commissioner shall belong, and to invest any Tahsíldár with the powers of any of the same grades.

Deputy Commissioner to have Collector's powers.

86. The Deputy Commissioner shall exercise the powers of a Collector under this Act.

Settlement officers may be invested with powers of Collector, &c., under this Act.

87. Subject to any orders in this behalf that may from time to time be made by the Governor General of India in Council, the Chief Commissioner of Oudh may invest any officer employed in making or revising settlements of revenue with all or any of the powers of a Collector, or Deputy Collector, or Assistant Collector, under this Act.

Jurisdiction of Assistant Collector of the second class.

88. The Court of the Assistant Collector of the second class shall have power to try and determine suits of the descriptions mentioned in clauses 1, 2, 7, 12, 15, 16, 17 and 18 of section 83, of which the subject-matter does not exceed one hundred rupees in value or amount.

Jurisdiction of Assistant Collector of the first class.

89. The Court of the Assistant Collector of the first class shall have power to try and determine suits of the descriptions referred to in the last preceding section of which the subject-matter does not exceed five hundred rupees in value or amount.

Jurisdiction of Deputy Collector.

90. The Court of the Deputy Collector shall have power to try and determine suits of every description of which the subject-matter does not exceed five thousand rupees in value or amount.

Jurisdiction of Collector.

91. The Court of the Collector shall have power to try and determine suits of every description and of any amount, and to hear appeals from the decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the Code of Civil Procedure as applied by this Act) from the orders of the Assistant Collectors, and, in suits under clauses 2, 5, 9, 11, 14, 15, 16, 17, and 18 of section 83, from such decisions and orders of the Deputy Collectors.

Whenever the state of the public business requires it, the Chief Commissioner may invest any Deputy Collector with the powers of a Collector for the trial and determination of suits and appeals under this Act, other than appeals from the decisions of such Deputy Collector, and may, with the sanction of the Governor General of India in Council, invest any Collector with all or any of the powers of a Commissioner under this Act.

Jurisdiction of Commissioner.

92. The Court of the Commissioner shall have power to hear and determine appeals from decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the Code of Civil Procedure) from the orders of the Collectors and Deputy Collectors, except as otherwise provided in sections 91, 95 and 102.

Jurisdiction of Financial Commissioner.

93. The Court of the Financial Commissioner shall have power to hear and determine appeals from the decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the Code of Civil Procedure) from the orders, of the Commissioners, and also special appeals, as provided in the said Code, from the decisions passed in regular appeal by the Collectors and by the Commissioners.

Appeals.

Time for presenting appeals.

94. The memorandum of appeal prepared in the form and containing the particulars mentioned in the Code of Civil Procedure, shall be presented to the Court empowered to hear the appeal within the period hereinafter specified, unless the appellant shall show sufficient cause, to the satisfaction of such Court, for not having presented the memorandum within such period; that is to say, thirty days if the appeal lie to the Collector, six weeks if the appeal lie to the Commissioner, and ninety days if the appeal lie to the Financial Commissioner.

The period shall be reckoned from and exclusive of the day on which the decision or order appealed against was passed, and also exclusive of such time as may be requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree or order from which the appeal is made.

Applications for the admission of special appeals shall be presented in the Court of the Financial Commissioner within the period hereinbefore fixed for the presentation of a memorandum of appeal.

No appeal, except in certain cases, from Collector's decree for money below one hundred rupees.

95. In suits under clauses 2, 5, 9, 11, 14, 15, 16, 17, and 18 of section 83, and in appeals from decisions in such suits tried and decided by a Commissioner or Collector, if the amount sued for does not exceed one hundred rupees, the judgment shall be final, except as hereinafter provided, unless in any such suit a question of right to enhance or otherwise vary the rent of a tenant, or any question relating to a title to land or to some interest in land as between parties having conflicting claims thereto, has been determined by the judgment.

In such case the judgment shall be open to appeal in the manner provided in this Act.

Distribution of Business.

Deputy Commissioner may distribute business in subordinate Courts.

96. The Deputy Commissioner may direct the business in the Courts subordinate to him, whether or not they hold their sittings in the same place, to be distributed among such Courts in such way as he shall think fit.

Transfer of Suits and Appeals.

Transfer of suits from subordinate Courts to Commissioner's or Collector's Court.

97. The Commissioner or the Deputy Commissioner may withdraw any suit instituted in any Court subordinate to him, and try such suit himself, or refer it for trial to any other such Court competent to try the same.

Withdrawal or reference of appeals.

The Commissioner may also withdraw any appeal instituted in the Court of any Collector subordinate to him, and try the appeal himself, or refer it for trial to the Court of any other Collector in his division.

Financial Commissioner may transfer suits and appeals from one subordinate Court to another.

98. The Financial Commissioner may order that any suit or appeal which shall be instituted in or presented to any Court subordinate to him, shall be transferred to any other such Court competent to try or hear the subject-matter of the same.

Miscellaneous.

General subordination of Courts.

99. In the performance of their duties under this Act, the Collectors shall be subject to the direction and control of the Commissioners and of the Financial Commissioner; and the Deputy Collectors and Assistant Collectors shall be subject to the direction and control of the Deputy Commissioners to whom they are respectively subordinate:

Proviso.

Provided that nothing in this section shall empower the Financial Commissioner or any Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner to interfere in any way not authorized by this Act with any decision or order in a suit.

Suits by or against managing agents or tahsíldárs of khám estates.

100. All suits, which, under the provisions of this Act, may be brought by or against landlords, may be brought by or against managing agents or tahsíldárs of estates held under khám management, whether such estates are the property of Government or not.

Sharer to exercise certain powers only through manager or lumberdár.

101. No sharer in a joint estate, under-proprietary or other tenure in which a division of land has not been made among the sharers shall exercise any of the powers conferred by this Act in regard to the recovery of arrears of rent, enhancement of rent, ejectment of tenants or distress, otherwise than through a manager authorized to collect the rents on behalf of all the sharers.

In pattídárí estates or tenures such powers shall be exercised only through a lumberdár or through the pattídár who is entitled to collect the rents of the pattí.

Recovery of land of which applicant has been illegally dispossessed.

102. If any landlord, under-proprietor, or tenant has, without his consent, been dispossessed of any land otherwise than by due course of law, such landlord, under-proprietor or tenant, or any person claiming through him, shall be entitled to recover possession thereof notwithstanding any other title has been set up, provided that he makes application to the Court to recover possession of the land within three months from the time of the dispossession.

But nothing in this section shall bar the person from whom possession has been so recovered, or any other person, from instituting a suit to establish his title to such land and to recover possession thereof.

The application mentioned in the first clause of this section shall be heard by the Collector or Deputy Collector only, and no appeal shall lie from any order passed thereon, nor shall any review of such order be allowed.

Courts may sit anywhere within limits of their jurisdiction.

103. The Courts may sit for the hearing and determining suits and appeals, and for disposing of other business under this Act, in any place within the local limits of their respective jurisdictions:

Provided that every hearing and decision shall be in open Court, and that the parties to the suit or their authorized agents shall have had due notice to attend at such place.

CHAPTER VIII.

LIMITATION OF SUITS.

General limitation.

104. Except as herein otherwise provided, and subject to the provisions as to legal disability contained in any law for the limitation of suits for the time being in force in Oudh, all suits under this Act shall be instituted within one year from the date of the accruing of the cause of action.

Suits for delivery of leases or counterparts.

105. Suits for the delivery of leases or the counterparts of leases may be instituted at any time during the tenancy.

Suits for arrears of rent, or revenue or share of profits.

106. Suits for the recovery of arrears of rent or revenue, or of a share of profits, shall, except in the case mentioned in section 16, be instituted within three years from the date on which the arrear or share of profit claimed shall have become due.

Suits against agents for money, or delivery of accounts or papers.

107. Suits for the recovery of money in the hands of an agent, or for the settlement of accounts or delivery of papers by an agent, may be brought at any time during the continuance of the agency, or within one year after its determination, or, in the case of claims legally cognizable at the date of the passing of this Act, within one year after such date.

Suits regarding distress, division of produce, &c.

108. Suits regarding distress under section 74, 78, 79 or 80, and suits regarding the division, estimate, or appraisement of the produce of land, shall be commenced within three months from the date of the accruing of the cause of action.

CHAPTER IX.

PROCEDURE.

Civil Procedure Code to be the procedure under this Act.

109. Subject to the exceptions and provisoes under which the Code of Civil Procedure was extended to Oudh, as contained in the Notification republished in Schedule D hereto annexed, the provisions of the said Code shall, so far as they are not inconsistent with the provisions herein contained, apply to all suits, appeals and proceedings under this Act:

Provided that the said Notification shall be read as if the words "Financial Commissioner" were substituted for the words "Judicial Commissioner," and that section 244 of the said Code shall be read as if for the word "Court," the word "Commissioner" were substituted:

Provided also that the words "ancestral property" in the said Notification shall be held to include the property in land of persons admitted to engagement for the land-revenue at the summary settlement of 1858-59.

Particulars to be added to plaint.

110. In addition to the particulars required by section 26 of the said Code to be specified in the plaint, the plaint shall contain the following particulars:—

1st.—The name of the village or estate, and of the pargana, in which the land to which the suit relates is situate;

2nd.—If the suit be for the recovery of an arrear of rent, or for the enhancement or abatement of rent, or for the ejectment of a tenant, or for contesting a notice of enhancement of rent, or for contesting a notice for the ejectment of a tenant, or for the recovery of the occupancy or possession of any land, the plaint shall specify the extent, situation and designation of the land to which the suit relates, and where fields have been marked in a Government survey, the number (if it be possible to give it) of each field;

3rd.—If the suit be for the recovery of an arrear of rent or revenue, the plaint shall specify the yearly rent or revenue of the land, the amount (if any) received on account of the year or years for which the claim is made, the amount in arrear,

and the time in respect of which it is alleged to be due;

4th.—If the suit be for the delivery of a lease or the counterpart of a lease, the plaint shall specify all the particulars mentioned in section 7.

Third person claiming rent to be made a party.

111. When in any suit between a landlord and an under-proprietor or tenant, the right to receive the rent of the land is claimed by a third person, on the ground that he, or a person through whom he claims, has actually and in good faith received and enjoyed such rent up to the time of the commencement of the suit, such third person shall be made a party to the suit, and the question of the actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent by him or the person through whom he claims shall be enquired into, and the suit shall be decided according to the result of such inquiry:

Provided always that the decision of the Court shall not affect the right of any party having a legal right to the rent of such land to establish his title thereto in a Court of competent jurisdiction.

Summons to defendant to be for final disposal.

112. In all suits under this Act, the summons to the defendant shall be for the final disposal of the suit.

Set-off in suits for arrears of rent.

113. In a suit to recover an arrear of rent no set-off shall be allowed against the claim, except such amount as may be due to the defendant on an unexecuted decree under this Act against the plaintiff.

Defendant may pay money into Court.

114. In any suit under this Act involving a claim to money, the defendant may, at any stage of the suit, deposit in Court such sum of money as he considers a satisfaction in full of the plaintiff's claim, together with the costs incurred by the plaintiff up to the time of such deposit.

Notice of the deposit shall be given to the plaintiff, and the amount deposited shall be paid to him on his application.

No interest shall be allowed to a plaintiff on any sum paid by the defendant into Court from the date of such payment, whether such sum be in full of the plaintiff's claim or fall short thereof.

Procedure for balance where defendant pays less than amount claimed.

115. In any case in which the defendant deposits less than the amount claimed by the plaintiff, nothing in section 114 shall bar the plaintiff from proceeding in the suit for the recovery of the balance.

Dismissal of suit for lease or counterpart, in absence of written evidence of agreement.

116. If a tenant not having a right of occupancy institute a suit against a landlord for the delivery of a lease, or a landlord institute a suit against a tenant not having a right of occupancy for the delivery of the counterpart of a lease, and the parties do not agree in respect of the particulars which such lease or counterpart is to contain, the Court shall dismiss the suit, unless evidence in writing is produced which shall satisfy the Court that an agreement has been entered into between the parties in accordance with which such lease or counterpart ought to be delivered.

Collector may make local enquiry.

117. The local enquiry described in section 180 of the Code of Civil Procedure may also, if he think fit, be made by the Collector in person or other officer presiding in the Court, and the provisions of the said Code regarding local inquiries shall apply to such inquiries made by such Collector or other officer.

In such cases the Collector or other officer as aforesaid, after completing the inquiry, shall record on the proceedings such observations as he thinks fit, and the observations so recorded shall be received as evidence in the suit.

As to Decrees.

Time within which execution may be had.

118. No process of execution shall be issued on a decree under this Act after the lapse of three years from the date of such decree.

Immediate execution of decree.

119. When a decree for money is made in any suit under this Act, the Court may, on the oral application of the party in whose favour the decree is passed, direct immediate execution thereof in the manner described in section 13 of Act No. XXIII of 1861 (to amend Act VIII of 1859.)

Decree for enhancement to state date from which it is to take effect.

120. When a decree in favour of the plaintiff is made in a suit for an enhancement of rent, the Court shall declare the date from which such enhancement shall take effect.

Enforcement of decree for delivery of papers or accounts.

121. If the decree be for the delivery of papers or accounts, it may be enforced by the imprisonment in the civil jail of the party against whom it is made, or by the attachment of his property, or by both imprisonment and attachment.

The imprisonment and attachment may be continued until he complies with the terms of the decree:

Provided that no person shall be imprisoned under this section for a longer period than six months.

Decrees for lease or counterpart to specify particulars.

122. A decree for the delivery of a lease or of the counterpart of a lease shall specify all the particulars mentioned in section 7, and such other particulars as to the Court seem fit."

Court after decree may grant lease or counterpart, in case of defendant's refusal.

123. If the decree be for the delivery of a lease or the counterpart of a lease, and the party ordered to deliver such lease or counterpart neglects or refuses so to do, the Court may grant a lease or counterpart in conformity with the terms of the decree, and such lease or counterpart shall have the same effect as if delivered by the party against whom the decree was passed.

124. If the decree be for money, no process in execution shall issue against the immoveable property of the judgment-debtor, other than attachment of such property, unless satisfaction of the decree cannot be obtained against his moveable property.

Execution to be first made against moveable property.

125. If the decree be for an arrear of rent due in respect of an under-proprietary right, the interest of the judgment-debtor in such right may, subject to the provisions of this Act, be sold in execution of the decree:

Sale of under-proprietary right in execution of decree for arrears of rent.

Provided that no such sale shall be allowed unless it appear to the Deputy Commissioner that satisfaction of the decree cannot be made in the manner referred to in sections 243 and 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

If it appear to the Court that such satisfaction can be made, the Court may exercise the powers given to it by the said section 243, although no application has been made by the judgment-debtor.

The Deputy Commissioner may be appointed manager under the same section. When he has been so appointed, he may exercise for the satisfaction of the decree against the judgment-debtor, all the powers which, under any law in force in Oudh, he might have exercised for the recovery of an arrear of revenue due by such judgment-debtor to the Government.

Appointment of Deputy Commissioner as manager.

126. No beneficial lease or other incumbrance hereafter created on his tenure by any under-proprietor shall be valid, in the event of the sale of his rights and interests in execution of a decree for arrears of rent, unless such incumbrance has been registered under any rules or law for the time being in force in Oudh, within four months after the creation thereof, and not less than thirty days before the date of attachment of such rights and interests.

Registration of incumbrance created by under-proprietor.

127. When an under-proprietor creates any such incumbrance, and fails to pay to the proprietor all or any part of the rent subsequently accruing in respect of the land subject to the incumbrance, the incumbrancer shall be liable to pay to the proprietor the whole or such part as aforesaid of the said rent, unless the proprietor has agreed in writing to waive any claim which he might otherwise have made on the incumbrancer under this section.

Proprietor's lien for rent payable by under-proprietor.

128. When land is sold in execution of a decree under this Act, and the land or any lot thereof has been knocked down to a stranger, any co-sharer, other than the judgment-debtor, may, before sunset on the day of sale, claim to take the land or lot, as the case may be, at the sum at which it was so knocked down.

Right of pre-emption at execution-sales.

If the land be an under-proprietary tenure, a like claim may also be made by the proprietor.

Any claim made under this section shall be allowed: Provided that if a claim to the same land or lot be made by a proprietor as well as by a co-sharer, the claim of the co-sharer shall be preferred: Provided also that no claim shall be allowed unless the claimant fulfil all the conditions of the sale binding on a purchaser.

SCHEDULE A.*

SCHEDULE D.

(See Section 109.)

Under the provisions of section 385 of Act No. VIII of 1859, and section 3 of Act No. IV of 1860, His Excellency the Governor General in Council is pleased to notify that, from 1st January 1862, Act VIII of 1859 is extended to the Province of Oudh, subject to the following exceptions and provisoes :—

1. Section 3 shall be subject to the following proviso :—

Provided that the Judicial Commissioner or any other Court exercising any appellate jurisdiction within the Province of Oudh, may, at any time within one year from the time of the passing or execution of any judgment or order by any Court subordinate to the said Appellate Court, call for such judgment or proceedings without any regular appeal or application for review having been preferred against the same, and may, if he or it shall see sufficient grounds, revise and alter, or reverse or confirm the same. But that in such case, before revising, altering or reversing any one judgment or order, the said Judicial Commissioner, or it, shall cause the same notice to be given to the party in whose favour the said judgment or order was pronounced, and the same opportunity to such party to be heard in support thereof, and the same proceedings to be taken as if a memorandum of appeal had been filed by the party aggrieved thereby.

2. Section 17 is excepted, and the term recognized agent is defined as follows, viz., a permanent servant, partner, relation, or friend, whom the Court may admit as a fit person to represent a party, and especially persons holding powers of attorney from absent parties, persons carrying on business on behalf of bankers and traders, managing agents of landholders, nearest male relations of women, and persons ex-officio authorized to act for Government, or for any Prince or Chief.

3. Section 111 shall be subject to the following limitation :—It shall not be obligatory on the Court to decide ex parte in the absence of defendant, but the Court may proceed to compel his attendance under the following rule, being the rule now in force in Oudh :—

Rule.—If the defendant does not appear, it shall be at the discretion of the Court to issue a warrant to arrest him and detain him till another day appointed for the hearing of the case, and to attach his property.

4. Section 172.—So much of this section as requires that the whole of the evidence shall be taken down in writing in the language in ordinary use is excepted, and the record made by the hand of the Judge, under the following rule, being the rule now in force in Oudh, shall be taken as a record of the evidence :—

Rule.—An intelligible note of the essential points of the evidence of each witness is to be taken at the time and in the course of oral examination by the officer who tries the case, in his own language. The notes must be legible, complete, and properly arranged, must attest the presence of the witness at the time, and mark every postponement and change of time and scene, so that their bonâ fide character may be apparent. Every essential point must be noted, but mere surplusage may be omitted. These notes shall be filed, and shall form part of the record of the case: Provided that in cases tried by a European officer, who has not passed the examination in the native languages prescribed for Assistant Commissioners exercising special powers, the evidence of witnesses shall also be recorded at length in their own language.

Section 205.—So much of this section as renders land liable to sale in execution of a decree, will be subject to the restrictions on the sale of land prescribed by the following rule, being the local rule now in force in Oudh :—

Rule.—No ancestral property in land shall be sold in satisfaction of a decree, without the sanction of the Judicial Commissioner; and before acquired property in land shall be so sold, the permission of the Divisional Commissioner shall be obtained.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 15th July 1868, and was referred to a Select Committee, with instructions to make their report thereon in one month:—

No. 16 OF 1868.

A Bill to prohibit the practice of inoculation in Kumaon and Garhwál.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to prohibit the practice of inoculation with the small-pox in the Districts of Kumaon and Garhwál, it is hereby enacted as follows:—

Penalty for inoculating.

1. Whoever produces or attempts to produce in any person by inoculation with variolous matter, or by wilful exposure to variolous matter, or to any thing impregnated therewith, or who wilfully by any other means produces the disease of small-pox in any person, shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, or to fine not exceeding two hundred rupees, or to both.

Penalty on inoculated person entering place to which Act extends.

2. If any person having been inoculated with the small-pox in a place to which this Act does not extend, shall afterwards enter any place to which this Act extends, before the date of forty days from the date of such inoculation, or without a certificate from a qualified Medical Officer that such person is no longer likely to cause contagion, such person shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, to imprisonment for a period not exceeding three months, or to a fine not exceeding two hundred rupees, or to both.

Reward to informer.

3. Whenever an offender is sentenced to pay a fine under this Act, the convicting Magistrate may award any portion not exceeding one-half of such fine to the person on whose information the offender has been convicted.

Extent of Act.

4. This Act extends only to the Districts of Kumaon and Garhwál.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill, which has been prepared at the request of the Lieutenant Governor of the North-Western Provinces, is to put a stop to the practice of inoculation in Kumaon and Garhwál, where proper arrangements exist for vaccinating the inhabitants.

The first and principal section of the Bill is taken from the English Statute 3 & 4 Vic., cap. 29. Section 2 is nearly identical with a clause in the Bengal Act IV of 1865, which was passed to check inoculation in Calcutta and its suburbs.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 15th July 1868, and was referred to a Select Committee, with instructions to make their report thereon in one month:—

No. 17 OF 1868.

A Bill to exempt certain Instruments from the Indian Registration Act, 1866.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to exempt expressly from compulsory registration under the Indian Registration Act, 1866, certain documents heretofore or hereafter executed by or in favour of Government; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Scheduled documents exempted from Act XX of 1866.

1. Nothing contained in the said Act shall be deemed to require, or to have at any time required, the registration of any of the documents comprised in the Schedule hereto annexed.

But all such documents shall, for the purposes of sections forty-eight and forty-nine of the same Act, be deemed to have been and to be registered in accordance with its provisions.

This Act to be read with Act XX of 1866.

2. This Act shall be read with and taken as part of Act No. XX of 1866.

SCHEDULE.

Documents issued, received, or attested by any officer engaged in making a settlement or revision of settlement, of land revenue, and which form part of the records of such settlement.

Documents issued, received, or attested by any officer engaged on behalf of Government in making or revising the survey of any land, and which form part of the record of such survey.

Documents which, under any law for the time being in force, are filed annually by patwáris or other officers charged with the preparation of village records.

Sanads and other documents purporting to be grants or assignments by Government of land or of any interest in land, in reward for special services.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

By the Indian Registration Act, instruments purporting to create, declare, limit, or extinguish any title or interest to or in immoveable property of the value of one hundred rupees or upwards, which have been executed subsequently to the 1st January 1865—the date on which Act No. XVI of 1864 came into operation—must be registered to attain legal validity as documents of title.

The question has been raised as to whether settlement and survey records come within that class of instruments the registration of which is by law made compulsory, and as some diversity of opinion exists on the subject, and very extensive settlement operations are now in progress in the North-Western Provinces and other parts of the Empire, it is desirable that all doubt as to the liability of these documents to the provisions of the Registration Act should be removed by legislative enactment.

The enforced registration of these records is considered inexpedient, because the objects of registration are already fully attained through the manner in which such records are prepared, and the character of the agency employed in their preparation, whilst they are no less accessible to persons seeking information as to their contents than the records of the registration office, and secondly, because the conditions attaching to the process of registration would necessarily be productive of great trouble and inconvenience to the numerous parties to the settlement record, besides entailing unnecessary expense.

The exemption of sanads, conferring on individuals grants of land, with retrospective effect, is also necessary to give a sound title to the holders. A very large number of such sanads have issued since the 1st January 1865, and, owing to doubts as to the requirements of the law in respect to them, have never been registered. Their registration now is impracticable, and as in these cases no less than in those of the settlement and survey records, the objects of a distinct registration are otherwise secured, it is proposed to add this class of documents to the schedule of the Bill.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 22nd July 1868:—

No. 18 OF 1868.

A Bill to enable Municipalities to provide for Lock-Hospitals.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to enable all Municipalities in British India to provide out of the municipal funds for the maintenance of Lock-Hospitals and generally for the prevention of contagious venereal disease; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Power to Municipal Committees to devote funds to maintaining Lock-Hospitals, &c.

1. Notwithstanding anything contained in any Act of the Governor General of India in Council, of the Governor of Madras in Council, of the Governor of Bombay in Council, of the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal in Council, or in any other law for the time being in force, it shall be lawful for every Municipal Corporation, Municipal Committee, or other Body of persons duly appointed to conduct the affairs of a municipality in British India to pay out of the funds at their disposal, towards the maintenance of the hospital provided under section twelve of Act No. XIV of 1868 (for the prevention of certain contagious diseases) within the limits of the place for which they are so appointed, and towards defraying the cost of the medical treatment, lodging, clothing and food of the women detained in such hospital, and of the allowance provided under section nineteen of the same Act for the subsistence of prostitutes residing within the limits aforesaid, such part as may from time to time be agreed on by and between the Corporation, Committee or Body and the Local Government of the total cost of the said maintenance, treatment, lodging, clothing, food and allowance as annually estimated by such Government.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill is to enable Municipalities to contribute towards the expenses attending the introduction of the Indian Contagious Diseases Act. Those expenses are so considerable that the Government of India may be unable, unless aided out of local resources, to introduce the Act into many places where its provisions are urgently required. The Bill is merely an enabling measure, and the amount of the contribution will from time to time be determined by agreement between the Local Government and the Municipality concerned.

MILITARY. INDIA OFFICE;
No. 215. London, 25*th June* 1868.

To His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Governor General of India in Council.

SIR,—Your letter dated the 23rd March 1868, No. 123, recommends that officers who may be at home on furlough or on leave on sick certificate may be allowed the full benefit of any extended leave, with retention of staff appointment, which can be granted them under the provisions of the contemplated new furlough rules.

2. With the view of carrying out this proposal, those officers, who are now on furlough on private affairs with retention of appointment, will be in all cases informed, on being granted an extension of the six months given them in India, that they can retain their appointments for the full period to which they may be entitled under the proposed new rules. As regards those on leave on sick certificate, it will rest with the various Governments to keep open their appointments for the full period to be allowed under those rules.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

NOTE ON EDUCATION FOR 1865-66 PUBLISHED BY THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

From E. C. BAYLEY, Esq., Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department, to the Secretary to the Government of Bombay,—No. 412, dated 13th July 1868.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 1, dated the 14th January last, and to transmit, for the information of His Excellency the Governor in Council, the accompanying copy of memoranda by Mr. Monteath, Mr. Sutcliffe, Mr. Croft, the Revd. K. M. Bannerjea, and by the Sub-Committee of the Syndicate of the Madras University, on the subject of Sir Alexander Grant's remarks on "the Note on Education for 1865-66," published by the Government of India.

2. I am also to observe that Mr. Monteath's Note dealt with the actual facts before him at the time he wrote, and that in the opinion of the Governor General in Council it gave full credit to Bombay for the educational progress it had achieved both absolutely and relatively to other parts of India.

Memorandum by A. M. MONTEATH, Esq.,—dated 10th June 1868.

In his letter to the Bombay Government of the 9th December last, Sir Alexander Grant offers remarks on the "Note on the state of Education in India in 1865-66," and my present object is to bring these remarks under a brief review.

2. I quite agree in the remarks made by Sir A. Grant (paragraph 2) regarding the desirability of classifying schools under definite standards. In most of the Provinces of India, however, the data for such classification are wanting, and all that could be done in a first compilation like my Note of 1865-66 was to group the schools together in a general way. I prefaced the section relating to schools with remarks (paragraphs 79 to 83) on the subject of classification, pointing out the absence of really full and accurate data, and giving an explanation of the general principles that had been followed. I think that Sir A. Grant must have omitted to notice these paragraphs.

3. In his 3rd paragraph, Sir A. Grant complains of the order* in which the several Provinces of India have been enumerated in my Note, observing that "this order probably corresponds with the order of precedence which the different Educational Departments hold in Mr. Monteath's mind, according to his knowledge of them and interest in them respectively." The complaint is perhaps hardly deserving of notice, but I may remark that the assumption on which it is founded is entirely wrong, for the order adopted by me was not stated to be, and certainly was not in point of fact, based on considerations of relative importance.

* Bengal. N. W. Provinces. Punjab. Madras. | Bombay. Oudh. Central Provinces. Mysore.

4. The next seventeen paragraphs of Sir A. Grant's letter (paragraphs 4—20) refer to the three Universities of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, the standards of which were made the subject of a brief comparison in a letter from the Registrar of the Calcutta University quoted in my Note. Sir A. Grant disputes the correctness of the comparison, and gives much valuable information respecting the Bombay University. His conclusions regarding the relative value of the standards of the different Universities, have been so ably handled in the documents marginally noted, that it would be superfluous in me to add any comments of my own on the subject.

Memorandum by J. Sutcliffe, Esq., Registrar, Calcutta University, dated 4th February 1868.
Memorandum by A. W. Croft, Esq., Professor, Presidency College, Calcutta, dated 29th January 1868.
Remarks by the Revd. K. M. Bannerjea, Member of the Syndicate of the Calcutta University, dated——February 1868.
Report of a Sub-Committee appointed by the Madras Syndicate to consider Sir A. Grant's letter, published in the Athenæum and Daily News of 25th May 1868.

5. In paragraph 21, Sir A. Grant finds fault with the meagreness of the account given of Bombay Educational Operations in the "brief outline" of educational operations in India, contained in Section I. of my Note, and in paragraph 22 he proceeds to indicate the points which he regards as the "salient characteristics of educational operations in Bombay." The points into which Sir A. Grant would have had me enter in the "brief outline" appertain, in many particulars, rather to the more detailed account given in the subsequent sections of the Note, and I proceed to show that in every case the information and opinions offered by Sir A. Grant are either wrong, or were given in as great or more detail in my Note.

(a.) Sir A. Grant brings to notice that "Bombay is the Presidency in which more, proportionately, has been done for education by direct Government agency, and less by private exertion and liberality than in the other Presidencies and Provinces." It is quite true that Bombay has been behindhand in the matter of education by missionary and other private bodies, and this fact was prominently noticed in paragraph 374 of my Note, where I quoted the remarks of Mr. Howard (late Director of Public Instruction in Bombay) on the subject. Sir A. Grant says that this result is chiefly "owing to the numerical weakness of missionary bodies in the west of India." To this reason I would add that the Bombay grant-in-aid system was not for a long period of years calculated to encourage private educational operations.

(b.) Sir A. Grant points out that "Bombay is the Presidency in which organization of the Educational Department, though begun late, has been most carried out, as evidenced by the introduction of regular standards of examination, under which all pupils, both in Governmental and aided Institutions, are tested and returned; also by the application of the same scale of standards to the classification of schools, &c."

I deny altogether the accuracy of Sir A. Grant's remarks, which are calculated, in my opinion, to give an entirely erroneous view of the state at which the organization of the Department had arrived in 1865-66. The eulogistic description of that organization given in Sir A. Grant's present letter is strangely inconsistent with the great want of standards so prominently noticed in the very report (for 1865-66) to which my Note referred. In paragraphs 43,

44, and 45 of Sir A. Grant's report for 1865-66, it was stated that standards had been laid down for entrance into High Schools, but that "our organization has hitherto stopped at this point:" and a general indication was given of the further standards which it would be necessary to lay down, but which had not then been prepared, much less brought into operation. Now I need hardly remark that an organization in contemplation was a very different thing from an organization in operation, and I submit that I could not truthfully have given expression in my Note of 1865-66 to the high eulogy of Bombay educational organization which Sir A. Grant thinks ought to have been accorded. Whatever credit was due to Bombay in 1865-66 in this respect, I gave to it in paragraph 83 of my Note, where, when commenting on the great want of some accurate system of classification, I observed that "attempts are, however, being made in some parts of the country, especially perhaps in Bombay, to draw a clear line of distinction between the different grades of schools, and to make the education in one grade commence where the education of the next lower grade of schools ends."

(c.) Sir A. Grant says that "Bombay is distinguished for its Vernacular schools," adding his belief that "our Vernacular schools excel those of the same class elsewhere in India." On the subject of Bombay Vernacular schools, I gave (paragraph 188) a long extract from the very interesting memorandum which Mr. Howard submitted to Government before retiring from the Directorship; and I maintain that in doing so, I acted more properly than if I had ventured on a vague belief, such as that put forward by Sir A. Grant, as to the superiority of Bombay Vernacular schools over Vernacular schools in any other part of India. I am quite aware that Sir A. Grant's predecessor gave expression to this or a similar belief in respect of the Vernacular schools in Bombay, and in a Note which I wrote in 1862, I noticed the circumstance, believing then that there was real foundation for the alleged superiority; but in his report for 1863-64, the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, referring to this opinion, specially pointed out that many of the Vernacular schools in Bengal would "probably bear favorable comparison with the best Vernacular schools in any part of India." Under these circumstances, I certainly cannot endorse Sir A. Grant's belief in the superiority of his Vernacular schools: some of them are doubtless very good schools, but so far as comparison is concerned, the opinion of the Director of Public Instruction in Bengal is of just as great weight as that of Sir A. Grant. And I may note that Sir A. Grant's idea that the point could easily have been settled by a reference to the standards of the schools is wrong; for, as shown in my Note, mere standards up to which schools educate are of but little use without a return showing the standards actually reached by the various pupils; and for this there were no data, not even in respect of the Bombay schools.

(d.) Sir A. Grant thinks that I ought to have said, that the great question of how to get at the masses of the people, i. e., the agricultural population, had been solved in Bombay (par excellence) by the introduction of the local cess. I have no reason to believe that the local cess schools in Bombay get at the great masses of the agricultural population any more than the similar schools in the Upper Provinces of the Presidency of Bengal, and I demur altogether to the title of Bombay to claim credit for any such special success in this respect as Sir A. Grant would wish me to have accorded to that Presidency. Success has, I doubt not, attended the measure, but quite as great success has attended it in other Provinces.

(e.) Sir A. Grant brings to notice that "Bombay is the Presidency in which the bold experiment has been introduced of assigning grants to private institutions on the system of payment for results." I gave full information on this subject in Section XII. of my Note (Grants-in-aid), pointing out (paragraph 364) that "the principle of the Bombay rules is that of payment by results," and giving the rules in extenso in the Appendix. Sir A. Grant must have omitted to read this section of the Note, or he could not have complained of any omission on my part to give full information respecting the experiment made in Bombay. I may observe too that, as shown in Section XII. of my Note, Bombay is not the only Province where the experiment has been made, as the Education Department of the Central Provinces has introduced a similar measure.

(f.) Sir A. Grant brings to notice that "the Book Department in Bombay stands distinguished from that in all other Presidencies by the greater amount of its sales." Full information respecting the sales of books effected in each Presidency and Province was given in my Note under the appropriate section (Book Departments), and I cannot see that anything more was required. It would have been quite foreign to the purpose of the "brief outline" of operations given in Section I. to enter into every detail in which one Presidency or Province excelled another.

(g.) Sir A. Grant complains that the operations of the "Fund for the Encouragement of Literature" have not been noticed among the "salient characteristics of educational operations in Bombay." I extract on the margin Sir A. Grant's own report of the operations of this Fund for the year 1865-66, and I certainly cannot regard the subject as one which ought to have been specially noticed as a "salient point" in a "brief outline of the main features of educational operations in the different Provinces in India." It must be remembered that the expenditure of a small sum of money yearly for the encouragement of literature, is by no means peculiar to Bombay as seems to be supposed by Sir A. Grant.

"The separation of the Encouragement Fund (Rs. 15,000 per annum) from the general accounts of the Book Depôt, which was ordered by Government in 1864, gives great clearness to our operations of the Encouragement Fund; Rs. 150 per mensem (Rs. 1,800 per annum) are now paid to the Dastur Hoshangü Jamaspji for certain work prescribed to him, on the recommendation of Dr. Haug, in editing of Zend and Pehlvi texts. The remainder is available for the patronage of literature of all kinds. The chief works patronized during the year have been two Marathi text-books on Chemistry and Materia Medica, a school book on the Sanscrit roots of Marathi words, a book on Metres, and a small Marathi Grammar: the copyright of these books has been purchased for the Department. A few copies of some story books, plays, and translations from the Sanscrit have been bought. Several works in different languages submitted for patronage have been rejected by this Office, some were indelicate in subject of treatment, others were insipid stories or plays, one was an elaborate but useless commentary on a Marathi Poem, some were unscholar-like editions of Sanscrit works, some were mere Vernacular keys to the English school books. On the whole, the year under record has been barren of creditable Vernacular productions."

6. I have now noticed in detail every one of Sir A. Grant's "salient points," showing that his remarks are either erroneous, or were substantially embodied in my Note under the appropriate sections. If every Province had put forward an equal number of similar "salient points" (and this certainly could have been done) as demanding special notice in a "brief outline of educational operations in the different Provinces of India," I feel sure that this portion of my Note would have required a different title.

7. In paragraph 25 Sir A. Grant offers what he calls some "Notes on the Note," and I proceed to refer to them in detail.

(a.) Sir A. Grant thinks that "a discriminating return of the various castes under instruction in India would be most interesting." Unquestionably it would, but he forgets that a compiler of a Note has to deal not with imaginary statistics, but with those actually available. Even the Bombay report does not make an attempt at showing the different castes of Hindoos under instruction. I am myself disposed to think that there are more important statistics wanting than those showing the various castes under instruction. There is a very general feeling that the multiplication of requirements in respect of statistics tends to retard more important work, and I would therefore confine attention for the present to what is most urgently necessary. I may mention here that Sir A. Grant explained the delay in the submission of his report for 1865-66 by the "elaborate character of the tables required by the Government of India." That report with the annexed statistics reached the Government of India nearly a year after the close of the period to which it referred, and I certainly think that if any greater details were to cause a proportionate increase of the delay, the result would be far from satisfactory.

(b.) Sir A. Grant notices the want of standards to define the true position in the educational scale of "Zillah Schools," "Tehsilee Schools," and "Hulkabundee Schools." The want was specially noticed by me in paragraphs 79 to 83 of my Note, from which I quote here the following extract:—

"Too much importance must not, however, be attached to the classification of schools; for, apart from mere errors of classification, it is obvious that any classification, based on the standards up to which the various kinds of schools profess to educate, must be, more or less, liable to mislead. An Anglo-Vernacular School, for instance, may have a few advanced pupils preparing for the University Entrance Standard, entitling it to be ranked as a Higher Class School; but the great bulk of its pupils may be under education of a very much lower kind, and a considerable number may be under tuition of the most elementary character. Yet all these pupils will be shown as belonging to a Higher Class School. Attempts are, however, being made in some parts of the country (especially perhaps in Bombay) to draw a clear line of distinction between the different grades of schools, and to make the education in one grade commence where the education of the next lower grade of schools ends, and it will perhaps be time enough when some progress has been made in this respect to consider the propriety of altering the Statistical Forms."

It is very easy for Sir A. Grant to point out defects (specially when they were prominently noticed by me), but it is a very different thing, and necessarily a work of time, to supply them.

(c.) Sir A. Grant suggests a comparison between the Godavery District rate system, where it is found "impossible to get qualified men to act as Commissioners for the assessment of the rate and the management of the schools," and the Bombay Local Cess System, "which works with ease and efficiency." The primary object of my Note was to give such an account of the different systems as might lead to such comparisons; but if the Madras Government considers it necessary to compare its system with those of other Provinces, the comparison ought clearly to be made, not merely with the Bombay system (as contemplated by Sir A. Grant), but with the local cess systems of the Upper Provinces of Bengal, which have undergone successfully the test of a much longer period than the Bombay system.

(d.) The suggested comparison between the Imperial assignment in each Province to (1), Local Funds (2), Presidential Revenues (3), Population, and (4), Pupils under instruction, would be interesting; but I am afraid that the results would be regarded as more or less unsatisfactory, for such items as the Opium Revenue of Lower Bengal, as well as the pupils of indigenous schools in the North-Western Provinces, would certainly be regarded by Sir A. Grant as interfering with the proper representation of results.

(e.) I entirely disagree with Sir A. Grant's opinion that it is objectionable to show in educational returns the amount expended from private sources. The Government regulates its grants-in-aid in most Provinces by the amount so expended, and it is most fitting and proper that the aggregate expenditure under this head should be recorded. Bombay happens to be behind-hand (as admitted by Sir A. Grant in paragraph 22, Section a) in this respect but it is quite proper that other Provinces, where private expenditure on education is large, should get the credit resulting therefrom.

(f.) The "boarding-houses" in connection with colleges and schools in Bombay were not made the subject of special remark in my Note, from the very simple fact that they were not so much as mentioned in Sir A. Grant's own report.

(g.) The remarks made by Sir A. Grant under this head on the want of precision in the classification of schools, have already been noticed under head (b.) above.

(h.) There is no mistake in the classification as supposed by Sir A. Grant. The fees levied in the Punjab Zillah Schools were certainly low, but attention was directed to the subject in paragraph 98 of my Note.

(i.) Sir A. Grant comments on the fact that he had not received up to the date of his letter (9th December 1867) the much required sanction of the Government of India for the re-organization of 19 Middle Class Schools as feeders to the High Schools. The statement may be true; but I am informed that the sanction of the Government of India was conveyed to the Bombay Government, by Home Department communication No. 714, dated 29th May 1867, i. e., six months before the time when Sir A. Grant states that he had not received it.

(j.) Sir A. Grant objects to the following paragraph of my Note, viz.:—

"It may be noted further as a fact unexplained in the Director's report that the tables of receipts and charges under the head of Middle Class Schools showed for 1865-66 a net excess of receipts over charges, amounting to no less than Rs. 48,864, being more than 20 per cent. of the whole charges."

It rests with Sir A. Grant to explain these figures which were taken from his own tables.

(k.) Sir A. Grant is quite wrong in assuming that Bombay Middle Class English Schools were compared with Middle Class Vernacular Schools in Bengal. The comparison was made with the cost of middle class education in India generally. The average cost was about Rs. 8 per head per annum (for all Provinces other than Bombay), whereas in Bombay it was Rs. 13. In noticing the high rate in Bombay I observed that "it is probably explainable both by the relatively high rates of pay obtaining in Bombay, and by an unusual amount of extraordinary expenditure in the way of constructing school buildings."

(l.) The account given (paragraph 158 of my Note) of the system of employing certificated Gurus, is sufficient for the purpose for which it was intended. Any one who wants to know the precise standards of qualification by which the Gurus are required to pass, can obtain them by reference to the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal.

(m.) Sir A. Grant says that he cannot understand what is meant by the "middle classes" in a Native village. I cannot do better than refer to the extract* from the Inspector's report quoted in that portion of my Note where the term is used, as it sufficiently shows what was intended. In the Bengal villages are to be found, not merely cultivators of the soil, but Zemindars, Bunneahs, the Kayusth class, Jotdars, &c. Sir A. Grant's difficulty appears to arise from an idea that a Bengal village is composed entirely of the actual cultivators of the soil.

* "I tried to point out in my last annual report, as well as on other occasions, that the Patshallas are not and cannot be schools for the masses exclusively. I showed in that report that they are primarily preparatory schools for the children of the higher and middle ranks; and, at the same time being extremely cheap, are attended largely by children of the lower orders."

(n.) Sir A. Grant here attacks the Director of Public Instruction in the North-Western Provinces for descending to enter in his returns indigenous schools which are inspected by his Department and encouraged by prizes, rewards, &c. Perhaps in no other Province in India is more done for the education of the masses of the people than in the North-Western Provinces, not merely by the establishment of local cess schools, but by inspecting and encouraging the numerous indigenous schools. It will be long before Government or local cess schools can be so multiplied as to supersede these indigenous schools, and meantime the Government of the North-Western Provinces rightly does what it can to improve the latter, and to obtain and record such statistics respecting them as are available.

There are many interested in education who think that the Government does not take sufficient statistical note of the indigenous schools of the country, but there are few, I feel sure, who will join in Sir A. Grant's sneer at the efforts made in this direction in the North-Western Provinces.

(o.) Sir A. Grant has not explained the expenditure of local cess funds (paid by the agricultural population) on objects other than that of the instruction of the agricultural population; but I believe that he has since admitted the propriety of confining the expenditure under this head more strictly to its legitimate object.

(p.) I need not comment on the remark here made with reference to the action of the Government of India in regard to the proposals for increased expenditure on higher class education in Bombay.

Memorandum by J. SUTCLIFFE, Esq., Registrar, Calcutta University, on Sir A. GRANT's letter No. 2552 of 9th December 1867,—dated 4th February 1867.

When Mr. Monteath referred to me last year upon the question of standards in the three Indian Universities, I replied in the sense attributed to me in paragraph 4 of Sir A. Grant's letter No. 2552 of 9th December. Before doing so, I carefully compared the standards as given in their respective calendars, and I also consulted the question papers which have been set by the examiners of each Presidency. In the remarks I now offer, I shall confine myself entirely to a comparison of the standards of examination at Calcutta and Bombay.

Sir A. Grant, on a comparison of the standards for matriculation at the two Universities, concludes that to pass the examination at Bombay requires about one year's more preparation than is required at Calcutta. His reasons for coming to this conclusion are,—(1), that the tests of the Bombay examination in Languages are more difficult; (2), that more History and Arithmetic are required; (3), that one additional subject (Elementary Natural Philosophy) is exacted at Bombay.

The standard of the Entrance Examination at each University is, I think, mainly determined by the knowledge of English and Elementary Mathematics that is required for a candidate to pass; and if the tests applied at Bombay in these subjects were really more difficult than those prevailing in Calcutta, I should readily concur in Sir A. Grant's conclusion. It does not, however, follow that because at Bombay the examination in English is conducted in the manner described in paragraph 6, it is necessarily more difficult. An oral examination here is impracticable, owing to the impossibility of conducting it with any degree of uniformity at a series of stations reaching from Calcutta to Peshawur. A vivâ voce examination is certainly useful in enabling an examiner to decide more readily upon the merits of doubtful candidates, but it can hardly be considered a good substitute for a carefully prepared paper of questions. The practice of not prescribing books at Bombay probably makes the examiners very cautious in selecting only passages for explanation which are of very moderate difficulty. At any rate, such would appear to be the case in the papers which are published in the calendar, and I am decidedly of opinion that no successful entrance candidate here would be rejected on the written test which prevails at Bombay. In Arithmetic, Algebra, Geometry, notwithstanding the slight differences in the prescribed standards, I find that the questions are as nearly as possible of the same degree of difficulty. The same remark applies to the examination in History and Geography. Elementary Natural Philosophy does not enter into the Matriculation standard of this University, and its retention at Bombay I consider to be of very doubtful expediency. The preparation of candidates in this branch must be a severe tax on the memory; for, although in the questions given in the calendar of 1867-68, the mechanical powers are reduced to simple Arithmetic, I find in the same paper explanations of phenomena called for, which are far beyond the capacities of Matriculation candidates on this side of India. I can only conclude that some Elementary Manual is prescribed for Bombay schools, and adopted by the University examiners, which contains concise answers to such questions, and that these are committed to memory by the candidates, and reproduced in the examination hall. A subject of this kind so treated cannot be considered as really forming any part of the standard.

Sir A. Grant proceeds, in paragraph 10, to compare the Calcutta and Bombay standards for the First Examination in Arts. He admits that the Calcutta Mathematical standard is higher by the addition of Statics and Euclid XI. Prop. 1—21., and he might also have said that it contains twice as much Algebra as that of Bombay. The standard in Algebra at Bombay is indeed very little higher than that for Matriculation. Notwithstanding this very marked difference in the Mathematical standards, Sir A. Grant proceeds to say that the excess of the Calcutta standard over that at Bombay "is balanced by the addition of an extra subject at Bombay, either Butler's Sermons, Analytical Geometry, or Chemistry, Heat, and Electricity." I state most decidedly that the extra subject at Bombay does not restore the equilibrium of the two standards. Any one of these extra subjects may perhaps be allowed to be set against the additional Euclid and Algebra required at Calcutta; but there still remains one subject (the most difficult in the whole examination), Statics, for which there is no counterpoise in the Bombay standard. In comparing the standards in History, Sir A. Grant seems to lay considerable stress on the fact that text-books are not prescribed at Bombay. It is probably none the less certain that at all the affiliated colleges, the same text-books are used, and that Dr. Smith's "Student's Greece" is the text-book for the History of Greece. The University examiners are also most probably appointed from the staffs of the different colleges, and it is hardly likely that they will discard text-books known to be in common use amongst the students they are to examine. It comes to the same thing then whether text-books be appointed by the University, or by the heads of the affiliated colleges. They exist and are recognised, and it is quite right they should be adopted in the case of all mere pass examinations. I cannot agree with Sir A. Grant in considering the course of History at Bombay either as encouraging a better form of study, or as being more difficult. The History of England, which the Calcutta University prescribes, presents a subject complete in itself; and it can hardly be maintained that a knowledge of English History is not as useful to a Native student as a knowledge of the History of Greece down to 431 B. C. Sir A. Grant would seem to entertain a poor opinion of "The Student's Hume" as a text-book. Will he kindlp favour us with a list of the text-books in use at the Bombay colleges by students who are preparing for the University Pass Examinations? I shall offer no remarks upon the comparison instituted between the course of Logic prescribed at Bombay and the course of Philosophy at Calcutta, as I am permitted by Mr. A. W. Croft, a Professor of the Presidency College, and one of the University examiners in Philosophy at the late examinations, to make use of a Minute he has drawn up on a comparison of the standard in Philosophy at both Universities in all their examinations. Accepting the declaration of Sir A. Grant in paragraph 19, that the Calcutta University has developed a higher Mathematical and Physical standard, the question of a preponderance of historical and philosophical development at Bombay, I leave to be determined after a careful consideration of Mr. Croft's Minute.

At paragraph 13, Sir A. Grant remarks that the difference, if any, between the B. A. Degree standards of the two Universities must consist rather in the particular standards adopted for each subject, than in the range of subject viewed numerically. I have no objection to accept this statement of the case, but I cannot accept the explanations which follow. Sir A. Grant may be correct in saying that the History standard at Bombay produces a more scientific knowledge than can be derived from Schmitz's Greece and Rome, and Macfarlane's British India; but this would appear to imply that a knowledge of the facts contained in these books is all that is acquired by, and expected of, successful B. A. candidates in the Calcutta University. In the first place, with respect to Indian History, the British period is only one out of the three prescribed. The text-book studied for the other two being that of Elphinstone—a work which, however its merits as a whole may be criticised, is generally allowed to be the most satisfactory account of the Mahomedan dynasties;—and though Macfarlane is the book placed in the hands of students, the meagre accounts therein contained are illustrated and explained in lecture by reference to the more copious Histories of Mill, Duff, Malcolm, and others. Secondly, it is well known that, at the Presidency College at least, Schmitz's books have been entirely discarded in favour of the far more scientific treatises of Liddell and Smith, which are recommended by Cambridge tutors to candidates for classical honors at that University. And here, again, the lectures are invariably supplemented by notes and explanations derived from the more modern and philosophical views of Momrusen, Merivale, and Grote.

I still claim a general superiority for the four years' course at Calcutta over the three years' course at Bombay; and, in support of this claim, I would refer to the examination papers of each University for the Degree of B. A., as given in their respective calendars. I did not intend to express to Mr. Monteath any opinion on the standard for Honors and the Degree of M. A. at the two Universities, nor do I think it necessary to do so now. Sir A. Grant admits that the Calcutta standard is higher in Mathematics, and the claim he puts forward for pre-eminence at Bombay in History and Philosophy, is fully discussed in the Minute by Mr. Croft, which I enclose.

Memorandum by A. W. CROFT, Esq., Professor, Presidency College, Calcutta, on Sir A. GRANT's letter No. 2552 of 9th December 1867,—dated 29th January 1868.

The deductions which Sir A. Grant draws from a comparison of the standards at the several examinations in Calcutta and in Bombay in the subject of Philosophy, seem to me to be wholly unfounded. Following Sir A. Grant's plan, I will consider in their order the three examinations in this subject:—

I.—First Examination in Arts.

At Calcutta an elementary knowledge of Mental and Moral Science, as contained in the two treatises of Abercrombie, is required; at Bombay, a knowledge of Logic. On this Sir A. Grant remarks (No. 10. d.)—"That the subject of Logic in an ordinary compendium, with easy questions in logical analysis, is probably as hard and more improving than those very feminine treatises on Psychology and Morals by Dr. Abercrombie."

I agree with Sir A. Grant in thinking Logic a more 'improving' subject than Mental and Moral Science for this examination. The doctrines of the former are definite, and, with few exceptions, which would not form part of an elementary knowledge, universally received. Both the latter subjects are beset with conflicting questions at the very outset. In lieu of a simple explanation of the terms and processes involved in reasoning, joined to an analysis of formulæ of almost algebraical simplicity, the student of Mental Science not only finds himself in a new intellectual region, but has to balance himself, if not to decide, between two contradictory systems, which imply radically different views of the most fundamental questions. The result too commonly is that the beginner, who requires for this purpose powers of judgment and of criticism impossible at his age, either rejects with a contemptuous indifference which they do not deserve those systems which are opposed to his text-books, or rushes into Materialism and Utilitarianism from the mere love of novelty. For this reason I should be glad to see Logic substituted for Mental and Moral Science in the First Arts Examination. A further advantage would be that the familiarity with Psychological terms and questions, which Logic pre-supposes, would be a valuable aid to the future study of Mental and Moral Science for the B. A. Degree.

So far, therefore, I concur in Sir A. Grant's remarks. But if the question be of the relative difficulty of the two standards at Calcutta and at Bombay, I strongly dissent from his views. It is just because I consider Mental and Moral Science too hard for the immature intellects of First Arts Students that I would recommend the substitution of Logic in its place. The comprehension of definitions and the analysis of formulæ are quite within the grasp of those who are familiar with Euclid and Grammar. But it requires a far higher mental exertion to criticise rival systems; and I maintain that such an exercise should not be expected until students have become, in some degree, familiar with the subject-matter of the criticism, and this familiarity Logic helps to give. Logic is a more improving study for First Arts Students, precisely because it is easier.

II.—The B. A. Examination.

The text-books at Calcutta are—

Payne's Mental Philosophy.
Wayland's Moral Philosophy.
Whately's Logic.

At Bombay—

Whately's Logic	...	...	Logic.
Thomson's Laws of Thought	...	...	Logic.
Mill's Logic, Books I., II.	...	...	Logic.
Butler's Analogy, Part I.	...	...	Natural Theology.
Butler's Sermons ...	...	...	Moral Science.

In this examination Logic, as might be expected from its introduction into the First Arts course, is more completely treated at Bombay than at Calcutta: books representing three different systems are introduced by the former University, and thereby the critical powers of the students are developed. But this superiority is more apparent than real. Although Whately's Logic is the only text-book adopted by the Calcutta University, yet, full as that work is of unsound and inaccurate doctrine, it is not to be expected that either teacher or examiner should be contented with the one-sided and imperfect knowledge which this treatise gives. Even in those colleges where, through deficiency in the instructive staff, no separate lectures are given in this subject, the students know well that, in order to attain distinction, it is necessary to supplement Whately's errors and omissions by a knowledge of more recognised authorities.

And here a word may be said about the text-books used in the Calcutta University, which Sir A. Grant stigmatises in one instance as 'feminine.' It is to be deplored that the present text-books in Mental and Moral Science are as bad as they can possibly be. Not only are they utterly wanting in the critical spirit, and far in arrear of the present state of knowledge, but they possess the still graver fault of being distinctly sectarian in tone and treatment, basing a science which should be the common property of the human race upon a particular set of religious convictions. This, however, is only an accident of the system; and the objection will disappear as soon as better text-books are introduced into the course—a change which cannot be too urgently advocated. In one point of view, indeed, there is an advantage even in the inferiority of the text-books, since the examination and exposure of their imperfections encourage improving discussion in the class-room, and foster the growth of the critical spirit. But this result could manifestly be better attained by the use of improved text-books.

In Moral Science Wayland's Moral Philosophy at Calcutta is balanced against Butler's Sermons at Bombay. And on this point the Calcutta system seems to me to be far superior. In Calcutta a knowledge of the whole body of Moral Science is required from candidates, the prescribed text-book being (as above explained) imperfect, but covering the whole range of the subject, and its imperfections being easily capable of correction in the lecture-room. The Bombay system is defective in several points,—

First.—The test-book in use there is not, as at Calcutta, an exposition and criticism of the views of all those who have created Moral Science, but the particular system of one of them. It follows, therefore, that while in Calcutta the critical spirit is fostered by the comparison of different systems, the dogmatic spirit is encouraged by the exclusive study of a single system in Bombay. And it must be remembered that, doubtful as the principles of Moral Science are, the absence of criticism in this, as in Mental Science, is a fatal error. Within the 150 years that have elapsed since Butler preached, Moral Science has not stood still; and the error of one who, at the present day, should neglect Utilitarianism in Moral, and the Physiological method in Mental Science is comparable to that of teaching the Ptolemaic system of Astronomy, or the emission,—theory of Light.

Secondly.—The form into which the work is thrown detracts from its usefulness. It is composed of a number of sermons, each treating of a special subject, and hence it necessarily leaves out a body of doctrines, which are essential to the true comprehension of the science. It may be doubted whether more than four sermons (I., II., III., VIII.) have made any really valuable contribution to Moral Science, and how small a part of the science is contained in an examination of 'the Social Nature of Man,' 'the Supremacy of Conscience,' and 'Resentment,' those who have studied the subject best know.

Thirdly.—The system of Butler being, so far as it goes, complete in itself, and implying no relation to previous or subsequent thinkers, does not require a knowledge of the History of Moral Science; but the Calcutta system renders this knowledge essential. For these reasons, the practice of this University, viz., reserving Butler's Sermons for the honor course as one out of several works on Moral Science, seems to me to be far preferable.

The remaining subjects of examination are Mental Science at Calcutta, and Butler's Analogy, Part I. (i. e., Natural Theology), at Bombay. It is almost absurd to compare these two subjects as instruments of intellectual discipline. Mental Science is by far the most difficult subject which can be taken up in this department. Not only does it necessitate a comparison of conflicting theories at the outset, but it requires the most careful analysis in the verification of each fact. Honor students who take up both subjects spend six months upon Mental Science for every one which they devote to Natural Theology. The experience of every teacher and of every student will confirm this statement.

Again, the Calcutta course covers the whole of its subject; but, at Bombay, only a small part of Natural Theology is demanded. The 'Argument from Analogy' is but one out of many; and it may be added that one has seldom heard of a sceptic who has been convinced by it, or of a thinker who has acknowledged its logical soundness. Hence Butler's Analogy, since it involves no comparison of different arguments, is far inferior as an exercise of the judgment to the study of Mental Science.

On the whole, therefore, it would be just to transfer to the Calcutta standard the 'decided superiority' which Sir A. Grant attributes, with so little reason, to Bombay. The apparent superiority of the latter in Logic almost disappears in practice, while the wide subjects of Mental and Moral Science are beyond comparison better instruments of intellectual training than the fragmentary knowledge which is given in Butler's Analogy and Sermons.

III.—Examination for Honors in Arts.

It is on the subject of this examination that Sir A. Grant's conclusions are most conspicuously fallacious. He bases his remarks on the fact that History and Philosophy, which are the subjects of distinct examinations in Calcutta, are united in the Bombay course. Hence he concludes that "the student who obtains his M. A. in History, or in Mental and Moral Philosophy, at Calcutta, obtains it on twice as easy terms as would be allowed him in Bombay." Without discussing the wisdom of bringing into one examination, for which a single year's reading is supposed to be sufficient, two subjects of such wide generality as History and Philosophy, it is only necessary to compare the two standards of Philosophy, in order to see how far short of Calcutta the Bombay University falls.

At Calcutta there are four fixed subjects,—

1.—Mental Science.
2.—Moral Science.
3.—Logic.
4.—Natural Theology, and one optional subject, viz.,
5.—History of Philosophy, or Evidences of Christianity.

At Bombay there is one fixed subject—

1.—Logic, and one optional subject, viz.,
2.—History of Philosophy, or Evidences of Christianity.

Now, to say that Calcutta prescribes three more subjects than Bombay is not to exhaust the whole extent of the difference. The real significance of the comparison lies in the additional subjects which the Calcutta University requires. These are,—Mental Science, Moral Science, and Natural Theology, that is to say, that those sciences whose principles are the subjects of the keenest controversy, whose deductions require the most careful system of verification, and whose study consequently affords the finest intellectual discipline, are precisely those which the University of Bombay excludes from its course. I trust that Bombay is the only University in the world in which Philosophy suffers such a pernicious mutilation.

It is no answer to my objection to say that this defect is supplied, at least in part, by the introduction of the History of Philosophy. The History of Philosophy is distinct from the Science of Mind, inasmuch as it is a history of the methods and principles which different thinkers have applied to the Science of Mind. It does not enter in any detail into the doctrines which have been derived from such principles, and which form the body of Mental Science. Still the History of Philosophy is a most valuable study, only it must not be supposed to include and to supersede the Science of Mind. So far, therefore, as the University of Bombay demands a knowledge of the History of Philosophy, it is fulfilling the conditions which justify its existence.

But what is the fact? That University unhappily does not insist upon even such a fragmentary knowledge of Mental Science as the History of Philosophy can give. It allows the substitution of the Evidences of Christianity—a subject utterly worthless in point of mental training as being an attempt to prove a foregone conclusion, which many may and do object to receive. The result of such a course of study is to promote the growth of dogmatism, and to stifle that spirit of free and critical inquiry for which the Calcutta course is so admirable a training.

It follows that the only important subject of the Bombay system is Logic, while (not to speak of Natural Theology) Calcutta adds Mental and Moral Science, subjects, each of which, when scientifically treated require at least as much attention as Logic does. My own experience has shown me that Mental Science demands as much study as the other two together. I am, therefore, fully justified in saying that the Calcutta course of Philosophy is at least three times as hard as that of Bombay.

I need not dwell on the relative difficulty of the standards of History in the two Universities; but the superiority of Calcutta seems to be almost equally conspicuous. As far as a knowledge of facts, viz., of battles, laws, literature, and manners is concerned, the standard is the same. But it cannot be denied that History becomes a more valuable, because a more critical training, when studied in connection with the growth of constitutional principles, the history of civilization, and the canons of historical criticism, all which subjects are prescribed by the University of Calcutta, and by her only.

To sum up my remarks, I would therefore urge—

(1.)—That the subject of Logic prescribed by the University of Bombay in the First Arts Examination is an easier, and, therefore, a better course than the corresponding subjects of Mental and Moral Science required in Calcutta.

(2.)—That the subjects of Philosophy required for the B. A. Examination at Bombay are one-sided and fragmentary, and do not furnish that intellectual discipline which is the most valuable result of the Calcutta course.

(3.)—That the standard of examination for honors (or for the M. A. Degree) in Calcutta is immeasurably superior to that of Bombay, both in the quantity of knowledge required and in the intellectual training which attends its study. In Bombay an undue preponderance is given to Logic, while the principles of that far more difficult science upon which Logic depends are utterly ignored. The result is that a student may obtain the highest honors in Philosophy, who is nevertheless ignorant of all that is elsewhere commonly understood by the term. To expose such an anomaly is to condemn the system that supports it.

Remarks by the Revd. K. M. BANNERJEA, Member of the Syndicate of the Calcutta University, on the Sanscrit Standards of the Universities of Calcutta and Bombay, with reference to Sir A. GRANT's letter No. 2552 of 9th December 1867.

Sir A. Grant says (paragraph 17) "the list of Sanscrit books in the Calcutta standard (as an alternative for English) appears long, but several of them are taken up at Bombay in the lower examination. Competent authorities inform me that the standard for M. A. at Bombay, which has to be taken up plus English, is, on the whole, more difficult than the Sanscrit standard at Calcutta, which is taken up separately."

Comparing the text-books of the two Universities for the current academical year (1867-68), I find thirteen books in the honor examination list of the Calcutta University, and four in that of Bombay. Two of the Calcutta honor books only (the Uttararámacharita and the Sacuntalá) are found in the Bombay lower examination list of the same year, viz., the Uttararámacharita in the B. A., and Sacuntalá in the First Arts. And those two are among the easiest in the list, they would certainly be so in the Western Presidency, since we find from a note at the head of the Bombay list that the Prakrit passages are not examined in there. When the Calcutta list has nine books in excess of the Bombay list, it must be somewhat bold to claim for Bombay a harder honor-test in Sanscrit than Calcutta. Of the thirteen Calcutta books, the Kiratarjuniya and Naishadha may be estimated as more than equal to the portions of the Rig Veda and Vedant Sutra, with the Sarirakabhashya in the Bombay list for 1867. The other two of the Bombay list are not more difficult than the Vircharita and the Kadambari of Calcutta. Our list, therefore, has nine books clearly in excess, which, taken together, are certainly not inferior to the whole four books in the Bombay list. Notwithstanding the allegation of "competent authorities" in Bombay, I must therefore adhere to the opinion that the Calcutta honor standard in Sanscrit is twice as high as the Bombay standard in that language. Bombay, however, is entitled to the credit of adding an English standard to the Sanscrit; but it must be remembered that the Sanscrit honor standard of Calcutta includes an English essay of sufficient difficulty to become the work of one whole day, and that the four books of the Bombay honor standard in English are much lower than the six honor books in English of Calcutta, and not higher than the four books of our First Arts of the same academical year. Our honor student of this year in Sanscrit has already, at the B. A. Examination, passed a harder test in English than the Bombay honor standard in the same language; and if he succeed in the Sanscrit honor, he will also have passed a standard in this latter language twice as high as that of the sister Presidency.

Of the B. A. tests in Sanscrit for the current academical year of the two Universities, the Calcutta standard is decidedly higher than the Bombay one. It will not, I suppose, be considered unfair to hold the Uttararamacharita and Dasakumaracharita of Bombay to be in the aggregate equal to the Bhattikavya and Kavyaprakasa of Calcutta, and all scholars will allow that the Sisupalabadha of Calcutta is infinitely harder than the Ritusanhara of Bombay.

Of the First Arts tests for the same year, a comparison can scarcely be instituted with any fairness, because the new rule for excluding vernaculars from that examination, although already enforced in Calcutta, was apparently not so enforced at Bombay, where "persons who matriculated before the close of 1863 might be examined (in the First Arts until 1870, and the B. A. until 1871) in Portuguese, Marathi, Gujrati, Canarese, Hindustani or Sindhi.

Report of a Sub-Committee appointed by the Madras Syndicate to consider SIR A. GRANT'S letter to the Government of Bombay, No. 2552, dated the 9*th December* 1867, published in the ATHENÆUM and DAILY NEWS of 25*th May* 1868.

In a letter to the Government of Bombay, Sir A. Grant institutes an elaborate, and in some respects, exhaustive, comparison of the different standards adopted in Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay for the University Examinations of those Presidencies. But it appears to us that there is a fundamental error underlying this comparison, which vitiates the whole argument.

2. It will, we think, be allowed by all that the difficulty of passing any examination depends on three main considerations,—1*st*, the subjects in which the candidate is examined; 2*nd*, the nature of the papers set in these subjects; and 3*rd*, the minimum proportion of marks which the candidate is obliged to obtain in order to pass. Sir A. Grant's fundamental error, as it seems to us, is that he deals with the first only of these considerations; whereas the other two are equally important, or rather have more influence than the first, in determining the real difficulty of the examination. Arguing that one examination is more difficult than another, simply because the list of subjects in which the candidates are tested is longer, is much the same as declaring that one book must be more difficult than another, because it is bigger, without taking into consideration the subject or character of the composition.

3. But there are one or two other points which it will be well to consider before proceeding to compare the Madras and Bombay examinations. Sir A. Grant claims credit for his own University, as compared with that of Madras, on the following grounds:—first, that all examinations are held in the Presidency town; second, that a classical language is required both for the F. A. and B. A. Examinations; third, that a strict oral examination is exacted at all stages of the University course; and fourth, that in the Matriculation Examination, no text-books are selected in language, the papers bearing on the language generally.

4. He allows, with regard to the first point, that Bombay is, from its limited area, in a more favorable position than either Calcutta or Madras, and this no doubt is so; but we submit that it is open to doubt whether the Bombay practice is, as regards the earlier examinations, more beneficial than that of the sister Universities. Two issues then may be taken on this question. Is the practice desirable? and if so, is it, in the case of Madras, feasible? One great object, it appears to us, of our Indian Universities, is to stimulate education throughout the length and breadth of the land, and therefore any practice which directly tends to diminish the number of candidates must be regarded with suspicion. No one can doubt that bringing the University Examinations to their very doors induces a large number of students in the Mofussil to present themselves for examination, who would never dream of doing so if they were obliged to take a long and expensive journey to the Presidency town. But even granting that some advantages may be derived from centralizing the examination, would not the difficulties in our case be so great as almost to amount to an impossibility? Take the case of the students at Vizagapatam or Berhampore in the north, of Mangalore in the west, and Tinnevelly in the south. We venture to say that not one in ten of students otherwise able to pass the examination would be induced to risk the loss of time and money and bear the fatigue inseparable from the long journey to the Presidency and back, and this, too, with the prospect of having to repeat the journey the next year for a higher examination if successful, or for the same examination if the candidate failed to pass. In fact, the difficulties are so great that the influence of the University Examinations over Mofussil schools, which has already produced such satisfactory results, would be seriously impaired.

5. Another consideration too may be mentioned in passing. Supposing that the Mofussil student did come up to Madras in large numbers, how could the Matriculation Examination be conducted? Last year we had upwards of a thousand candidates examined, and when we consider the rapid increase in numbers of the last few years, what crowds may not be anticipated some ten years hence? It would be difficult in the extreme to find buildings capable of containing the examinees, or proper superintendence to secure the integrity of the examination.

6. The next point, a classical language being compulsory at the F. A. and B. A. Examinations, is one of considerable importance, and is at this moment engaging the anxious attention of the Madras Senate. Admitting, however, the propriety of substituting the classical languages for the vernaculars, it may be urged in behalf of Madras that if she is later than Bombay in adopting the change, it is because she is differently circumstanced in this respect. In Madras the change, if made, will involve a sacrifice. The principal vernaculars of Bombay—Guzarathi and Marathi—are, we are informed, poor languages, utterly devoid of anything that can, even by courtesy, be called a literature; whereas the great merits of the Tamil language and literature are allowed even by those who are most anxious for the introduction of Latin and Sanscrit. Something too may be advanced in favour of Telugu, and even of Canarese and Malayalam, so that it is incumbent on us to proceed with great deliberation in following the example set by the other Indian Universities in this respect.

7. We may also observe here that after all, these claims to superiority rest only on a question of time. One might read Sir A. Grant's letter and remain under the impression that the Bombay University had always required all candidates to repair to the Presidency, and in the higher examination to take up a classical language; whereas the fact is that the examination held last November was the first in which the former point was insisted upon, and even now candidates may obtain degrees in Arts, who take up Guzarathi, Marathi, or Portuguese. We believe that we are right in stating that a large proportion of those who passed the recent B. A. Examination did in fact present themselves for examination in these vernaculars, and that this privilege will be granted for a year or two more to those who matriculated before a certain date.

8. We now proceed to the third point. No one, we suppose, will deny that an oral examination, if skilfully conducted, is a very valuable test; but then everything depends on the mode in which it is managed. We confine our vivâ voce examination to the B. A. Degree, which is indeed a necessity in our case, as the requisite machinery for a strict oral examination at the various Mofussil stations is not available; but admitting the value of the thing, if well done, it may, we think, pertinently be asked what strictness is possible when there is such a large number of candidates as presented themselves even at the last examination in Bombay? Sir A. Grant does not tell us, and the Bombay calendar is equally silent, how many days are devoted to this branch of the examination; but to do it thoroughly (and if imperfectly done, it is useless) in the case of 500 candidates, the number recently examined at Bombay, would require a great number of days, and would, therefore, make the detention of the Mofussil candidates a still greater burden to them. If, on the other hand, the number of days is reduced to very small limits, a large number of examiners must be employed, and this would at once introduce an element of uncertainty and inequality, as it is impossible to suppose that so many examiners would ask questions of the same difficulty, or adopt the same standard in estimating the value of the answers.

9. As to the fourth point, it may perhaps appear at first sight that the Bombay rule is superior to our own, but we may remark here that it has always been the practice in this University to set a good many questions in each paper bearing upon the language generally (in a recent instance almost undue stress was laid on this point), so that our examination is not after all so very different from that of Bombay as Sir A. Grant states it to be. Besides it may be urged, as far as the question of mere difficulty is concerned, that the absence of text-books need not make the examination any harder; for if so, why are books named for the F. A. and B. A. Examinations? Surely it will not be contended that these examinations are easier than that for Matriculation. It is possible to ask as many and as difficult general questions when there are text-books as when there are none; and such questions as require thought, appreciation of an author, and examination of arguments in contradistinction to memory and practice in reading English, can only be set when text-books are given.

10. But returning to the comparison of standards adopted in the Universities of Madras and Bombay, let us first consider the third criterion. What is the minimum proportion of marks to be obtained by a candidate to entitle him to pass? On this point the Madras calendar is explicit; it lays down the rule that the candidate must obtain one-third of the marks allotted to English, one-fourth in each of the other subjects, and one-third on the whole. Definite rules are also given as to the length and difficulty of the papers, so that it is possible to estimate with great exactness the amount of proficiency required by the University. But on this point Sir A. Grant is silent, and we can hardly forbear drawing the inference that he has nothing to say on this head likely to establish the superiority of his own University.

11. Passing on to the first and second criteria of difficulty, and confining our attention for the present to the Matriculation Examination, we find ample reason for denying the alleged superiority of Bombay. Thus in English, at Madras there are two or three-hour papers, at Bombay there is but one. Bombay requires a certain amount of grammar, idiom, and structure plus ability to give the meaning of a passage or passages which the candidate has not seen before. Madras requires a more thorough knowledge of grammar, idiom, and structure plus ability to give the meaning of difficult passages which the candidate has seen before. Take for instance the papers of 1865. In the Bombay paper, the first question is undeniably more difficult than any similar question in the Madras paper; but the other questions are as undeniably fewer in number and less searching in character.

12. Next with regard to Arithmetic, Sir A. Grant states that Madras excludes Reduction, Practice, and Simple and Compound Interest. A glance at the Madras question papers will show that this is not the case. The Madras calendar places Proportion amongst its requirements, and where Arithmetic is rationally taught, Proportion includes more than it seems to do at Bombay. On comparing the papers for past years, we find it difficult to say that the examination at either University is more difficult than at the other. The Madras questions are certainly neater than those at Bombay.

13. In History, Sir A. Grant is of opinion that "Elementary History, including Greece, Rome, England, and India," must necessarily be more difficult than "the leading facts of the histories of England and India." This is a mere assumption. The question pertinent to the issue is, which University requires more study? It is obvious that an examination in "the leading facts" of the history of one country may require more study that one in "the Elementary History" of the whole world. When we compare the question papers, it is clear that Bombay requires a mere smattering of knowledge, as easily acquired as forgotten. A single three-hour paper at Bombay disposes of History and Geography. At Madras there is one three-hour paper in English History, another two-hour paper in Indian History, and a third two-hour paper in Indian History, and a third two-hour paper in Geography. Thus three hours are devoted at one place to testing the same description of knowledge, which it requires seven hours to elicit at the other! It is in the face of this fact that Sir A. Grant claims the superiority for Bombay.

14. In Euclid, Bombay requires one book more than Madras, but Sir A. Grant is wrong in implying that deductions are not set at Madras. The fact is that deductions are set, and that they are so difficult as to demand a much closer study of the principles of Geometry than is required for the Bombay papers, though they include an extra book. We must, indeed, here admit that in the scheme of study for Matriculation, the calendar does not mention deductions, but an examination in Euclid without deductions could hardly be contemplated by any University, and a single glance at the examination papers contained, it must be recollected, in the very same volume which lays down the rules, would have sufficed to show Sir A. Grant how thoroughly this branch of the subject has been handled at Madras.

15. With regard to Elementary Natural Philosophy, the University of Bombay certainly requires what is not required either at Calcutta or Madras. The question whether the study of Natural Philosophy should begin before or after Matriculation, is one on which opinions will be divided; and our own view is that the study of this subject is better deferred to a later period of the student's course; but we are here concerned only with the additional difficulty imported into the examination by the introduction of this subject, and this, if we may judge from the questions set, does not appear to be very great. All that is contemplated appears to be that the student should be acquainted with a few bare facts, easily learnt by heart, and we cannot believe that to acquire this knowledge demands much time or attention, or is likely to prove of much benefit to the learner.

16. As for the other subjects in which Sir A. Grant seems to think that the two examinations are on a level, the only thing that be done is to sit down and work out a few papers set in each. One of our number has done so in Algebra, and has no hesitation in saying that Madras requires more skill and practice than Bombay.

17. On the whole, therefore, we are convinced that our examination, far from requiring a year's less study than the corresponding one at Bombay, as Sir A. Grant declares, demands in fact from candidates a much more thorough acquaintance with the subjects, and that if the Bombay scheme covers a larger area, it only seeks to make up by diffusion for what it wants in depth.

18. No fair comparison can be instituted with regard to the First Examination in Arts, as the period of the under-graduate's course at which it falls differs in the two Universities; but a comparison of the calendars will certainly produce the impression that in the most important subjects, it is not easier to pass at Madras than at Bombay. Sir A. Grant's assertion that the Madras test "is scarcely, if at all, higher than the Bombay Matriculation Standard," will at once be seen to be without foundation.

19. Thus in Mathematics, although Trigonometry is introduced, it is certainly easier to pass at Bombay than at Madras. Consider the papers set in Bombay in 1865 and 1866; in the former at least 30 marks out of 42 allowed for Euclid are given for book-work, and in the latter at least 42 out of 58. And what is the nature of the deductions? Those set in the more recent paper are such as would have been worked in any class where Euclid is taught on a reasonable system, and are therefore little more than so much book-work. The questions on Trigonometry are of the very simplest description, and do not require any deep knowledge of the subject: a few weeks' study of the smallest manual on this subject would be sufficient to carry a student triumphantly through the paper. Besides, as 58 marks out of 100 are given to Euclid alone, a man might pass fairly without any Trigonometry at all. At Madras, on the other hand, at the recent examination, it was only just possible for a man to pass who did all the book-work with perfect accuracy, the general tone of the paper being such that to obtain high marks in it would be impossible for any one not largely gifted with mathematical ability.

20. Much stress cannot, of course, be laid upon an individual instances; but it may be here remarked that a Bombay under-graduate, precluded from presenting himself for the F. A. Examination at Bombay, by the rule that requires all candidates to be students at a recognized institution, came up to the last examination at Madras, and, though so distinguished for his Mathematics in Bombay as to hold the appointment of Mathematical Tutor at a High School and Provincial College, only just succeeded in satisfying our examiner in that subject, and acquitted himself so indifferently on the whole that he stood very near the bottom of the second class.

21. As to the B. A. Degree, Sir A. Grant disposes of the question in the most summary manner, saying that the Madras standard is of a lower calibre altogether. This is not quite so clear however. Suppose a Bombay candidate selects for his optional subjects History, Political Economy, Dynamics and Hydrostatics, and the Madras candidate selects Natural Philosophy, the comparison stands thus,— Madras.—English, Latin, Sanscrit, or Vernacular, Algebra, Euclid, Conic Sections, Statics, Trigonometry, Hydrostatics, Dynamics, Astronomy, Moral Philosophy, History of England, Selected portion of History, e. g., 1868, and Guizot's History of Civilization.

Bombay.—English, Latin, or Sanscrit, Algebra, Euclid, Conic Sections, Mechanics, (1), Trigonometry, Hydrostatics, Dynamics, Arithmetic, Political Economy, England in 16th, 17th, and 18th centuries; (2), India from invasion of Baber to death of Aurungzebe, (3), and History of Mahrattas.

22. The first sight of this table makes one wonder how it could possibly be asserted that the Madras standard is of a lower calibre altogether, and reference to the calendars to see how the standard is carried out by examiners, makes the assertion appear still more extraordinary. As to the standard itself, the points to be noticed are,—(1) at Madras a choice is allowed between a classical and vernacular language, while at Bombay a classical language is obligatory. This choice does not make the examinee's work much easier; indeed, the term vernacular being almost a misnomer, it is abundantly clear, looking at the papers set, that the Tamil or Telugu candidate has quite as much to do for his degree as the Bombay candidate in Latin or Sanscrit.—(Vide Bombay Calendar, 1866-67.) (2.) The mathematical subjects run nearly pari passu, though the Madras requirements in several subjects are slightly higher, and notably the only equivalent for Astronomy in the Madras scheme is Arithmetic in that of Bombay. (3.) Moral Philosophy at Madras pairs off with Political Economy at Bombay, and no great advantage can be claimed on either side. (4.) The whole of English History at Madras against the 16th, 17th, and 18th centuries at Bombay. It may be urged that the selection of these centuries only is intended to make the examination more searching; but, looking again at the papers, the examiners do not seem to have taken much advantage of this. As to the other historical subjects, supposing the Bombay candidate to have taken up Indian History, the comparison is simply ridiculous. (See particularly Indian History questions, Bombay Calendar for 1866-67.)

23. Again, in another very important point Bombay is inferior to Madras. While the text-books in English selected at the two Universities seem much on a par, and the questions upon them agree pretty well as to difficulty, it must be observed that at Madras there are three papers against two at Bombay; the third Madras paper being upon English generally, with special reference to the history of the language. To this paper there is no parallel in the Bombay scheme, either in kind or in difficulty.

24. Where then, he may ask, is the alleged superiority? The advocates of Bombay can hardly take refuge in the classical language. In the first place our East Indian and European candidates frequently select Latin, and so place themselves on an equality with Bombay in this respect, and as to the Hindus, certainly our Tamil, Telugu, or Malayalam is at least as difficult as the Sanscrit standard at Bombay. Besides this, there is yet another consideration deserving of passing notice, and that is that at Bombay there are three optional subjects, while at Madras there is only one. This enables the Bombay candidate to consult his own inclinations and capabilities more than the Madras man has a chance of doing, and thus the examination is to a certain extent made easier to him.

25. As to the Degree of M. A., while Sir A. Grant has to admit the superiority of the Madras test, we must on our part admit the justness of his taunt that, whatever the merits of the standard may be, no one has yet come forward for the examination. It is, however, some consolation to know that, in all human probability, this reproach will be removed from us in the course of next year.

SANITARY MEASURES ADOPTED AT JEDDA.

Despatch from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, to His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Governor General of India in Council,—(Sanitary), No. 19, dated 4th June 1868.

I forward herewith, for the information of your Excellency in Council, copy of a letter from the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, dated the 13th April 1868, with a report addressed by Dr. Dickson to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, relative to the sanitary measures which have been adopted at Jedda.

From E. HAMMOND, Esq., Under Secy. of State for Foreign Affairs, to the Under Secretary of State for India,—dated 13th April 1868.

With reference to Mr. Egerton's letter of the 16th ultimo, I am directed by Lord Stanley to transmit to you herewith, to be laid before the Secretary of State for India in Council, a copy of a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, enclosing a report drawn up by Dr. Dickson relative to the sanitary measures adopted at Jedda.

From the Hon'ble H. ELLIOT, to Lord STANLEY,—No. 27, dated 29th March 1868.

I have the honor to inclose the copy of a letter from Dr. Dickson, reporting on sanitary measures which have been adopted at Jedda.

From Dr. E. D. DICKSON, to the Hon'ble H. ELLIOT,—No. 15, dated 27th March 1868.

I have the honor to inform your Excellency that the Board of Health has received a letter from Dr. Bimsenstein, Inspector of the Hedjaz Commission, dated Jedda, February 27th, announcing the safe arrival there of all the members of the Commission, and the nomination of Sanitary Agents, Méposés Sanitaires, and Health Guards at the several ports along the coast of Hedjaz and Yemen, and that all vessels touching at those ports are required to show a bill of health under penalty of the fine as established by the Ottoman Sanitary Regulations.

He describes, moreover, the manner in which the caravan of pilgrims will be superintended by medical officers on their return from Mecca, and then proceeds to say that, thanks to Nooree Effendee, the Governor of Jedda, the hygienic condition of that town has greatly improved since his last visit there, so that he hardly recognised the place again. The sea-board of Jedda is now lined by a well-built quay; the swamps which formerly surrounded the town have been filled up; the streets and bazaars within the city have been widened, made straight and covered over with planks to keep off the rays of the sun; a degree of cleanliness, utter unknown in other eastern towns, pervades the whole place, and an abundant stream supplies Jedda with fresh water. Nooree Effendee has effected this by repairing the water-conduits of "Tirash Yoosoof," which had been destroyed by the tank proprietors, as stated in the report of the Commission of 1866, and the water is now gratuitously distributed to the town by means of fourteen fountains.

Dr. Bimsenstein further stated that the health officers are well seconded in their work by the local authorities and by the people in general, who begin now to appreciate the advantages derived from their presence. Few pilgrims had gone there this year, viz.:—

The Board of Health now proposes to add to the improvements a lazaretto established on the Island of Camaran for ships and pilgrims that have to be put in quarantine in consequence of their being contaminated with cholera.

STATE OF TRADE WITH LADAKH.

Memorandum by Dr. H. Cayley, No. 4, dated Le, 2nd June 1868.

Continuation of Weekly Narrative.

As the Kullu and Rampore routes are still closed, and no news has come from Yarkand, trade is at present very limited in extent. The annexed tables show the exports from and imports into Ladakh during the past six months. The few articles by the Yarkand and Rampore routes came just as I left in November last. Merchandise to the value of nearly Rs. 18,000 has entered Ladakh from Cashmir and other parts of the Maharajah's territories, chiefly for exportation to Yarkand and Chantang. During the same period, the exports were of the value of Rs. 56,000. A small proportion has started for Kullu and Rampore, and the rest has gone to Cashmir and Yarkand. A large amount of Lhassa Brick Tea has been taken to Cashmir, and two merchants with tea, spices, cloth and skins started about one month ago for Yarkand.

2. The traders now in Le all speak of the fairness with which they are treated by the new Wazir, and say that they are subjected to none of the annoyances and unauthorised exactions formerly complained of.

Exports from Ladakh during six months ending May 31st, 1868.

MILITARY DEPARTMENT.

GENERAL ORDER BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL, DATED 30TH JULY 1868.

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General in Council has much satisfaction in directing the publication of the following despatches from the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State for India, communicating to the Government of India and to the Governments of Madras and Bombay, and to His Excellency Lieutenant General Sir Robert Napier, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., the expression of Her Majesty's most gracious acknowledgment of the services rendered by the Commander and the [illegible] pring discipline exhibited by the troops when in the field have contributed to the attainment of a success of no ordinary character.

3. It is with especial gratification that I find myself charged with the duty of conveying through your Excellency Her Majesty's thanks to the gallant Army of India, and I am commanded to desire that those thanks may be communicated in the most public manner to the entire service.

4. I have separately addressed the Governments of Madras and Bombay on the share which the Armies of those Presidencies have borne in the campaign; and I take occasion to request your Excellency to express to the Commander-in-Chief in India and to the Army of Bengal the high sense entertained by Her Majesty of the very efficient manner in which the Bengal Contingent was equipped and despatched to the Red Sea.

5. I take this opportunity of forwarding to your Excellency a copy of a letter, dated the 1st instant, which, in accordance with the commands of Her Majesty, I have addressed to Lieutenant General Sir Robert Napier on the termination of the operations of the Abyssinian Expeditionary Force.

I have, &c.,

(Signed) STAFFORD H. NORTHCOTE.

From the Right Hon'ble Sir STAFFORD H. NORTHCOTE, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, to His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Governor in Council, Fort St. George,—(Military), No. 70, dated 3rd July 1868.

I transmit for the information of your Lordship's Government a copy of a despatch,* which, in accordance with the commands of Her Majesty, I have this day addressed to the Governor General in Co[illegible] conveying to the Government and the Army of India the thanks of Her M[illegible] the service rendered by them in the conduct of the operations in Abyssin[illegible] nation of which in the most satisfactory manner has been recently [illegible] Maj[illegible]rnment.

*No. 233.

2. In doing so, I take the opportunity of tendering to your Excellency the cordial thanks of Her Majesty's Government for the exertions on the part of the Government of Bombay which have so largely contributed to this important result.

3. The energetic and able measures taken by you on the receipt of the instructions which I had the honor to communicate to you in my several telegraphic messages of the 1st, 13th, and 14th of August last, and in my secret despatch of the 16th of the same month, rendered it possible for the Expeditionary Force to take the field in sufficient time to accomplish the object of the campaign within the season during which active military operations could be carried on in Abyssinia.

4. I notice that, in your Excellency's telegraphic message of the 29th July, you stated, in answer to a question which I had addressed to you, that "the operations ought to commence by January in order to be finished in one season," and that you "could have the force ready in time, provided only that you could obtain animals, which should be collected immediately."

5. The authority to collect transport animals was conveyed to you by my telegraphic message of the 1st August, and the result was that Sir Robert Napier was enabled to land at Zoulla and to assume the command of the Expeditionary Force on the 3rd of January.

6. The precision with which the plans laid for the conduct of the Expedition were carried into execution has been throughout one of its most remarkable charac-

4. Her Majesty has observed with special pleasure the care which has been taken to provide for the wants of the sick and wounded; and, while rejoicing to learn that, under the blessing of God, the losses sustained in the campaign have been but trifling, desires me to convey to your Excellency Her thanks for this foresight, and at the same time to express Her gratification at hearing of the satisfactory progress of the wounded towards recovery.

5. Throughout the campaign, your Excellency has been well and ably supported by the divisional and other officers under your command, to whom, as well as to the officers employed in the Political Department, I am commanded to express Her Majesty's warmest acknowledgments.

6. Her Majesty desires me to convey to the troops, both European and Native, Her hearty thanks for the zeal, good humour, patience, and fortitude with which they have supported the severe labours and privations of the campaign; for the admirable discipline which has distinguished the entire force; and for the gallantry displayed by those who took part in the final struggle.

7. It is with peculiar gratification that I find myself charged with the duty of conveying these acknowledgments to the Native portion of the Army. They have taken a worthy place by the side of their English fellow soldiers in an operation on which the attention of Europe has been fixed, and have given the world a striking proof of the extent to which India contributes to the power of the British Empire.

ACT No. XVIII OF 1868.

An Act for investing the Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner of the Neilgherry Hills with the powers of a Court of Small Causes.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient that the Commissioner and the Assistant Commissioner of the Neilgherry Hills appointed under the provisions of Madras Act No. I of 1868 (for the appointment of a Commissioner for the administration of Civil and Criminal justice and for the superintendence and collection of the revenues on the Neilgherry Hills) should be invested with the powers of a Court of Small Causes constituted under the provisions of Act No. XI of 1865 (to consolidate and amend the law relating to Courts of Small Causes beyond the limits of the ordinary original Civil jurisdiction of the High Courts of Judicature); it is hereby enacted as follows :—

Power to invest Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner of Neilgherry Hills with Small Cause jurisdiction.

1. The Governor of Fort St. George in Council may, by notification in the local official Gazette, authorize the said Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner to exercise jointly or separately within the territorial limits of the jurisdiction of the said Commissioner the powers of a Judge of a Court of Small Causes constituted under the provisions of the said Act No. XI of 1865; but subject to the rules hereinafter referred to.

Power to make rules.

2. The said Governor in Council may frame rules providing for the distribution of business between the said Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner in their capacity of Judges of a Court of Small Causes, and generally for defining their duties and relative positions when acting in such capacity, and may also from time to time alter and add to the rules so made: Provided that such rules, alterations and additions are consistent with the provisions of this Act.

Opinion of Commissioner to prevail in case of difference.

3. Whenever there is a difference of opinion between the said Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner sitting together as aforesaid upon any question of fact, law or practice, or upon any usage having the force of law, the opinion of the Commissioner shall prevail.

Pending suits.

4. Suits and proceedings pending before the Civil Judge at Ootacamund, in his capacity of a Judge of a Court of Small Causes, when this Act comes into operation, shall be heard and determined by the said Commissioner or Assistant Commissioner in accordance with the rules to be made under section 2.

An Act to consolidate and amend the Law relating to Rent in Oudh.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to rent in Oudh and to other matters connected therewith; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

Short title and extent of Act.

1. This Act may be cited as "The Oudh Rent Act," and shall extend only to Oudh.

Repeal of laws, &c.

2. All laws, orders having the force of law and rules in force in Oudh, inconsistent with any of the provisions of this Act, are repealed.

Interpretation clause.

3. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context—

"Oudh."

"Oudh" means the territories under the administration of the Chief Commissioner of Oudh at the time of the passing of this Act:

"Court."

"Court" means any judicial officer presiding in a Court of revenue for the disposal of matters under this Act:

"Suit."

"Suit" means a suit under this Act:

"Assistant Commissioner."

"Assistant Commissioner" includes an Extra Assistant Commissioner:

"Land."

"Land" applies only to land assessed to the land-revenue, and includes land whereof the revenue has been assigned by Government: it also includes the ungathered produce of land, whether spontaneous or otherwise, and whether growing in earth or water:

"Revenue." "Revenue" means the money payable to the Government on account of land:

"Rent." "Rent" means the money or the portion of the produce of land, payable on account of the use or occupation of land, or on account of the use of water for irrigation:

"Proprietor." "Proprietor" does not include an under-proprietor. Where there are two private rights of property, one superior and the other subordinate, in the same land, "proprietor" means the holder of the superior right only:

"Under-proprietor." "Under-proprietor" means any person possessing a heritable and transferable right of property in land for which he is liable to pay rent:

"Under-proprietary right." "Under-proprietary right" means an under-proprietor's right in land:

"Tenant." "Tenant" means any person, not being an under-proprietor, who is liable to pay rent:

"Landlord." "Landlord" means any person to whom an under-proprietor or tenant is liable to pay rent:

"Representative." "Representative" means an heir or any other person taking by operation of law or by will a beneficial interest in the property of a deceased person. It includes the guardian of a minor and the legal curator of a lunatic or idiot: and

"Lumberdár." "Lumberdár" means any person who has executed an engagement for the payment of the revenue to Government, or for the payment to a landlord of the rent due from under-proprietors holding a sub-settlement.

Saving of written agreements. 4. Nothing in sections 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25 and 28 shall affect the terms of any agreement in writing heretofore or hereafter entered into respecting the subject-matter of the said sections respectively.

Index not to have force of law. Nothing in the Index to this Act shall be deemed to have the force of law.

CHAPTER II.

OF CERTAIN RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF LANDLORDS, UNDER-PROPRIETORS AND TENANTS.

Right of Occupancy.

Tenants having a right of occupancy. 5. Tenants who have lost all proprietary right, whether superior or subordinate, in the lands which they hold or cultivate, shall, so long as they pay the rent payable for the same according to the provisions of this Act, have a right of occupancy under the following rule:—

Rule.

Every such tenant, who, within thirty years next before the thirteenth day of February 1856, has been, either by himself, or by himself and some other person from whom he has inherited, in possession as proprietor in a village or estate, shall be deemed to possess a heritable but not a transferable right of occupancy in the land which he cultivated or held in such village or estate on the twenty-fourth day of August 1866: Provided that such land has not come into his occupation, or the occupation of the person from whom he has inherited, for the first time since the said thirteenth day of February 1856: Provided also that no such tenant shall have a right of occupancy in any village or estate in which he or any co-sharer with him possesses any under-proprietary right.

Nothing contained in the former part of this section shall affect the terms of any agreement in writing hereafter entered into between a landlord and tenant.

Loss of right of occupancy. 6. If a tenant having a right of occupancy be ejected, in accordance with the provisions of section 41, from the land in which he possesses such right, he shall thereupon lose his right of occupancy in such land.

Tenants' Right to Leases.

Tenant's right to a lease. 7. Every tenant is entitled to receive from his landlord a lease executed by him and containing the following particulars:—

The quantity of land; and, where the fields comprised in the lease have been numbered in a Government survey, the number of each field:

The term for which the lease is granted:

The amount of rent payable:

The instalments in which and the times at which the same is to be paid:

Any special conditions of the lease:

And, if the rent is payable in kind, the proportion of produce to be delivered, and the time, manner and place of delivery.

Lease to which tenant having right of occupancy is entitled. 8. Tenants having a right of occupancy are entitled to receive leases at rates of rent determined in accordance with the provisions contained in sections 32, 33 and 34.

Lease to which tenant not having right of occupancy is entitled. 9. Tenants not having a right of occupancy are entitled to leases only on such terms as may be agreed on between them and the landlord.

Landlords' Right to Counterparts.

Landlord entitled to counterpart. 10. Every landlord who grants a lease is entitled to receive from the tenant a counterpart executed by him.

Cancelment of Leases.

Cancelment of lease. 11. When any landlord or any tenant not having a right of occupancy fails to perform or observe any of the stipulations contained in the lease, such lease shall be liable to be cancelled by a decree.

If after such decree, the ejectment of the tenant is postponed in accordance with the provisions of section 38, he shall be liable, so long as he remains in occupation of the land comprised in the lease, to pay the rent reserved thereby.

Arrears of Revenue or Rent.

What to be deemed an arrear of revenue or rent.

Provided that, unless the proprietor and under-proprietor shall have otherwise agreed in writing, the rent payable to the former by the latter shall be held to become due one month before the date fixed for the payment of the revenue on account of the village in which the land in respect of which such rent is payable is situate, and to be payable in the same number of instalments as the said revenue; and the amount of each instalment of such rent shall bear the same proportion to the whole of such rent payable for the year as the amount of each instalment of such revenue bears to the whole of such revenue payable for the year.

Receipts.

Receipts for rent.

13. Receipts for rent and acknowledgments of the tender of rent shall specify the year or years on account of which it has been paid or tendered; and any refusal to make such specification shall be held to be a withholding of a receipt or acknowledgment.

If such receipt or acknowledgment is withheld from any under-proprietor or tenant without sufficient cause, he may recover compensation from the landlord not exceeding the amount so paid or tendered.

Deposit of Revenue or Rent in Court without Suit.

Power to pay into Court, without suit brought, amount of revenue or rent due.

14. If any co-sharer, under-proprietor or tenant having a right of occupancy, or holding under an unexpired lease or under an agreement or decree shall, at the place where the revenue or rent of the land held or cultivated by him is usually payable, tender to the person authorized to receive the same payment of the full amount of such revenue or rent due in respect of such land, and if such amount is not accepted, and a receipt in full forthwith granted, it shall be lawful for the co-sharer, under-proprietor or tenant, without any suit having been instituted against him, to deposit such amount in Court to the credit of the person authorized to receive it.

Such deposit shall, so far as regards the co-sharer, under-proprietor or tenant and all persons claiming through or under him, operate as a payment then made to the lumberdár or landlord of the amount so deposited.

Procedure on making and withdrawing such payment.

15. The Court shall receive such deposit on the written application of the co-sharer, under-proprietor or tenant or his recognized agent: the application shall bear a stamp of eight annas; and on such co-sharer, under-proprietor, tenant or agent, making a declaration in the form set forth in Schedule A hereto annexed, or as near thereto as circumstances will admit, the Court shall give him a receipt for the deposit.

Such declaration shall be verified in the manner prescribed for the verification of plaints in the Code of Civil Procedure, and the provisions of section 24 of the said Code shall apply to the person making the verification.

Upon receiving the money so deposited, the Court shall issue to the person to whose credit it has been deposited a notice in the form set forth in Schedule B hereto annexed.

Service of notice.

Such notice shall be served by the proper officer without the payment of any fee upon the person to whom it is addressed or upon his recognized agent.

In the absence of any such agent, it may be served by putting up a copy of the same at the Court-house, and another copy at the ordinary place of residence within the jurisdiction of the Court of such person, or if there be no such place, at the place where the revenue or rent is usually paid to the lumberdár or landlord, as the case may be, for the land in respect of which the money has been deposited.

If the person on whom such notice is served or his recognized agent appears and applies that the money in deposit be paid to him, it shall immediately be paid accordingly.

Limitation of suits for balance of revenue or rent.

16. Whenever a deposit has been made under the provisions of this Act, no suit shall be brought against the depositor or his representative on account of any revenue or rent which accrued due in respect of the land last hereinbefore mentioned prior to the date of the deposit, unless such suit is instituted within six months from the date of the service of the notice mentioned in section 15.

Compensation for non-acceptance of revenue or rent.

17. If, at the time of passing the decision in any such suit, the Court is satisfied that the full amount of revenue or rent due at the time of the deposit was tendered to, and was not accepted by, the lumberdár or landlord or his recognized agent, as the case may be, or that a receipt or acknowledgment was withheld for such amount without sufficient cause, the Court may award to such depositor compensation from the lumberdár or landlord, not exceeding the amount so paid or tendered.

If the Court be satisfied that the amount of the deposit was less than the amount of revenue or rent due, the Court shall pay the amount of the deposit to the lumberdár or landlord, and shall make a decree for the balance due by the depositor.

Illegal Enforcement of Payment of Rent.

Compensation to under-proprietor or tenant for illegal enforcement of payment.

18. If payment of rent or of any sum in excess of the rent legally claimable is illegally enforced, and any under-proprietor or tenant institutes a suit to recover compensation for such enforcement, the Court may award to him compensation not exceeding the sum of Rupees two hundred, in addition to any amount for which it makes a decree in respect of such payment.

An award of compensation under the former part of this section shall not bar any prosecution to which the person enforcing such payment may be liable under any law for the time being in force.

Abatement of Rent.

Suits for abatement of rent by under-proprietor or tenant.

19. No suit for an abatement of rent shall be brought by any under-proprietor or tenant, except on the ground that the area of the land has been diminished by diluvion, or on some ground specified in any lease, agreement or decree under which he holds:

Provided that, if the under-proprietor hold a sub-settlement in a revenue-paying estate, no such abatement shall be allowed to the under-proprietor unless a remission of revenue has been allowed on the same ground and by competent authority in the same estate.

Remission of Rent.

When Court may allow remission from rent.

20. Notwithstanding anything contained in sections 19, 35 and 36, the Court, in making a decree for an arrear of rent, may allow such remission from the rent payable by any under-proprietor or tenant as appears equitable, if the area of the land in his occupation has been diminished by diluvion or otherwise, or if the produce of such land has been diminished by drought or hail, or other calamity beyond his control, to such an extent that the full amount of rent payable by him cannot, in the opinion of the Court, be equitably decreed:

Provided that, if the under-proprietor hold a sub-settlement, or if the tenant hold a lease for a term of not less than five years or have a right of occupancy in a revenue-paying estate, no such remission shall be allowed to him unless a remission of revenue shall have been allowed on the same ground and by competent authority in the same estate.

Relinquishment of Land.

Relinquishment of land by tenant.

21. Every tenant shall continue liable for the rent of the land in his holding, unless on or before the fifteenth day of May in any year he gives notice to the landlord or his recognized agent of his desire to relinquish such land, and relinquishes it accordingly, or unless it has been let to any other person by such landlord or agent.

If the landlord or his recognized agent refuse to receive such notice, the tenant may apply to the tahsildár or proper officer, and written notice of such desire shall thereupon be served on such landlord or agent, and the tenant shall pay the costs of service.

The notice shall, if practicable, be served personally on the landlord or agent. But if he cannot be found, service may be made by affixing the notice at his usual place of residence, or, if he does not reside in the district wherein the land is situate, at the chaupál or other conspicuous place in the village wherein the land is situate.

Compensation for Tenants' Improvements.

Tenants' right to compensation for improvements.

22. If any tenant, or the person from whom he has inherited, make any such improvements on the land in his occupation as are hereinafter mentioned, the rent payable by him or his representative shall not be enhanced, nor shall he or his representative be ejected from the same land unless and until he or his representative, as the case may be, has received compensation for the outlay, in money or labour, or both, expended in making such improvements, by him, or the person from whom he has inherited, or whom he represents, within thirty years next before the date of such enhancement or ejectment.

"Improvements" defined.

23. The word "improvements," as used in section 22, means works by which the annual letting value of the land has been, and, at the time of demanding compensation continues to be, increased, and comprises—

1*st*.—The construction of works for the storage of water, for the supply of water for agricultural purposes, for drainage, and for protection against floods; the construction of wells; the reclaiming and clearing of waste lands and jungles; and other works of a like nature;

2*nd*.—The renewal or reconstruction of any of the foregoing works, or such alterations therein or additions thereto, as are not required for maintaining the same, and which increase durably their value.

Compensation how made.

24. Such compensation may, at the option of the landlord or his representative, be made—

(1.)—By payment in money;

(2.)—By the grant of a beneficial lease of the land by the landlord or his representative to the tenant or his representative; or

(3.)—Partly by payment in money and partly by the grant of such lease as aforesaid.

Provision for difference as to amount or value of compensation.

25. In case of difference as to the amount or value of the compensation tendered, either party may present an application to the Court, on a paper bearing a stamp of eight annas, stating the matter in dispute and requesting a determination thereof.

On receiving such application the Court shall cause notice thereof to be served on the other party, and, after taking such evidence as the parties or either of them may adduce, and after such further enquiry (if any) as it may deem necessary, determine (as the case may be) the amount of the payment or the terms of the lease or both.

In determining such amount, the Court shall take into account any assistance given by the landlord, either directly in money, material or labour at the time of making such improvements, or indirectly by subsequently allowing the tenant to hold at a rate of rent more favourable than the rate at which he otherwise would have held.

The proceedings on any such application shall be deemed to be a suit for the purposes of chapter six (as to reference to arbitration) of the Code of Civil Procedure, and of section nine of Act No. XXIII of 1861, (to amend Act VIII of 1859.

Tender of lease for twenty years to bar right to compensation for improvements.

26. If in any case a landlord tenders to a tenant a lease of the land in his occupation, for a term of not less than twenty years from the date of the tender, at the annual rent then paid by the tenant, or at such other annual rent as may be agreed upon, such tender, if accepted by the tenant, shall bar any claim by him or his representative in respect of improvements previously made on such land by the tenant or the person from whom he has inherited.

Survey and Measurement.

Landlord's right to enter and measure land.

27. Every landlord, his agents and surveyors, may at all reasonable times enter upon any land comprised in his estate for the purpose of surveying and measuring the same.

CHAPTER III.

COMMUTATION AND PAYMENT OF RENT IN KIND.

Commutation of rents in kind.

28. In any district in which a settlement of revenue is in progress, it shall be in the discretion of any officer employed in making or revising such settlement, in any case in which the rent of a tenant having a right of occupancy is paid in kind, or by the estimated value of a portion of the crop, to commute, on the application either of the landlord or the tenant, such rent into a rent in money.

The amount of rent thus fixed shall be binding upon the parties concerned.

All decisions already passed by any such officer, commuting rents in kind or by valuation to rents in money, shall, subject to the same appeal as is given by this Act in respect of decisions passed in suits, be binding on the parties concerned.

Chief Commissioner may extend section 28, and declare officers to hear and decide cases thereunder.

29. The Chief Commissioner of Oudh may extend the provisions of section 28 to any district or portion of a district in which a settlement of revenue is not in progress; and may declare what officers are empowered to hear and decide cases under this section;

and may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General of India in Council, make rules for the guidance of officers acting under this section and section 28, and from time to time, with the like sanction, alter and add to the rules so made:

Provided that such rules, alterations and additions are consistent with this Act.

Division or appraisement of produce taken for rent.

30. Wherever rent is taken by division of the produce in kind, or by estimate or appraisement of the standing crop or other procedure of a similar nature requiring the presence both of the tenant and landlord either personally or by a recognized agent, if either party neglect to be present at the proper period, or if a dispute arise between the parties regarding such division, estimate, or appraisement, either party may present an application to the Court on a paper bearing a stamp of eight annas, requesting that a proper officer be deputed to make the division, estimate, or appraisement.

Procedure in case of dispute.

31. On receiving such application, the Court shall issue a written notice to the other party to attend on the date and at the place specified in the notice, and shall depute an officer before whom the division, estimate or appraisement shall be made.

The award of such officer in respect of such division, estimate or appraisement shall be final, unless within one month from the date thereof, either party institutes a suit to set it aside.

CHAPTER IV.

ENHANCEMENT AND FIXING RATES OF RENT.

A.—Tenants with Right of Occupancy.

Enhancement of rent of tenant with right of occupancy.

32. No tenant having a right of occupancy in any land shall, in case of dispute as to the rent to be paid in respect of such land, be liable to an enhancement of the rent except in pursuance of a decree made under this Act, on some one of the following grounds (that is to say):

1st Ground.—That the rate of rent paid by him is below the rate of rent usually paid by the same class of tenants having a right of occupancy for land of a similar description, and with similar advantages, situate in the same village.

Rule.—In this case the Court shall enhance his rent to such amount as the plaintiff demands, not exceeding such rate.

2nd Ground.—That the rate of rent paid by him is more than 12½ per cent. below the rate of rent usually paid by tenants of the same class not having a right of occupancy for land of a similar description, and with similar advantages, situate in the same village.

Rule.—In this case the Court shall enhance his rent to such amount as the plaintiff demands, not exceeding such rate less 12½ per cent.

3rd Ground.—That the quantity of land held by him exceeds the quantity for which he has previously paid rent.

Rule.—In this case the Court shall decree rent for the land in excess at rates to be fixed by the first or the second of the Rules contained in this section, as the case may be.

Nothing contained in the previous part of this section shall affect the terms of any agreement in writing hereafter entered into between a landlord and tenant.

Term for re-enhancement, after decision fixing rent under section 32.

in the case referred to in section 34, until by re-assessment, within the said term of five years, the revenue of such land has been increased.

Enhancement on re-assessment of revenue.

34. On such re-assessment, if the rent of such tenant cannot be enhanced under section 32, by reason of the absence of the grounds therein mentioned, the landlord may institute a suit to enhance the rent to a sum not exceeding double the average amount of the revenue imposed at such re-assessment upon land of a similar description and with similar advantages, held by tenants of the same class in the same village.

B.—Tenants not having Right of Occupancy.

Court not to enquire into propriety of rate of rent payable by tenant not having right of occupancy.

35. The Court shall in no case enquire into the propriety of the rate of rent payable by a tenant not having a right of occupancy.

The rent payable by such tenant for any land in his occupation shall be such amount as may be agreed upon between him and the landlord; or, if no such agreement has been made, such amount as was payable for the land in the last preceding year.

Suits in which there is evidence in writing of agreement to alter rent.

36. If in any suit between a landlord and a tenant not having a right of occupancy, the amount of rent payable by such tenant shall be disputed, he shall not be held liable to pay rent other than that payable by him for the last preceding year, unless the Court is satisfied by evidence in writing that the parties have agreed that the rent so payable shall be altered.

CHAPTER V.

EJECTMENT.

General Provisions.

Grounds on which tenant may contest liability to ejectment.

37. A tenant may contest his liability to be ejected from the land which he holds on any of the following grounds:—

First.—That he holds a lease or an agreement, or a decree of Court, under the terms of which he is not liable to such ejectment:

Second.—That he has a right of occupancy in the land:

Third.—And if he be a tenant not having a right of occupancy, that notice of ejectment has not been served upon him in manner provided by section 43.

Time of ejectment of tenant.

38. No tenant, except a sub-lessor, shall in any case, whether in execution of a decree or otherwise, be ejected from the land in his occupancy, except between the first day of April and the fifteenth day of June in any year after the passing of this Act; unless while his rent is in arrear, he has failed to cultivate the land in his possession in accordance with the terms on which he holds it.

Time of ejectment of sub-lessor.

39. A sub-lessor liable to be ejected under the provisions of this Act may be ejected at any time during his tenancy.

Ejectment for arrears of rent.

40. Any tenant, other than a sub-lessor, from whom an arrear of rent remains due on the fifteenth day of May in any year after the passing of this Act, and any sub-lessor from whom an arrear of rent remains due at any time during his tenancy may, subject to the provisions of sections 38, 39 and 41, be ejected from the land in respect of which the arrear is due

Tenant with Right of Occupancy.

Ejectment of tenant having a right of occupancy.

41. No tenant having a right of occupancy, or holding under an unexpired lease, or special agreement, or decree of Court, shall be ejected otherwise than in execution of a decree for ejectment.

Provided that if the tenant have a right of occupancy in the land from which the landlord desires to eject him, the decree shall not be made unless at the date of the decree a decree against such tenant for an arrear of rent in respect of such land has remained unsatisfied for fifteen days or upwards.

Tenant without Right of Occupancy.

Ejectment of tenant not having a right of occupancy.

42. A tenant not having a right of occupancy and not holding under an unexpired lease or an agreement or a decree of Court, may be ejected in accordance with the provisions of this Act; first, in execution of a decree for arrears of rent or for ejectment; or second, by notice given by his landlord in the manner described in section 43.

Notice.

Notice of ejectment of tenant not having right of occupancy.

43. The notice mentioned in section 42 shall be written in Hindí and in Urdu: it shall specify the land from which the tenant is to be ejected; and it shall inform him that if he means to dispute the ejectment, he must institute a suit for that purpose on or before the fifteenth day of May next after the service of the notice, or vacate the land on or before that date.

Service of Notice.

On the application of the landlord to the Tahsíldár, or officer authorized to serve such notices, the notice shall be served by such officer on or before the fifteenth day of April in each year, and the landlord shall pay the costs of service.

The notice shall, if practicable, be served personally on the tenant. But if he cannot be found, service may be made by affixing the notice at his usual place of residence, or, if he does not reside in the district wherein the land is situate, at the village chaupál or other conspicuous place in the village wherein the land is situate.

Cessation of Tenancy.

If notice is not contested, tenancy to be held to cease.

Assistance to eject.

When assistance to eject may be given by Court.

45. If no such suit be brought, and the landlord require the assistance of the Court to eject any person whose tenancy is alleged to have ceased under the provisions of section 44, he may apply for such assistance, and if the Court is satisfied that notice of ejectment was duly served on such person, it shall give such assistance accordingly:

Provided that nothing done by the Court under the previous part of this section shall affect the right of any tenant to institute a suit against his landlord on account of illegal ejectment and to recover compensation for the same.

Growing Crops.

Compensation to ejected tenant for growing crops.

46. Any tenant ejected in accordance with the provisions of this Act, shall be entitled to receive from the landlord the value of any growing crops or other ungathered products of the earth belonging to such tenant, and being on the land at the time of his ejectment:

Provided that if the land shall have been sown or planted by the tenant after the service on him of the notice mentioned in section 42, he shall not be so entitled unless, after such service, the landlord has expressly authorized him to continue to occupy the land.

CHAPTER VI.

DISTRESS FOR ARREARS OF RENT.

Recovery of arrears of rent by distress.

47. When an arrear of rent is due from any tenant, the landlord may distrain the produce of the land in respect of which the arrear is due, subject to the rules contained in the following sections:

Proviso as to tenant who have given security for payment of rent.

Provided that when a tenant has given security for the payment of his rent, the produce of the land in respect of which such rent is payable, shall not be liable to distress so long as the security is in force.

No distress in certain cases.

48. Distress shall not be made for any arrear which has been due for a longer period than one year; nor for the recovery of any sum in excess of the rent payable in the last preceding year for the land in respect of which the arrear is due, unless the tenant has agreed in writing to pay such excess, or unless he has been declared to be liable for the same by a decree of Court.

Power of distress by whom exercisable.

49. The power of distress, vested by section 47 in landlords, may be exercised by managers under the Court of Wards, managing agents and tahsildárs of estates held under khám management, and other persons lawfully entrusted with the charge of land, and also by the agents employed by landlords or any such persons as aforesaid in the collection of rent if expressly authorized by power of attorney to distrain:

Liability of principal of agent.

Provided that, if any such agent, purporting to act in the exercise of the said power, commits an act, which, under the provisions of this chapter, is illegal, the person employing such agent shall be liable, as well as the agent, to be sued for compensation for any injury caused by such act.

Distress by servants.

50. Any person empowered to distrain property under section 47 or 49, may employ a servant or other person to make the distress; but in every such case he shall give to such servant or person a written authority for the same, and the distress shall be made in the name and on the responsibility of the person giving such authority.

Crops liable to distress.

51. Standing crops and other ungathered products of the earth, and crops or other products when reaped or gathered and deposited in any threshing-floor or place for treading out grain or the like, whether in the field or within a homestead, may be distrained by persons invested with powers of distress under this Act.

But no such crops or products, other than the produce of the land in respect of which an arrear of rent is due, or of land held under the same agreement, as the land in respect of which the arrear is due; and no grain or other produce after it has been stored by the cultivator, and no other property whatsoever, shall be liable to distress under this Act.

Demand of arrear before or at time of distress.

52. Before or at the time when any distress is made under this Act, the distrainer shall cause the defaulter to be served with a written demand for the amount of the arrear, together with an account exhibiting the grounds on which the demand is made.

The demand and account shall, if practicable, be served personally on the defaulter, but if he cannot be found, they shall be affixed at his usual place of residence, and shall thereupon be deemed to be duly served upon him.

Value of distress.

53. Unless the amount of the demand is immediately paid or tendered, the distrainer may distrain property as aforesaid of value as nearly as may be equal to the amount of the arrear with the costs of the distress; and shall prepare a list or description of the said property, and deliver a copy of the same to the owner, or if he be absent, affix it at his usual place of residence.

Service of list of property to be distrained.

Reaping and storing standing crops when distrained.

If the tenant neglect to do so, the distrainer may cause the said crops or products to be reaped or gathered, and, in such case, shall store the same either in such granaries or other places as aforesaid, or in some other convenient place in the neighbourhood.

In either case, the distrained property shall be placed in the charge of some proper person appointed by the distrainer for the purpose.

If the crops or products do not, from their nature, admit of being stored, the distress shall be made (if at all) at least twenty days before the time when the crops or products or any part thereof would ordinarily be fit for cutting or gathering.

Application by distrainer in case of resistance.

55. If a distrainer is opposed, or apprehends resistance, and desires to obtain the assistance of a public officer, he may apply to the Court, and the Court may, if it think necessary, depute an officer to assist the distrainer in making the distress.

Withdrawal of distress on tender of arrear and costs.

56. If at any time after property has been distrained as aforesaid, and before the sale thereof as hereinafter provided, the owner tenders payment of the arrear demanded and of the costs of the distress, the distrainer shall receive the same, and give a receipt therefor, and shall forthwith withdraw the distress.

Application for sale.

57. Within five days from the time of storing any distrained crops or products, or if such crops or products do not, from their nature, admit of being stored, within five days from the time of making the distress, the distrainer shall apply for sale of the same to the proper officer authorized to sell property in satisfaction of decrees of the Court within whose jurisdiction the distrained property is situate.

Form of application.

58. The application shall be in writing: it shall contain a list or description of the property distrained, and it shall state the name of the defaulter, his place of residence, the amount due, and the place in which the distrained property is deposited.

Together with the application, the distrainer shall deliver to the proper officer the sum payable for the service of a notice upon the defaulter as hereinafter provided.

Procedure on receipt of application.

59. Immediately on receipt of the application, the proper officer shall send a copy of it to the Court, and shall serve a notice in the form contained in Schedule C hereto annexed or to the like effect on the person whose property has been distrained, requiring him either to pay the amount demanded, or within fifteen days from the receipt of the notice, to institute a suit to contest the demand.

The officer shall at the same time send to the Court, for the purpose of being put up at the Court-house, a proclamation fixing a day for the sale of the distrained property, not less than twenty days from the date of the proclamation: and shall deliver a copy of the proclamation to the peon charged with the service of the notice, to be put up by him in the place where the distrained property is deposited.

The proclamation shall contain a description of the property, and shall specify the demand for which it is sold and the place where the sale is to be held.

Suspension of sale on institution of suit.

60. If a suit is instituted in pursuance of the aforesaid notice, the Court shall send to the proper officer, or, if so requested by the owner of the distrained property, shall deliver to him, a certificate of the institution of the suit.

On such certificate being received by, or presented to, the proper officer, he shall suspend proceedings in regard to the sale:

Provided that if, in his opinion the property distrained is such that delay will cause damage thereto, he may direct its immediate sale.

Suit to contest distrainer's demand.

61. Any person whose property has been distrained as aforesaid, may institute a suit to contest the distrainer's demand at any time before the expiration of the fifteen days mentioned in section 59.

When such suit is instituted, the Court shall proceed in the manner prescribed in section 60.

If application for the sale of the property is afterwards made to the proper officer, he shall send a copy of the application to the Court, and suspend further proceedings pending the decision of the case.

Withdrawal of distress on execution of bond.

62. The person whose property has been distrained may, at the time of instituting any such suit as aforesaid, or at any subsequent period, execute a bond with one or more surety or sureties, for an amount not less than double the value of the property so distrained, binding himself to pay whatever sum may be adjudged to be due from him with costs of suit.

When such bond is executed, the Court shall give to the owner of the property a certificate to that effect, or, if he so requests, shall serve the distrainer with notice of the same.

Upon such certificate being presented to the distrainer by the owner of the property, or served on him by order of the Court, the property shall be released from distress.

Proceeding with sale, if, on expiration of time fixed, no suit is instituted.

63. On the expiration of the period fixed in the proclamation of sale, if the institution of a suit to contest the demand of the distrainer has not been certified to the proper officer in the manner hereinbefore provided, he shall, unless the said demand, with such costs of the distress as are allowed by him, be discharged in full, proceed, with the sanction of the Court, to sell the property, or such part thereof as may be necessary.

Place and manner of sale.

64. The sale shall be held at the place where the distrained property is deposited, or at the nearest ganj, bázár or other place of public resort, if the proper officer thinks that it is likely to sell there to better advantage.

The property shall be sold by public auction in one or more lots as the officer holding the sale thinks advisable; and if the demand, with the costs of distress and sale, be satisfied by the sale of a portion of the property, the distress shall be immediately withdrawn with respect to the remainder.

Postponement of sale where fair price is not offered.

65. If on the property being put up for sale, a price which the officer holding the sale shall think fair be not offered, and if the owner of the property or his recognized agent apply to have the sale postponed until the next day or (if a market be held at the place of sale) until the next market-day, the sale shall be postponed until such day, and shall be then completed at whatever price may be offered.

Payment of purchase money.

66. The price of every lot shall be paid in ready money at the time of sale, or as soon thereafter as the officer holding the sale thinks fit; and in default of such payment, the property shall be put up again and resold.

When the purchase-money has been paid in full, the officer holding the sale shall give the purchaser a certificate stating the property purchased by him and the price paid therefor.

Proceeds of sale.

67. The officer holding the sale shall deduct from the proceeds one anna for every rupee and fraction of a rupee, on account of the expenses attending the sale.

He shall then pay to the distrainer the expenses incurred by him on account of the distress and of the issue of the notice and proclamation of sale prescribed in section 59, to such amount as, after examination of the statement of expenses furnished by the distrainer, the officer thinks proper to allow.

The remainder shall be applied to the discharge of the arrear for which the distress was made, and the surplus (if any) shall be delivered to the person whose property has been sold.

Officers holding sales not to purchase.

68. Officers holding sales of property under this Act, and all persons employed by, or subordinate to, such officers, are forbidden to purchase, either directly or indirectly, property sold by such officers.

Illegal acts of distrainer to be reported.

69. The officer mentioned in section 57 shall bring to the notice of the Court any illegal act which shall come to his knowledge as having been committed by any person in making a distress under this Act.

If in any case, on proceeding to hold a sale under this Act, such officer finds that the owner has not received due notice of the distress and intended sale, he shall postpone the sale and report the case to the Court, and the Court shall direct the issue of another notice and proclamation of sale under section 59, or make such other order as it thinks proper.

Recovery of expenses if no sale takes place.

70. When such officer has gone to any place for the purpose of holding a sale, and no sale takes place, either for the reason stated in section 69, or because the distrainer's demand has been previously satisfied, the said charge on account of expenses attending the sale shall be leviable by the officer, and shall be calculated on the value of the distrained property, as estimated by him, unless the distrainer's demand has been satisfied before the day fixed for the sale, and notice of such satisfaction has been given by him to the officer.

If the distrainer's demand be not satisfied until the day fixed for the sale, the charge shall be paid by the owner of the property, and may be recovered by sale of such portion thereof as may be necessary.

In every other case the charge shall be paid by the distrainer, and may be recovered under the warrant of the Court by attachment and sale of his property:

Provided that in no case shall an amount exceeding ten rupees be recoverable under this section.

Second proclamation of sale when arrears are adjudged to be due.

71. When a suit has been instituted to contest a distrainer's demand, and the property has not been released on security, if the demand or any portion of it shall be adjudged to be due, the Court shall issue an order to the proper officer authorizing the sale of the property.

On the application of the distrainer (which shall be made within five days from the receipt of such order by such officer), such officer shall publish a second proclamation in the manner prescribed in section 59, fixing another day for the sale of the distrained property, not less than five nor more than ten days from the date of the proclamation; and, unless the amount adjudged to be due with costs of distress be paid immediaely, shall proceed to sell the property in the manner hereinbefore provided.

Distrainer to prove the arrear in suits to contest his demand.

72. In all suits instituted to contest a distrainer's demand the defendant must prove the arrear in the same manner as if he had himself brought a suit for the amount under the foregoing provisions of this Act.

If the demand or any part thereof is found to be due, the Court shall make a decree for the amount in favour of the distrainer.

Such amount may be recovered by sale of the distrained property as provided in section 71, and if the distress has not been withdrawn, and if any balance remain due, after such sale, by execution of the decree against the person and any other property of the defaulter, or if the distrained property have been released on security, by execution of the decree against the person and property of the defaulter, and, if his surety has been made a party to the suit, against the person and property of such surety.

Compensation for vexatious distress.

73. If the distress is adjudged to be vexatious or groundless, the Court, besides directing the release of the distrained property, may award such compensation to the plaintiff as it thinks fit, not exceeding twice the value of the property distrained.

Suit by third party claiming property distrained.

74. If any person claims, as his own, property which has been distrained for arrears of rent alleged to be due from any other person, the claimant may institute a suit against the distrainer and such other person to try the right to the property, in the same manner and under the same rules as to the time of instituting the suit and as to the consequent postponement of sale, as a person whose property has been distrained for an arrear of rent alleged to be due from him, may institute a suit to contest the demand.

Release on giving security.

75. When any such suit is instituted, the property may be released upon security for its value being given to the satisfaction of the Court.

Order if claim dismissed.

If the claim is dismissed, the Court shall make an order in favour of the distrainer for the sale of the property or the recovery of its value, as the case may be.

Compensation for distress of stranger's property.

If the claim is upheld, the Court shall order the release of the distrained property, and may award such compensation as it thinks fit, not exceeding twice the value of the property distrained.

Landlord's prior claim to distrainable produce in possession of defaulting tenant.

76. No claim to any produce of land liable to distress under this Act, and found at the time of the distress in the possession of a defaulting tenant, whether such claim be in respect of a previous sale, mortgage, or otherwise, shall bar the landlord's prior claim, nor shall any attachment in execution of a decree of any civil Court prevail against such claim.

Stranger claiming to be landlord and to have right of distress to be made a party.

77. Whenever property has been distrained for an arrear of rent, and a suit has been instituted to contest the demand, and the right to distrain for such arrear is claimed by or on behalf of any person other than the distrainer, on the ground of such other person being actually and in good faith in the receipt and enjoyment of the rent of the land, such other person shall be made a party to the suit, and the question of the actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent by him before and up to the commencement of the suit, shall be enquired into, and the suit shall be decided according to the result of such inquiry:

Provided that the decision of the Court shall not affect the right of any person having a title to the rent of the land, to establish such title in a Court of competent jurisdiction, by suit instituted within one year from the date of the decision.

Suit for illegal distress.

78. Any person whose property has been distrained for the recovery of a demand not justly due, or of a demand due or alleged to be due from some other person, and who is prevented by any sufficient cause from bringing a suit to contest the demand or try the right to the property, as the case may be, within the period allowed by sections 59 and 74, and whose property is in consequence brought to sale, may institute a suit to recover compensation for any injury which he has sustained from the distress or sale.

Suit for illegal act of distrainer.

79. If any person empowered to distrain property, or employed for the purpose under a written authority by a person so empowered, distrains or sells any property for the recovery of an arrear of rent alleged to be due otherwise than according to the provisions of this Act, or if any distrained property is lost, damaged or destroyed, by reason of the distrainer not having taken proper precaution for the due keeping and preservation thereof, or if the distress is not immediately withdrawn when any provision of this Act requires such withdrawal, the owner of the property may institute a suit to recover compensation for any injury which he has thereby sustained.

Suit for distress or sale falsely purporting to be under this Act.

80. If any person not empowered by this Act to distrain or sell, nor duly authorized for that purpose by a person so empowered, purports to distrain or sell any property under this Act, the owner of such property may institute a suit to recover compensation from the person so distraining or selling for any injury which the plaintiff has sustained from the distress or sale.

Such suit shall not affect the defendant's liability to be prosecuted under any law for the time being in force.

Procedure in case of resistance to distress.

81. If any person resists a distress of property duly made under this Act, or forcibly or clandestinely removes any distrained property, the Court, upon complaint being made within ten days from the date of such resistance or removal, shall cause the person accused to be arrested and brought before the Court with all convenient speed, and the Court shall proceed forthwith to try the case.

If the case cannot be at once heard and determined, the Court may, if it think fit, require the party arrested to give security for his person, whenever the same may be required, and, in default of such security, may commit him to the civil jail until the case is tried.

Punishment of offender

82. If such resistance or removal of property be proved, the Court may order the offender to pay a fine not exceeding one hundred rupees, together with all costs and expenses incurred in the case or in making the distress, and, in default of payment, may order him to be imprisoned in the civil jail until payment is made: Provided that no such imprisonment shall continue for more than six months.

CHAPTER VII.

JURISDICTION OF THE COURTS.

Suits cognizable.

Suits cognizable under this Act.

83. The Courts of Revenue in Oudh shall take cognizance of the following descriptions of suits, and such suits shall be heard and determined in the said Courts in the manner provided in this Act, and not otherwise:—

A.—Suits by a Landlord.

(1).—For the delivery by a tenant of the counterpart of a lease under section 9;

(2).—For arrears of rent;

(3).—For the enhancement of the rent of a tenant having a right of occupancy;

(4).—For the ejectment of a tenant or for cancelling any lease on account of the non-payment of arrears of rent, or on account of a breach of the conditions of such lease;

(5).—Suits by landlords against patwáris or agents employed by landlords in the management of land or the collection of revenue or rent, or against the sureties of such patwáris or agents for money received or accounts kept by such patwáris or agents in the course of such employment, or for papers in their possession, or for the rendering and settlement of accounts.

B.—Suits by an Under-proprietor or a Tenant.

(6).—For establishing a right of occupancy;

(7).—For the delivery by a landlord of a lease;

(8).—For contesting a notice of ejectment;

(9).—For compensation—

on account of illegal enforcement of payment of rent, or of any sum in excess of rent due,

or on account of the refusal of receipts or acknowledgments for rent paid or tendered,

or on account of illegal ejectment,

or on account of the value of standing crops under section 46;

(10).—For the recovery of the occupancy of any land from which an under-proprietor or tenant has been illegally ejected by the landlord;

(11).—For contesting the exercise of the power of distraint conferred on landlords and others by this Act, or any acts purporting to be done in exercise of the said power, or for compensation for illegal distraint;

(12).—For abatement of rent in accordance with the provisions of section 19;

(13).—For the recovery of compensation for improvements in accordance with the provisions of section 22.

C.—Suits regarding the Division or Appraisement of Produce.

(14).—Suits under section 31, regarding the division, estimate, or appraisement of the produce of land.

D.—Suits by, and against, Lumberdárs, Co-sharers and Muáfídárs.

(15).—Suits by a sharer against a lumberdár or co-sharer for share of the profits of an estate, or any part thereof, or for the rendering and settlement of accounts in respect of such profits;

(16).—Suits by a lumberdár or pattídár who is entitled to collect the rents of the pattí, for arrears of revenue or rent payable through him by the co-sharers whom he represents, and by a lumberdár for village-expenses and other dues for which the co-sharers may be responsible to him, or against a joint lumberdár for compensation for revenue or rent paid by such lumberdár on account of such joint lumberdár;

(17).—Suits by co-sharers against lumberdárs, or by proprietors or lessees against muáfídárs or assignees of revenue, for compensation on account of exaction in excess of revenue or rent, or on account of the refusal of receipts or acknowledgments for revenue or rent paid or tendered;

(18).—Suits by muáfídárs or assignees of revenue for arrears of revenue.

Grades of Courts.

Grades of Courts for the purposes of this Act.

84. For the purposes of this Act, the Courts of Revenue shall consist of six grades of Courts, namely—

(1).—The Court of the Assistant Collector of the second class;

(2).—The Court of the Assistant Collector of the first class;

(3).—The Court of the Deputy Collector;

(4).—The Court of the Collector;

(5).—The Court of the Commissioner;

(6).—The Court of the Financial Commissioner.

Chief Commissioner may declare grade of Tahsíldár or Assistant Commissioner.

85. Subject to any orders that may from time to time be issued by the Governor General in Council, the Chief Commissioner of Oudh shall have power to declare to which of the first three grades any Assistant Commissioner shall belong, and to invest any Tahsíldár with the powers of any of the same grades.

Deputy Commissioner to have Collector's powers.

86. The Deputy Commissioner shall exercise the powers of a Collector under this Act.

Settlement officers may be invested with powers of Collector, &c., under this Act.

87. Subject to any orders in this behalf that may from time to time be made by the Governor General of India in Council, the Chief Commissioner of Oudh may invest any officer employed in making or revising settlements of revenue with all or any of the powers of a Collector, or Deputy Collector, or Assistant Collector, under this Act.

Jurisdiction of Assistant Collector of the second class.

88. The Court of the Assistant Collector of the second class shall have power to try and determine suits of the descriptions mentioned in clauses 1, 2, 7, 12, 15, 16, 17 and 18 of section 83, of which the subject-matter does not exceed one hundred rupees in value or amount.

Jurisdiction of Assistant Collector of the first class.

89. The Court of the Assistant Collector of the first class shall have power to try and determine suits of the descriptions referred to in the last preceding section of which the subject-matter does not exceed five hundred rupees in value or amount.

Jurisdiction of Deputy Collector.

90. The Court of the Deputy Collector shall have power to try and determine suits of every description of which the subject-matter does not exceed five thousand rupees in value or amount.

Jurisdiction of Collector.

91. The Court of the Collector shall have power to try and determine suits of every description and of any amount, and to hear appeals from the decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the Code of Civil Procedure as applied by this Act) from the orders of the Assistant Collectors, and, in suits under clauses 2, 5, 9, 11, 14, 15, 16, 17, and 18 of section 83, from such decisions and orders of the Deputy Collectors.

Whenever the state of the public business requires it, the Chief Commissioner may invest any Deputy Collector with the powers of a Collector for the trial and determination of suits and appeals under this Act, other than appeals from the decisions of such Deputy Collector, and may, with the sanction of the Governor General of India in Council, invest any Collector with all or any of the powers of a Commissioner under this Act.

Jurisdiction of Commissioner.

92. The Court of the Commissioner shall have power to hear and determine appeals from decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the Code of Civil Procedure) from the orders of the Collectors and Deputy Collectors, except as otherwise provided in sections 91, 95 and 102.

Jurisdiction of Financial Commissioner.

93. The Court of the Financial Commissioner shall have power to hear and determine appeals from the decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the Code of Civil Procedure) from the orders, of the Commissioners, and also special appeals, as provided in the said Code, from the decisions passed in regular appeal by the Collectors and by the Commissioners.

Appeals.

Time for presenting appeals.

94. The memorandum of appeal prepared in the form and containing the particulars mentioned in the Code of Civil Procedure, shall be presented to the Court empowered to hear the appeal within the period hereinafter specified, unless the appellant shall show sufficient cause, to the satisfaction of such Court, for not having presented the memorandum within such period; that is to say, thirty days if the appeal lie to the Collector, six weeks if the appeal lie to the Commissioner, and ninety days if the appeal lie to the Financial Commissioner.

The period shall be reckoned from and exclusive of the day on which the decision or order appealed against was passed, and also exclusive of such time as may be requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree or order from which the appeal is made.

Applications for the admission of special appeals shall be presented in the Court of the Financial Commissioner within the period hereinbefore fixed for the presentation of a memorandum of appeal.

No appeal, except in certain cases, from Collector's decree for money below one hundred rupees.

95. In suits under clauses 2, 5, 9, 11, 14, 15, 16, 17, and 18 of section 83, and in appeals from decisions in such suits tried and decided by a Commissioner or Collector, if the amount sued for does not exceed one hundred rupees, the judgment shall be final, except as hereinafter provided, unless in any such suit a question of right to enhance or otherwise vary the rent of a tenant, or any question relating to a title to land or to some interest in land as between parties having conflicting claims thereto, has been determined by the judgment.

In such case the judgment shall be open to appeal in the manner provided in this Act.

Distribution of Business.

Deputy Commissioner may distribute business in subordinate Courts.

96. The Deputy Commissioner may direct the business in the Courts subordinate to him, whether or not they hold their sittings in the same place, to be distributed among such Courts in such way as he shall think fit.

Transfer of Suits and Appeals.

Transfer of suits from subordinate Courts to Commissioner's or Collector's Court.

97. The Commissioner or the Deputy Commissioner may withdraw any suit instituted in any Court subordinate to him, and try such suit himself, or refer it for trial to any other such Court competent to try the same.

Withdrawal or reference of appeals.

The Commissioner may also withdraw any appeal instituted in the Court of any Collector subordinate to him, and try the appeal himself, or refer it for trial to the Court of any other Collector in his division.

Financial Commissioner may transfer suits and appeals from one subordinate Court to another.

98. The Financial Commissioner may order that any suit or appeal which shall be instituted in or presented to any Court subordinate to him, shall be transferred to any other such Court competent to try or hear the subject-matter of the same.

Miscellaneous.

General subordination of Courts.

99. In the performance of their duties under this Act, the Collectors shall be subject to the direction and control of the Commissioners and of the Financial Commissioner; and the Deputy Collectors and Assistant Collectors shall be subject to the direction and control of the Deputy Commissioners to whom they are respectively subordinate:

Proviso.

Provided that nothing in this section shall empower the Financial Commissioner or any Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner to interfere in any way not authorized by this Act with any decision or order in a suit.

Suits by or against managing agents or tahsildárs of khám estates.

100. All suits, which, under the provisions of this Act, may be brought by or against landlords, may be brought by or against managing agents or tahsildárs of estates held under khám management, whether such estates are the property of Government or not.

Sharer to exercise certain powers only through manager or lumberdár.

101. No sharer in a joint estate, under-proprietary or other tenure in which a division of land has not been made among the sharers shall exercise any of the powers conferred by this Act in regard to the recovery of arrears of rent, enhancement of rent, ejectment of tenants or distress, otherwise than through a manager authorized to collect the rents on behalf of all the sharers.

In pattídárí estates or tenures such powers shall be exercised only through a lumberdár or through the pattídár who is entitled to collect the rents of the pattí.

Recovery of land of which applicant has been illegally dispossessed.

102. If any landlord, under-proprietor, or tenant has, without his consent, been dispossessed of any land otherwise than by due course of law, such landlord, under-proprietor or tenant, or any person claiming through him, shall be entitled to recover possession thereof notwithstanding any other title has been set up, provided that he makes application to the Court to recover possession of the land within three months from the time of the dispossession.

But nothing in this section shall bar the person from whom possession has been so recovered, or any other person, from instituting a suit to establish his title to such land and to recover possession thereof.

The application mentioned in the first clause of this section shall be heard by the Collector or Deputy Collector only, and no appeal shall lie from any order passed thereon, nor shall any review of such order be allowed.

Courts may sit anywhere within limits of their jurisdiction.

103. The Courts may sit for the hearing and determining suits and appeals, and for disposing of other business under this Act, in any place within the local limits of their respective jurisdictions:

Provided that every hearing and decision shall be in open Court, and that the parties to the suit or their authorized agents shall have had due notice to attend at such place.

CHAPTER VIII.

LIMITATION OF SUITS.

General limitation.

104. Except as herein otherwise provided, and subject to the provisions as to legal disability contained in any law for the limitation of suits for the time being in force in Oudh, all suits under this Act shall be instituted within one year from the date of the accruing of the cause of action.

Suits for delivery of leases or counterparts.

105. Suits for the delivery of leases or the counterparts of leases may be instituted at any time during the tenancy.

Suits for arrears of rent, or revenue or share of profits.

106. Suits for the recovery of arrears of rent of revenue, or of a share of profits, shall, except in the case mentioned in section 16, be instituted within three years from the date on which the arrear or share of profit claimed shall have become due.

Suits against agents for money, or delivery of accounts or papers.

107. Suits for the recovery of money in the hands of an agent, or for the settlement of accounts or delivery of papers by an agent, may be brought at any time during the continuance of the agency, or within one year after its determination, or, in the case of claims legally cognizable at the date of the passing of this Act, within one year after such date.

Suits regarding distress, division of produce, &c.

108. Suits regarding distress under section 74, 78, 79 or 80, and suits regarding the division, estimate, or appraisement of the produce of land, shall be commenced within three months from the date of the accruing of the cause of action.

CHAPTER IX.

PROCEDURE.

Civil Procedure Code to be the procedure under this Act.

109. Subject to the exceptions and provisoes under which the Code of Civil Procedure was extended to Oudh, as contained in the Notification republished in Schedule D hereto annexed, the provisions of the said Code shall, so far as they are not inconsistent with the provisions herein contained, apply to all suits, appeals and proceedings under this Act:

Provided that the said Notification shall be read as if the words "Financial Commissioner" were substituted for the words "Judicial Commissioner," and that section 244 of the said Code shall be read as if for the word "Court," the word "Commissioner" were substituted:

Provided also that the words "ancestral property" in the said Notification shall be held to include the property in land of persons admitted to engagement for the land-revenue at the summary settlement of 1858-59.

Particulars to be added to plaint.

110. In addition to the particulars required by section 26 of the said Code to be specified in the plaint, the plaint shall contain the following particulars:—

1st.—The name of the village or estate, and of the pargana, in which the land to which the suit relates is situate;

2nd.—If the suit be for the recovery of an arrear of rent, or for the enhancement or abatement of rent, or for the ejectment of a tenant, or for contesting a notice of enhancement of rent, or for contesting a notice for the ejectment of a tenant, or for the recovery of the occupancy or possession of any land, the plaint shall specify the extent, situation and designation of the land to which the suit relates, and where fields have been marked in a Government survey, the number (if it be possible to give it) of each field;

and the time in respect of which it is alleged to be due;

4th.—If the suit be for the delivery of a lease or the counterpart of a lease, the plaint shall specify all the particulars mentioned in section 7.

Third person claiming rent to be made a party.

111. When in any suit between a landlord and an under-proprietor or tenant, the right to receive the rent of the land is claimed by a third person, on the ground that he, or a person through whom he claims, has actually and in good faith received and enjoyed such rent up to the time of the commencement of the suit, such third person shall be made a party to the suit, and the question of the actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent by him or the person through whom he claims shall be enquired into, and the suit shall be decided according to the result of such inquiry:

Provided always that the decision of the Court shall not affect the right of any party having a legal right to the rent of such land to establish his title thereto in a Court of competent jurisdiction.

Summons to defendant to be for final disposal.

112. In all suits under this Act, the summons to the defendant shall be for the final disposal of the suit.

Set-off in suits for arrears of rent.

113. In a suit to recover an arrear of rent no set-off shall be allowed against the claim, except such amount as may be due to the defendant on an unexecuted decree under this Act against the plaintiff.

Defendant may pay money into Court.

114. In any suit under this Act involving a claim to money, the defendant may, at any stage of the suit, deposit in Court such sum of money as he considers a satisfaction in full of the plaintiff's claim, together with the costs incurred by the plaintiff up to the time of such deposit.

Notice of the deposit shall be given to the plaintiff, and the amount deposited shall be paid to him on his application.

No interest shall be allowed to a plaintiff on any sum paid by the defendant into Court from the date of such payment, whether such sum be in full of the plaintiff's claim or fall short thereof.

Procedure for balance where defendant pays less than amount claimed.

115. In any case in which the defendant deposits less than the amount claimed by the plaintiff, nothing in section 114 shall bar the plaintiff from proceeding in the suit for the recovery of the balance.

Dismissal of suit for lease or counterpart, in absence of written evidence of agreement.

116. If a tenant not having a right of occupancy institute a suit against a landlord for the delivery of a lease, or a landlord institute a suit against a tenant not having a right of occupancy for the delivery of the counterpart of a lease, and the parties do not agree in respect of the particulars which such lease or counterpart is to contain, the Court shall dismiss the suit, unless evidence in writing is produced which shall satisfy the Court that an agreement has been entered into between the parties in accordance with which such lease or counterpart ought to be delivered.

Collector may make local enquiry.

117. The local enquiry described in section 180 of the Code of Civil Procedure may also, if he think fit, be made by the Collector in person or other officer presiding in the Court, and the provisions of the said Code regarding local inquiries shall apply to such inquiries made by such Collector or other officer.

In such cases the Collector or other officer as aforesaid, after completing the inquiry, shall record on the proceedings such observations as he thinks fit, and the observations so recorded shall be received as evidence in the suit.

As to Decrees.

Time within which execution may be had.

118. No process of execution shall be issued on a decree under this Act after the lapse of three years from the date of such decree.

Immediate execution of decree.

119. When a decree for money is made in any suit under this Act, the Court may, on the oral application of the party in whose favour the decree is passed, direct immediate execution thereof in the manner described in section 13 of Act No. XXIII of 1861 (to amend Act VIII of 1859.)

Decree for enhancement to state date from which it is to take effect.

120. When a decree in favour of the plaintiff is made in a suit for an enhancement of rent, the Court shall declare the date from which such enhancement shall take effect.

Enforcement of decree for delivery of papers or accounts.

121. If the decree be for the delivery of papers or accounts, it may be enforced by the imprisonment in the civil jail of the party against whom it is made, or by the attachment of his property, or by both imprisonment and attachment.

The imprisonment and attachment may be continued until he complies with the terms of the decree:

Provided that no person shall be imprisoned under this section for a longer period than six months.

Decrees for lease or counterpart to specify particulars.

122. A decree for the delivery of a lease or of the counterpart of a lease shall specify all the particulars mentioned in section 7, and such other particulars as to the Court seem fit.

Court after decree may grant lease or counterpart, in case of defendant's refusal.

123. If the decree be for the delivery of a lease or the counterpart of a lease, and the party ordered to deliver such lease or counterpart neglects or refuses so to do, the Court may grant a lease or counterpart in conformity with the terms of the decree, and such lease or counterpart shall have the same effect as if delivered by the party against whom the decree was passed.

Execution to be first made against moveable property.

124. If the decree be for money, no process in execution shall issue against the immoveable property of the judgment-debtor, other than attachment of such property, unless satisfaction of the decree cannot be obtained against his moveable property.

Sale of under-proprietary right in execution of decree for arrears of rent.

125. If the decree be for an arrear of rent due in respect of an under-proprietary right, the interest of the judgment-debtor in such right may, subject to the provisions of this Act, be sold in execution of the decree:

Provided that no such sale shall be allowed unless it appear to the Deputy Commissioner that satisfaction of the decree cannot be made in the manner referred to in sections 243 and 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

If it appear to the Court that such satisfaction can be made, the Court may exercise the powers given to it by the said section 243, although no application has been made by the judgment-debtor.

Appointment of Deputy Commissioner as manager.

The Deputy Commissioner may be appointed manager under the same section. When he has been so appointed, he may exercise for the satisfaction of the decree against the judgment-debtor, all the powers which, under any law in force in Oudh, he might have exercised for the recovery of an arrear of revenue due by such judgment-debtor to the Government.

Registration of incumbrance created by under-proprietor.

126. No beneficial lease or other incumbrance hereafter created on his tenure by any under-proprietor shall be valid, in the event of the sale of his rights and interests in execution of a decree for arrears of rent, unless such incumbrance has been registered under any rules or law for the time being in force in Oudh, within four months after the creation thereof, and not less than thirty days before the date of attachment of such rights and interests.

Proprietor's lien for rent payable by under-proprietor.

127. When an under-proprietor creates any such incumbrance, and fails to pay to the proprietor all or any part of the rent subsequently accruing in respect of the land subject to the incumbrance, the incumbrancer shall be liable to pay to the proprietor the whole or such part as aforesaid of the said rent, unless the proprietor has agreed in writing to waive any claim which he might otherwise have made on the incumbrancer under this section.

Right of pre-emption at execution-sales.

128. When land is sold in execution of a decree under this Act, and the land or any lot thereof has been knocked down to a stranger, any co-sharer, other than the judgment-debtor, may, before sunset on the day of sale, claim to take the land or lot, as the case may be, at the sum at which it was so knocked down.

If the land be an under-proprietary tenure, a like claim may also be made by the proprietor.

Any claim made under this section shall be allowed: Provided that if a claim to the same land or lot be made by a proprietor as well as by a co-sharer, the claim of the co-sharer shall be preferred: Provided also that no claim shall be allowed unless the claimant fulfil all the conditions of the sale binding on a purchaser.

SCHEDULE A.*

SCHEDULE D.

(See Section 109.)

Under the provisions of section 385 of Act No. VIII of 1859, and section 3 of Act No. IV of 1860, His Excellency the Governor General in Council is pleased to notify that, from 1st January 1862, Act VIII of 1859 is extended to the Province of Oudh, subject to the following exceptions and provisoes :—

1. Section 3 shall be subject to the following proviso :—

Provided that the Judicial Commissioner or any other Court exercising any appellate jurisdiction within the Province of Oudh, may, at any time within one year from the time of the passing or execution of any judgment or order by any Court subordinate to the said Appellate Court, call for such judgment or proceedings without any regular appeal or application for review having been preferred against the same, and may, if he or it shall see sufficient grounds, revise and alter, or reverse or confirm the same. But that in such case, before revising, altering or reversing any one judgment or order, the said Judicial Commissioner, or it, shall cause the same notice to be given to the party in whose favour the said judgment or order was pronounced, and the same opportunity to such party to be heard in support thereof, and the same proceedings to be taken as if a memorandum of appeal had been filed by the party aggrieved thereby.

2. Section 17 is excepted, and the term recognized agent is defined as follows, viz., a permanent servant, partner, relation, or friend, whom the Court may admit as a fit person to represent a party, and especially persons holding powers of attorney from absent parties, persons carrying on business on behalf of bankers and traders, managing agents of landholders, nearest male relations of women, and persons ex-officio authorized to act for Government, or for any Prince or Chief.

3. Section 111 shall be subject to the following limitation :—It shall not be obligatory on the Court to decide ex parte in the absence of defendant, but the Court may proceed to compel his attendance under the following rule, being the rule now in force in Oudh :—

Rule.—If the defendant does not appear, it shall be at the discretion of the Court to issue a warrant to arrest him and detain him till another day appointed for the hearing of the case, and to attach his property.

4. Section 172.—So much of this section as requires that the whole of the evidence shall be taken down in writing in the language in ordinary use is excepted, and the record made by the hand of the Judge, under the following rule, being the rule now in force in Oudh, shall be taken as a record of the evidence :—

Rule.—An intelligible note of the essential points of the evidence of each witness is to be taken at the time and in the course of oral examination by the officer who tries the case, in his own language. The notes must be legible, complete, and properly arranged, must attest the presence of the witness at the time, and mark every postponement and change of time and scene, so that their bonâ fide character may be apparent. Every essential point must be noted, but mere surplusage may be omitted. These notes shall be filed, and shall form part of the record of the case: Provided that in cases tried by a European officer, who has not passed the examination in the native languages prescribed for Assistant Commissioners exercising special powers, the evidence of witnesses shall also be recorded at length in their own language.

Section 205.—So much of this section as renders land liable to sale in execution of a decree, will be subject to the restrictions on the sale of land prescribed by the following rule, being the local rule now in force in Oudh :—

Rule.—No ancestral property in land shall be sold in satisfaction of a decree, without the sanction of the Judicial Commissioner; and before acquired property in land shall be so sold, the permission of the Divisional Commissioner shall be obtained.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 15th July 1868, and was referred to a Select Committee, with instructions to make their report thereon in one month:—

No. 16 OF 1868.

A Bill to prohibit the practice of inoculation in Kumaon and Garhwál.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to prohibit the practice of inoculation with the small-pox in the Districts of Kumaon and Garhwál, it is hereby enacted as follows:—

Penalty for inoculating.

1. Whoever produces or attempts to produce in any person by inoculation with variolous matter, or by wilful exposure to variolous matter, or to any thing impregnated therewith, or who wilfully by any other means produces the disease of small-pox in any person, shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, or to fine not exceeding two hundred rupees, or to both.

Penalty on inoculated person entering place to which Act extends.

2. If any person having been inoculated with the small-pox in a place to which this Act does not extend, shall afterwards enter any place to which this Act extends, before the date of forty days from the date of such inoculation, or without a certificate from a qualified Medical Officer that such person is no longer likely to cause contagion, such person shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, to imprisonment for a period not exceeding three months, or to a fine not exceeding two hundred rupees, or to both.

Reward to informer.

3. Whenever an offender is sentenced to pay a fine under this Act, the convicting Magistrate may award any portion not exceeding one-half of such fine to the person on whose information the offender has been convicted.

Extent of Act.

4. This Act extends only to the Districts of Kumaon and Garhwál.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill, which has been prepared at the request of the Lieutenant Governor of the North-Western Provinces, is to put a stop to the practice of inoculation in Kumaon and Garhwál, where proper arrangements exist for vaccinating the inhabitants.

The first and principal section of the Bill is taken from the English Statute 3 & 4 Vic., cap. 29. Section 2 is nearly identical with a clause in the Bengal Act IV of 1865, which was passed to check inoculation in Calcutta and its suburbs.

No. 17 OF 1868.

A Bill to exempt certain Instruments from the Indian Registration Act, 1866.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to exempt expressly from compulsory registration under the Indian Registration Act, 1866, certain documents heretofore or hereafter executed by or in favour of Government; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Scheduled documents exempted from Act XX of 1866.

1. Nothing contained in the said Act shall be deemed to require, or to have at any time required, the registration of any of the documents comprised in the Schedule hereto annexed.

But all such documents shall, for the purposes of sections forty-eight and forty-nine of the same Act, be deemed to have been and to be registered in accordance with its provisions.

This Act to be read with Act XX of 1866.

2. This Act shall be read with and taken as part of Act No. XX of 1866.

SCHEDULE.

Documents issued, received, or attested by any officer engaged in making a settlement or revision of settlement, of land revenue, and which form part of the records of such settlement.

Documents issued, received, or attested by any officer engaged on behalf of Government in making or revising the survey of any land, and which form part of the record of such survey.

Documents which, under any law for the time being in force, are filed annually by patwáris or other officers charged with the preparation of village records.

Sanads and other documents purporting to be grants or assignments by Government of land or of any interest in land, in reward for special services.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

By the Indian Registration Act, instruments purporting to create, declare, limit, or extinguish any title or interest to or in immoveable property of the value of one hundred rupees or upwards, which have been executed subsequently to the 1st January 1865—the date on which Act No. XVI of 1864 came into operation—must be registered to attain legal validity as documents of title.

The question has been raised as to whether settlement and survey records come within that class of instruments the registration of which is by law made compulsory, and as some diversity of opinion exists on the subject, and very extensive settlement operations are now in progress in the North-Western Provinces and other parts of the Empire, it is desirable that all doubt as to the liability of these documents to the provisions of the Registration Act should be removed by legislative enactment.

The enforced registration of these records is considered inexpedient, because the objects of registration are already fully attained through the manner in which such records are prepared, and the character of the agency employed in their preparation, whilst they are no less accessible to persons seeking information as to their contents than the records of the registration office, and secondly, because the conditions attaching to the process of registration would necessarily be productive of great trouble and inconvenience to the numerous parties to the settlement record, besides entailing unnecessary expense.

The exemption of sanads, conferring on individuals grants of land, with retrospective effect, is also necessary to give a sound title to the holders. A very large number of such sanads have issued since the 1st January 1865, and, owing to doubts as to the requirements of the law in respect to them, have never been registered. Their registration now is impracticable, and as in these cases no less than in those of the settlement and survey records, the objects of a distinct registration are otherwise secured, it is proposed to add this class of documents to the schedule of the Bill.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 22nd July 1868:—

No. 18 OF 1868.

A Bill to enable Municipalities to provide for Lock-Hospitals.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to enable all Municipalities in British India to provide out of the municipal funds for the maintenance of Lock-Hospitals and generally for the prevention of contagious venereal disease; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Power to Municipal Committees to devote funds to maintaining Lock-Hospitals, &c.

1. Notwithstanding anything contained in any Act of the Governor General of India in Council, of the Governor of Madras in Council, of the Governor of Bombay in Council, of the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal in Council, or in any other law for the time being in force, it shall be lawful for every Municipal Corporation, Municipal Committee, or other Body of persons duly appointed to conduct the affairs of a municipality in British India to pay out of the funds at their disposal, towards the maintenance of the hospital provided under section twelve of Act No. XIV of 1868 (for the prevention of certain contagious diseases) within the limits of the place for which they are so appointed, and towards defraying the cost of the medical treatment, lodging, clothing and food of the women detained in such hospital, and of the allowance provided under section nineteen of the same Act for the subsistence of prostitutes residing within the limits aforesaid, such part as may from time to time be agreed on by and between the Corporation, Committee or Body and the Local Government of the total cost of the said maintenance, treatment, lodging, clothing, food and allowance as annually estimated by such Government.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill is to enable Municipalities to contribute towards the expenses attending the introduction of the Indian Contagious Diseases Act. These expenses are so considerable that the Government of India may be unable, unless aided out of local resources, to introduce the Act into many places where its provisions are urgently required. The Bill is merely an enabling measure, and the amount of the contribution will from time to time be determined by agreement between the Local Government and the Municipality concerned.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 30th July 1868:—

No. 19 OF 1868.

A Bill to provide against European Vagrancy.

Preamble.

WHEREAS numerous persons of European extraction are at present wandering in a destitute condition throughout India, and whereas such conduct is prejudicial to public order, and it is expedient to prevent the same; it is hereby enacted as follows:—

I.—Preliminary.

Short title.

Commencement of Act.

1. This Act may be called "The European Vagrancy Act, 1868," and shall come into operation on such day as the Governor General of India in Council shall by notification in the Gazette of India appoint in this behalf.

Interpretation clause. 'Vagrant.'

2. In this Act—"vagrant" means a person of European extraction found asking for alms or wandering about without any employment or visible means of subsistence:

"Magistrate." "Magistrate" means, within the limits of the Presidency Towns, a Police Magistrate, and, outside those limits, any person exercising the powers of a Magistrate;

"Master of a ship." And "master of a ship" includes any person in charge of a decked vessel.

II.—Procedure.

Power to require apparent vagrant to go before Police Magistrate, Justice of the Peace or Superintendent of Police.

3. Any Police officer may require any person who is apparently a vagrant to go to and appear before the nearest Police Magistrate, Justice of the Peace or Superintendent of Police.

Where the distance from the place where the person apparently a vagrant is found to such Police Magistrate, Justice or Superintendent exceeds ten miles, the Police officer may require the person apparently a vagrant to go, in the first instance, to the nearest Police station, whence he shall be forwarded by the officer in charge of the station to the nearest Police Magistrate, Justice of the Peace or Superintendent of Police.

Summary inquiry into vagrant's circumstances.

4. The Police Magistrate, Justice or Superintendent shall make a summary inquiry into the circumstances and character of the alleged vagrant; and if he is satisfied that such person is a vagrant he shall record in his office a declaration to that effect. If he is further of opinion that the vagrant is not likely to obtain employment at once, he shall require him to go to a Government work-house, and shall draw out an order to that effect.

The vagrant shall then be placed in charge of the Police for the purpose of being forwarded to the work-house, and the said order shall be a sufficient authority to the Police for retaining him in their charge while he is on his way to the work-house, and to the Governor of the work-house for receiving and detaining such vagrant.

Forwarding vagrant to place of employment.

5. Where the officer making the inquiry mentioned in section four is of opinion that the vagrant is likely to obtain employment in any part of the territories subject to the Local Government to which he is desirous of proceeding, such officer may in his discretion forward the vagrant to such place in charge of the Police and draw up an order to that effect.

Such order shall be a sufficient authority to the Police for retaining him in their charge while he is on his way to such place of employment.

Assistance to obtain employment.

6. Upon his arrival at the place of employment, the vagrant shall be taken before the nearest Police Magistrate, Justice of the Peace or Superintendent of Police, to whom the order for transmission shall be delivered.

Such officer shall thereupon, to the best of his ability, assist the vagrant in seeking employment, and shall keep him under the observation, but not in the charge, of the Police, while he is seeking employment.

Should he fail to obtain employment within a reasonable time, such officer shall forward him to a Government work-house in the manner provided by section four.

Subsistence allowance.

7. Every person, while in charge of the Police, whether before inquiry as to his vagrancy, or while he is on his way to the work-house or, under section five, to a place of employment, shall be entitled to an allowance for his subsistence at the rate of eight annas per diem.

The Police Magistrate, Justice or Superintendent before whom any vagrant is taken under section six, may order him to receive a similar allowance for a reasonable time while he is seeking employment.

Such allowance shall be paid out of such funds and in such manner as the Local Government may from time to time direct.

III.—Government Work-houses.

Government work-houses.

8. The Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General of India in Council, may provide work-houses, with their necessary furniture and establishment, at such places as it may think proper, for the temporary reception of vagrants, or may by writing under the hand of a Secretary to such Government, certify any building or part of a building not provided as a work-house under the former part of this section, to be fit for a work-house for the purposes of this Act. Every such certificate shall be published in the local official Gazette, and thereupon such building or part of a building shall be deemed a Government work-house under this Act.

Scale of diet.

The Local Government shall allow the same scale of diet for the support of vagrants received in such work-houses as is from time to time allowed for Europeans confined in the local prisons or penitentiaries.

Superintendence of work-houses.

9. Every such work-house shall be under the immediate charge of a governor who shall be appointed and may be suspended or removed by the Local Government, and who shall, if the Local Government think fit, be subject to the orders of a Committee of Management appointed from time to time by such Government.

Search of vagrants.

10. Every such governor may order that any vagrant admitted to the work-house under his charge shall be searched, and that the vagrant's bundles, packages and other effects shall be inspected, and may direct that any money then found with or on the vagrant, shall be applied (subject to the orders of the Local Government) towards the expense of carrying this Act into execution, and may order that all or any of the said effects shall be sold, and that the produce of the sale be applied as aforesaid.

Discipline.

11. Vagrants admitted to work-houses under this Act shall be subject to such rules of management and discipline, and to such penalties for wilfully disobeying or neglecting them, as may from time to time be prescribed by the Local Government:

Provided that such rules shall not prescribe a term of imprisonment for any one offence greater than three months, and that they shall have received the previous sanction of the Governor General of India in Council.

Refusal to accept employment.

12. The governor and the Committee of Management (if any) of every such work-house shall use his and their best endeavours to obtain suitable employment for the vagrants in the work-house. When such employment is obtained, any such vagrant refusing or neglecting to avail himself thereof, shall, on conviction before a Magistrate, be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month.

IV.—Deportation.

Deportation of vagrants.

13. If after the lapse of a reasonable time no suitable employment is obtainable for any such vagrant, it shall be lawful for the Local Government to deport him to England or elsewhere as it shall in each case think fit.

The cost of such deportation shall be paid by Government.

Certificate.

14. When any vagrant is deported, he shall receive a certificate signed by the governor of the work-house to which he has last been admitted, which shall state the fact of his having been deported under the orders of Government, the character which he bore at such work-house, and the trade or calling to which he had previously belonged.

Subsistence on landing.

15. A sum of money sufficient for the vagrant's subsistence for one month shall also be paid to the master of the ship in which he is to be deported, and shall be given by the master to the vagrant when he is landed at the end of his voyage:

Provided that if the vagrant die during the voyage, the master shall pay such sum to the Secretary of State for India, or to such other authority as the Local Government shall from time to time appoint.

V.—Penalties.

Refusal to pay the subsistence allowance.

16. Any such master of a British ship refusing or neglecting to give or pay such sum of money, as hereinbefore required, shall for every such neglect or default be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, in addition to the payment of the sum aforesaid, to a fine not exceeding one hundred rupees.

Refusal to receive vagrants on board.

17. Every master of a British sailing ship, who, on being tendered or paid such sum as the Local Government shall from time to time appoint, refuses to receive on board his ship any vagrant whom the Local Government requires him to take on board for the purpose of being deported under the provisions hereinbefore contained:

or who fails to keep and detain such vagrant on board his ship for the voyage for which the vagrant is shipped, or who fails to give a subsistence to such vagrant, or to provide him with a proper berth or sleeping-place effectually protected against sea and weather, shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, in addition to payment of the sum last aforesaid (if it has been paid to the master) to a fine not exceeding five hundred rupees.

Refusal to go before Magistrate.

18. Any person refusing to proceed before a Magistrate of Police, Justice of the Peace or Superintendent for the purpose of preliminary inquiry, when required so to do by a Police Officer under section three, shall be punishable, on conviction before a Magistrate, with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine, or with both.

For the purposes of this section the Magistrate shall have such jurisdiction as he would have if the person so refusing were an European not being a British subject.

Escaping from Police.

19. Any vagrant escaping from the Police while committed to their charge under the orders specified in sections three and four,

Quitting work-house without leave.

or leaving a work-house under this Act without permission from the governor,

Refusing to go on boardship.

or refusing to go on boardship for the purpose of deportation when duly ordered so to do under section eleven,

Escaping from ship.

or escaping from the ship in which he is being deported, shall be punishable, on conviction before a Magistrate, with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years.

Begging.

20. Any vagrant found begging when he has sufficient means of subsistence, or when he might obtain a suitable employment, or demanding alms in a threatening or insolent manner, or continuing to demand alms of any person after he has been required to desist, shall be punishable, on conviction before a Magistrate, with rigorous imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month for the first offence, two months for the second, and three months for any subsequent offence.

Procedure on close of imprisonment.

21. Every person imprisoned under section eighteen, nineteen or twenty shall, at the end of his term of imprisonment, be immediately placed before the nearest Magistrate of Police or Justice of the Peace, who shall, if he think fit, forthwith deal with him in the manner prescribed by sections four and five.

The order of transmission shall certify the fact of the previous conviction.

Such person may be at once deported in the manner provided by sections thirteen, fourteen and fifteen.

VI.—Miscellaneous.

Vagrants deprived of privileges of British subjects under Code of Criminal Procedure.

22. Any European British subject who, upon the summary enquiry mentioned in section four, has been determined to be a vagrant shall so long as he remains in India, be subject, beyond the limits of the Presidency Towns, to the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure (other than those contained in Chapter XIX of the same Code) applicable to an European not being a British subject:

A copy of the declaration recorded under section four purporting to be signed by the officer for the time being entrusted with the custody of such declaration shall be primâ facie evidence that the European British subject named therein has been, upon such enquiry, determined to be a vagrant.

If from any cause he is committed or held to bail by a Justice of the Peace to take his trial before a High Court, he shall not be at liberty to object to the jurisdiction of such Justice of the Peace or High Court on the ground of anything contained in the former part of this section.

And no proceeding under this Act shall be deemed invalid by reason only that the Police Magistrate, Justice of the Peace or Superintendent of Police to and before whom a person apparently a vagrant was required to go and appear was not the nearest or that the distance mentioned in section three did not exceed ten miles.

Liability of importers of Europeans becoming vagrants.

23. Where any person of European extraction is, after the passing of this Act, brought out to India under an engagement to serve any other person, or any Company, Association or Body of persons in any capacity, and becomes chargeable to the State as a vagrant within one year after his arrival in India, then the person, or Company, Association or Body to serve whom he was so brought out to India shall be liable to pay to the Government the cost of his deportation and all other charges incurred by the State in consequence of his becoming a vagrant.

Such costs and charges shall be recoverable by suit as if an express agreement to repay the same had been entered into with the Secretary of State for India in Council by the person, Company, Association or Body chargeable.

Penalty for bringing European convicts to India.

24. Every master of a ship bringing or landing in any part of India any person of European extraction who has been convicted in any other part of Her Majesty's dominions of an offence which, if committed in England, would be felony, and who has been released on a licence to be at large or on the expiration of the term for which he has been sentenced, shall, on conviction before a Magistrate, be liable for every such offence to pay a fine not exceeding four hundred rupees, and, in default of payment, to imprisonment for any term not exceeding two months.

Recovery and payment of fines.

25. All fines imposed under this Act may be recovered, if for offences committed outside the local limits of the towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay in the manner prescribed by the Code of Criminal Procedure, and if for offences committed within those limits, in the manner prescribed by any Act regulating the Police of such towns in force for the time being.

All fines recovered under this Act shall be paid to the credit of the Government of India, or as such Government shall from time to time direct.

Exercise in Native States of powers conferred by this Act.

26. The powers and duties conferred and imposed by this Act on Justices of the Peace, Superintendents of Police, and Police respectively may, in places beyond the limits of British India, be exercised and performed by such persons respectively as the Governor General of India in Council shall from time to time by notification in the Gazette of India appoint in this behalf.

Governor General in Council empowered to make rules.

27. The Governor General of India in Council may from time to time make rules consistent with this Act for the guidance of Officers in matters connected with its enforcement.

All such rules shall be published in the Gazette of India.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of the present Bill is to provide against the vagrancy in India of persons of European extraction. Representations concerning the magnitude of the evil have been received from all parts of the country, and these representations have recently become so urgent that, in spite of the undoubted difficulty of the subject, the Government of India feels itself no longer justified in postponing an attempt to deal with it.

It is abundantly clear from the numerous papers now in the hands of Government that European vagrants are greatly multiplying; that they cause intolerable annoyance both to the European and to the Native communities; that vagrancy, when once begun, tends almost certainly to the moral and physical destruction of the vagrant; and that it constitutes a grave political danger through the discredit which it casts on the entire British race. Selections from the documents which establish these facts will from time to time be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India.

It cannot, moreover, be doubted, upon the evidence before the Government, that European crime must greatly increase in India, unless the multiplication of vagrants be checked. It is shown that many of them have actually belonged to the criminal classes in the colonies, and come to India because their reputation does not follow them to this country.

Two specific proposals for the repression of vagrancy have been received from Local Governments. The Government of Bombay has suggested that European vagrants should be brought under the provisions of Chapter XIX of the Code of Criminal Procedure, which permit the detention of persons of suspicious character who are unable to find security for their good conduct. The expedient has the unquestionable advantage of simplicity; but it seems to be open to the objection that this part of the Code has its justification exclusively in certain peculiarities of Native society. The assumption is made that if a man is the least respectable, there are always members of his caste, family, or village community, who will go bail for his behaviour. Such an assumption obviously does not hold in regard to the European vagrant, and to make it violently would give an air of unfairness to the law, since no law seems completely defensible which makes amenability to its provisions depend on the fulfilment of a condition which manifestly cannot be fulfilled.

The Government of Madras proposes, on the other hand, to deal with European vagrancy as a substantive evil to be treated in a special manner. The revised Bill sent up by that Government follows to some extent the analogies of the English Law of pauper removal. This principle has been adopted in the present measure, with which many of the provisions of the Madras Bill have been incorporated.

If the Bill becomes law, the first step in giving effect to its provisions is the establishment by the Government of work-houses for Europeans. These work-houses will be under the immediate charge of a Governor. Inasmuch, however, as several Houses of Industry of the same nature as the proposed work-houses already exist, power is given to the Government to license existing establishments so as to bring them within the Act. Having regard too to the probability that many charitable persons will be willing to co-operate in the reclamation of the vagrant, the Government is empowered to appoint a Committee of Management if it shall think fit, and to place the Governor under the orders of the Committee.

As soon as work-houses have been established the machinery of the Act can be brought into operation. When an officer of Police finds a person of European extraction asking for alms or wandering about apparently without employment he may require such person to proceed to the nearest Police Magistrate, Justice of the Peace or Superintendent of Police. This functionary will make a summary enquiry into the circumstances of the alleged vagrant, and if satisfied of his vagrancy, will make a declaration to that effect. If there is no prospect of procuring employment for the person thus declared to be a vagrant, he will be at once forwarded to a work-house. If there is a prospect of his obtaining employment at any particular place he [illegible]

[illegible] feared that there will be seldom any chance of the vagrant finding employment, until he has been partially reclaimed by treatment in the work-house. The order of removal will probably nearly always be, in the first instance, an order to proceed to the work-house. But it has been thought right to make provision for the chance of employment being procurable at once.

The treatment of the vagrant in the work-house will be directed to his reclamation from habits which are unfortunately shown to be not but universal in the class. But it is imperatively necessary that stringent rules of labour and discipline should be prescribed, and that breach of these rules should be punishable. Provisions to that effect are contained in the Bill; at the same time it is required that the Governor and Committee shall use their best endeavours to obtain employment outside the work-house for such of the vagrants as are fitted for it.

It is to be hoped that the system just described will do something to ameliorate the moral and physical condition of the European vagrants now in India. It is, however, urgently necessary that the numbers of such persons in the country should be permanently diminished, and, in considering the best means of effecting this object, some questions of not inconsiderable difficulty present themselves. In front of these is the question, whether persons of European extraction, morally certain to become vagrants, can be prevented from landing in India.

Among the proposals originally submitted to the Government of Fort St. George by the Madras Committee of Vagrancy, was a provision that it should be punishable in a shipmaster to land, except with official sanction, "time-expired convicts, ticket-of-leave men, or destitute persons not being sailors, and having no engagements of service on shore." There is also an Act of the Indian Legislature, XLI of 1850, which imposes penalties on shipmasters landing "any diseased, maimed, blind, or decrepit person, not having the means of subsistence" in the Straits Settlement. It is further understood that there are Australian enactments prohibiting the importation of time-expired convicts from the Western Settlement into the other colonies. And the papers before the Government show that several zealous and benevolent persons, who have already done much for the vagrant, are of opinion that no cure for the evil will be complete, except a stringent system of preventing ingress into India.

The only plan of prohibition which promises to be effectual is that adopted in the measures above referred to, of making it punishable for a shipmaster to land in India persons of European extraction belonging to certain particular classes, such as, time-expired convicts or ticket-of-leave men, or falling under some general categories, such as, "persons not having the means of subsistence," or "the means or prospect of procuring employment." The penalties would have to be of general application, and the commanders of the Peninsular and Oriental ships, and of the large passenger sailing-vessels, would be liable to them as well as other ship-masters. The Indian Legislature cannot give commanders of ships a legal power of examining into the circumstances of their passengers, until they come into Indian waters; but they would of course in their own defence make enquiry at their port of departure. Such perquisitions would in themselves cause annoyance, and the refusals to convey particular persons, which would follow, might expose the Indian Government to a good deal of misconstruction. It is further some objection that certain classes whom nobody would wish to include in a technical definition, might get entangled in it. A respectable young man coming out in the hope of obtaining a clerkship in Calcutta or Bombay, or an appointment in the Uncovenanted Service, might be in some danger of being forbidden the country.

It is, however, very improbable that any system would be effectual, unless directed against a well-defined class. The Government of Madras seems to have omitted the prohibitory section from its revised Bill on account of the difficulty of bringing home to the captain knowledge of the position of his passengers. Another technical embarrassment arises from the fact that any prospect of employment or provision for subsistence possessed by the passenger, however inadequate, would XVII. If a Chaplain shall overstay his privilege leave, he shall forfeit all salary during the time of his remaining so absent.

CHAPTER III.

Special Leave.

XVIII. Special leave on urgent private affairs may be granted at the discretion of the Government for a period not exceeding six months. In respect of allowances to be drawn during the leave and of subsidiary leave, the conditions of special leave shall be the same as those prescribed for furlough under Rules VII. and XI.

XIX. Rule XVII. shall, mutatis mutandis, apply to a Chaplain overstaying special leave.

XX. Special leave may be repeated without allowances after intervals of at least six years' actual service.

CHAPTER IV.

General.

XXI. Applications for leave shall in all cases be submitted in such manner as the Governor General of India in Council may from time to time prescribe.

XXII. Furlough, privilege leave, and special leave shall not be taken as such in continuation of each other; but if a Chaplain absent on one of these classes of leave be allowed to change it for another, the whole period of his absence shall be held to be under the class of leave for which it was changed.

XXIII. Subject to considerations of State, there shall be no restriction as to the places where a Chaplain may reside when on leave.

XXIV. Leave allowance shall be payable monthly, if payment is taken in India, and quarterly, if payment is taken in England. When furlough is taken in England an advance of the first quarter's allowances may be made in India. Such advance shall not be recoverable in case of death.

XXV. The term of residence qualifying for pension shall be, in the case of Chaplains appointed before the 11th January 1854, 15 years, and in the case of Chaplains appointed on or after that date, 17 years, but no leave, except privilege leave and subsidiary leave, shall count as residence.

XXVI. The term of service qualifying for pension shall be, in the case of Chaplains appointed before the 11th January 1854, 18 years, and in the case of Chaplains appointed on or after that date, 20 years. Leave of absence in India taken prior to the 25th August 1864 shall count as service for pension, and shall not be reckoned su furlough under these rules.

No. 736 of 1868.—The following extract from the London Gazette of the 30th June 1868, pages 3649 to 3681, is published for general information :—

INDIA OFFICE,
June 29th, 1868.

The following despatches have been this day received from Lieutenant General Sir Robert Napier, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., Commanding the Abyssinian Expeditionary Force :—

No. 1.

From Lieutenant General Sir R. NAPIER, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., to the Secretary of State for India

COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF'S OFFICE,
Camp Koomeylee,
June 1st, 1868.

RIGHT HON'BLE SIR,—In continuation of my despatch No. 40, dated 12th May, I have the honour to report that I this day passed the Sooroo defile with the last column of the Abyssinian Expeditionary Force, the 25th Bombay Native Light Infantry, and the 27th Belooch Battalion.

The march from Dalanta to Antalo was trying from the frequent severe storms of rain which appeared to accompany us, and from which our troops, in some degree, and more especially the followers and transport animals, could not fail to suffer.

The wild border tribes of Abyssinians and Gallas, through whom our route lay, from the Taccarsi to Antalo, being very little under the control of their distant and almost nominal rulers, and were perfectly well behaved on our advance, finding by degrees our vulnerable points, had been for some time making attacks upon our muleteers and camp followers, when venturing far from their escorts, and on some occasions even on our armed soldiers.

In the first instances some camp followers were killed, and in the last our soldiers being driven to use their weapons, several Abyssinians and Gallas were killed and wounded.

Considerable numbers of armed men, principally Gallas, watched our march from the hills, and, though restrained by the pressure of our columns, they made attempts on our line of baggage, but met with little success; soldiers were freely interspersed along the line and the rear guard from Marowa to Antalo was continuously under the command of an experienced Officer, Lieutenant Colonel Bray, of the 4th (King's Own) Regiment, until we reached the coast.

This was a very clear indication of what a force returning in difficulties would experience.

In the friendly territory of Prince Russai, the troops returned to marches made easy by the improved roads and the increased supplies of articles of food, turned into great luxuries by a period of privation, which were stored in the fortified ports of Antalo and Addigerat.

All local information led me to believe that there would be no danger of floods before the middle of June; but owing to the extraordinary severity of the spring rains, a succession of floods during the early part of May did much damage to the Sooroo defile road.

On the 19th of May, with hardly any warning, a heavy flood, coming from a lateral tributary which enters above Sooroo, filled the Sooroo defile channel so suddenly that seven camp followers and some cattle, not being instantly removed from the waterway, were swept away and perished.

On the 30th of January full precautionary instructions were issued to secure the safety of the troops in the Pass, and I had no apprehension on their account. The losses of the 19th arose from avoidable causes, and were not likely to recur.

In case we might be detained during the rainy season, an alternative line turning the Sooroo defile had been surveyed by Lieutenant De Thoren, 45th Regiment, Quarter Master General's Department, by which a safer, though less even, path might have been opened.

By the exertions of the garrison of Sooroo, directed by Captain Chrystie, Royal Engineers, the damage to the road in the Pass was rapidly repaired after each flood.

The severe weather in the high mountains, with the reaction after excitement and the scanty food, naturally increased the sick lists, but there are few bad cases.

The wounded are rapidly recovering, and although the total number of sick ultimately amounted to two hundred and sixty, no member of the force, however humble, has failed to obtain transport when required.

The whole force have returned in safety to the coast, and the greater part have already re-embarked.

It is now my duty to lay before Her Majesty's Government a statement of the services of the troops under my command and of the general, departmental and personal staff.

Those who first claim notice are the Pioneer Force, who landed in Zoulla in October last, and consisted of Major Marett's Mountain Battery (Native), the 3rd and 4th Companies of Bombay Sappers and Miners under Captains Leslie and Leacock, the 3rd Bombay Light Cavalry, commanded by Colonel Graves, and the 10th Native Infantry under Colonel Field, who commanded the whole.

Their labours were not commenced under very encouraging circumstances; a barren shore so shelving that the troops had to wade several hundred yards daily in landing stores; a supply of water so scanty that it disappeared immediately, and a temperature so sultry that any exertion was oppressive, but the spirit of the troops never flagged, encamping grounds were cleared, twenty miles of road were made from the coast to Koomeylee, and towards Sooroo, a depôt was established at Senafé, and huts erected for the muleteers.

Lieutenant Beck's Company of the Bombay Marine Battalion was the first party of Infantry in Abyssinia amongst the earliest labourers in the Sooroo defile, and throughout the campaign performed most valuable service as Pioneers, in sinking wells and opening and maintaining the road to Senafe.

The left wing of the 10th garrisoned Senafé, and had a large share in the works which made the depôt a model of neatness and of convenience in its water-supply.

The right wing of the 10th formed part of the advanced pioneer column, and shared in all its labours; after five months of work, it had an unwilling rest at Antalo, and was soon again in the front and at the capture of Magdala.

The next arrivals in the country were Murray's Armstrong Battery, the 33rd Regiment under Colonel Dunn, V.C., and Beville's Belooch Battalion.

Captain Murray, during a long detention of his battery at Koomeylee, sought occupation for his men in every way that could aid our progress. It mattered little whether they cleared the obstructions in seven miles of road, carried water for six miles to support a working party, moved stores for the Commissariat, broke in mules to harness, or fitted them with pack-saddles; everything was done with the same ability and zeal that has carried the battery over eight hundred miles of mountains in efficient condition.

The 33rd Regiment furnished a detachment of two companies to Koomeylee for sinking wells. They were the first British Infantry in Abyssinia; they furnished heavy fatigue parties for all the works at Zoulla. In the absence of a sufficient number of the Land Transport Corps, the men converted themselves into extemporary muleteers, and re-caught and saved large numbers of mules which would otherwise have perished. They then proceeded to Senafé.

The Belooch Regiment went to Koomeylee where Major Beville with the right wing joined Sturt's Bombay Sappers in making the admirable road in the Sooroo defile. Major Hogg with the left wing made the scarcely less difficult one at Rary Guddie. The Beloochees then garrisoned Addigerat, and raised much of the intrenchments there. The right wing partook of all the labours of the advance, and was present at Arogie and Magdala. The left wing long delayed for carriage at length pressed to the front, and by hard marching was present at Magdala on the 13th April.

The 10th Company Royal Engineers under Major Pritchard composed of a body of highly-instructed and valuable soldiers, arrived from England, and was amongst the first to land at Zoulla.

The well-sinkers, directed by Lieutenant Le-Mesurier, the signallers under Lieutenant Morgan, and the telegraphers and photographers have rendered excellent service throughout the campaign. The head quarters of the 10th Company has always accompanied the leading column in the advance.

The 4th King's Own Regiment, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Cameron, with the 3rd and 25th Bombay Native Infantry under Lieutenant Colonels Campbell and Little on arrival at Zoulla, were immediately put to work upon the railway, on landing water and stores for the force, and on the embankments to protect the Commissariat stores which were liable to be inundated at spring tides: all these were heavy labours which left no soldier unemployed.

Nothing could exceed the spirit with which these regiments worked in order to hasten the advance. The work on the foreshore fell chiefly on the Native troops. Little could the mud-bespattered labourer with his basket be recognized as the smart sepoy of the parade ground.

Major Chamberlain's Pioneers on arrival at once took their place on the works; they brought the energy and the spirit of their race, together with their organization for skilled labour, to bear on every duty, and the works received an increased impetus.

At fifty feet below the surface, they found sweet water—an inestimable blessing to the Ishmaelites of Zoulla, who in their gratitude were ready to worship the Punjabees. There is no part of the way which does not bear marks of the labour of this regiment, either on the roads or the telegraph.

The 33rd Regiment was never idle. At Senafé and Antalo every man was employed, not only in making the roads and intrenchments, but in cutting and bringing in grass and wood for the Commissariat and poles for the telegraph. When joined by the 4th King's Own Regiment, they bore the first brunt of opening the way through the rocky mountains of Lasta to Magdala.

The A. and B. Batteries, 21st Brigade, Royal Artillery, under Lieutenant Colonel Penn and Captain Twiss, took over the steel mountain guns on landing. They broke in mules, fitted their harness, and made extraordinary progress in the organization of these batteries, which maintained their thorough efficiency during the march to Magdala and back.

Whilst waiting for the time when they could advance, and when the provisioning of Senafé was of the first importance, these batteries carried up several convoys of stores and provisions to that post.

The 5th Battery, 25th Brigade, Royal Artillery (brass rifled mountain guns), under Major Bogle, arrived from Calcutta complete and efficient in every particular of equipment.

The circumstances of the campaign did not permit this battery to join the advance troops; but while waiting at Zoulla before they advanced to Senafé, Major Bogle volunteered the services of his battery for every useful work. In carrying treasure and stores to Senafé, the battery marched nearly one thousand miles. It furnished a detachment, under Major Hills, V.C., which manned two 8-inch mortars, a valuable battery on elephants, which was carried to Magdala and employed in the attack on that fortress. In case of a protracted defence, these mortars would have been invaluable.

Elephants have frequently been employed for the transport of Artillery in Indian warfare, but it has been generally by means of draught; when guns have been carried, it has only been for short distances.

It has been the privilege of this campaign to prove that elephants could carry Armstrong 12-pounder guns and 8-inch mortars over steep mountains for many hundreds of miles.

There were forty-two elephants employed in the conveyance of ordnance and ammunition, and of these five have been lost from hard work and want of water during the operations before Magdala.

The Royal Naval Rocket Brigade, under Commander Fellowes, furnished chiefly by Her Majesty's ship Octavia, broke in their own mules, quickly learned duties and a drill which were new to them, carried stores and provisions to Senafé, marched well, and were with the leading brigade in the advance on Magdala. They have added to the high reputation which the Royal Navy have ever held when serving with the army in the field.

The 45th Regiment, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Parish, arrived at Zoulla early in February, and remained there employed on the railway and other works until the 19th of March, when at length the obstacles to their advance being overcome, the head quarters and six companies making most strenuous efforts to reach the front, arrived at Dalanta in time to share in the operations against Magdala, after having marched 300 miles in twenty-four days accomplishing the last 70 miles across the Wandach Pass, 10,500 feet high, and the Taccassi and Jeddah ravines in four days—a rate of marching in such a country hardly to be surpassed. Four companies being urgently required were detained at Koomeylee until late in March, when they were sent to garrison Addigerat and Antalo.

In addition to the severe mountain marches in which each soldier carried a heavy load, regiments often worked at the roads on the line of march, or immediately on arrival in camp. Not unfrequently every available man of a regiment has been on working parties or outlying picket.

The constant storms of rain and the cold nights of the high altitude were encountered cheerfully on rations reduced to eight ounces of flour and meat only. An increase was made to the allowance of meat it is true, but that increase gave no compensation for the articles of rum, sugar, and compressed vegetables which had to be left behind.

The 2nd Bombay Grenadiers and 18th Bombay Native Infantry, commanded by Lieutenant Colonels Muter and Combe, and the 21st Bengal Native Infantry (Punjabees), by Major Thelwall, C.B., while longing for an order to advance, contributed most cheerfully their labours for many weeks to the railway, the roads through the Pass, the wells, the water-supply, and the conservancy of the Pass.

Of the regiments of the 4th Brigade, which had been held in readiness in Bombay, the 26th Cameronians, under Lieutenant Colonel Henning, alone landed, and were moved as quickly as possible to Senafé; but short as was the detention of this regiment at Zoulla, it also contributed its labours to forward the work at our base.

The 5th and 8th Regiments Bombay Native Infantry, commanded by Lieutenant Colonels Taylor and Sandwith, both regiments with a high reputation, returned to India on the fall of Magdala without having landed in Abyssinia.

These three regiments were all wanted earlier, but were not sent for because they could not have been moved to the highlands for want of food and transport.

Before the arrival of the Cameronians, when the connecting posts of our line had been numerically much weaker than I desired, I had obtained the services of 200 seamen and marines, under Captain Colin Campbell, from her Majesty's ship Octavia. They marched towards Senafé; but the arrival of the Cameronians rendered their proceeding onwards no longer necessary.

The Cavalry service has been such as to call for the fullest powers of that arm as Light Cavalry.

The long line of communication required that the Cavalry should be in many detachments.

They have had peculiar responsibility thrown upon their officers and soldiers. Left in isolated positions, far from control, entrusted with Commissariat duties, while charged to be conciliatory to the people of the country, they have been firm in maintaining inviolate the respect due to their position as soldiers. The supplies for the troops marching to join the main force in advance frequently depended on the ability and trustworthiness of a non-commissioned officer of Cavalry; and I have had repeated testimony to the efficiency with which these duties have been performed.

Seldom or never have Cavalry had such a variety of duties in maintaining communications for so many miles, climbing over mountains and through forest ranges, often benighted, where a false step would be destruction, and in danger of treacherous attacks from the wild border tribes, who are honoured amongst themselves for slaying without reason and without scruple.

The wear and tear of horses in such duties have been very considerable. The men, however, have returned to their more regular duties with a discipline and efficiency unimpaired.

The wing of the 3rd Dragoon Guards was long detained in India, and arrived late in the campaign.

Notwithstanding the distance and the severity of the country through which they marched, Colonel Tower by judicious management brought both men and horses in the most efficient condition in time to share in the investment of Magdala.

The 3rd Bombay Cavalry and the 3rd Regiment Sind Horse, commanded by Major Briggs, having been the earliest in the field, have borne the hardest share of the duties, serving in their turn as parts of the Pioneer force.

The rough training of the Sind Frontier Brigade, ever on outpost duty, rendered Major Briggs' regiment admirably qualified for the duties which it was called upon to perform in Abyssinia.

The 12th and 10th Bengal Cavalry, under Majors Gough, V.C., and Palliser, took up on the 18th of March and the 1st of April the chain of posts between Antalo and the Taccassi, and Major Gough brought up the head quarter detachment of the 12th, reduced to ninety-six men, to share in the attack on Magdala.

Major Palliser, with the head quarters of the 10th Cavalry, arrived at Attala in most opportune time to preserve our communications, which were very seriously assailed; had the service been of longer duration, the regiments of Bengal Cavalry would have added to the high opinions which their soldierlike performance of their duties and efficient equipment have called forth.

The Royal Engineers, directed by Lieutenant Colonel St. Clair Wilkins, have rendered invaluable services during this Expedition, which has given such an ample field for their employment.

Their energy and skill are shown in every work, from the first landing in Zoulla to Magdala, and require a special separate report.

The works of the Madras and Bombay Sappers and Miners, under Major Prendergast, V.C., Royal Engineers, and Captain MacDonnell, Royal Engineers, have been singularly valuable and important, and will be described in the report of the engineer operations.

The very great services of the Commissariat Department, directed by Lieutenant Colonel Lucas, and of the Transport Corps, directed by Lieutenant Colonel Warden, both under the control of Lieutenant Colonel Holland, of the Commissariat Department, have been rendered under many disadvantages, and require a separate report to do full justice to the officers and subordinates of their establishments.

The duties of the Medical Department, under the chief direction of Dr. Currie, C.B., Inspector General, have been efficiently and satisfactorily performed.

The necessities of the campaign demanded that the equipment of the medical, equally with those of every other department with the advanced troops, should be reduced to the lowest possible scale; but with the very limited means at their disposal, Dr. Currie and the Deputy Inspectors General, Dr. Pelly and Dr. Mahaffy, together with the Regimental and Staff Officers serving under them, performed their duties in a manner which has reflected great credit on that department of the Army.

The services of the Veterinary Department, under Staff Veterinary Surgeon Hallen, an able and valuable officer, have been of the highest importance.

A copy of Mr. Hallen's report on the working of this department is attached; Mr. Hallen makes special mention of the services of First Class Veterinary Surgeons Lamb and Anderson.

The telegraph, directed by the intelligence and experience of Captain St. John, Royal Engineers, and by Lieutenant Puzey, Royal Engineers, was carried to Antalo under circumstances of great difficulty, and although the wire was often mischievously cut and communication interrupted, it was immediately restored. Errors were most rare: the telegraph worked well and rendered important service.

The Officers of the Trigonometrical Survey, Lieutenants Carter, Director, and Dümmler and Holdich, Royal Engineers, Assistants, by the most strenuous exertions, and at the cost of great fatigue and privations, succeeded in surveying nearly 6,000 square miles, and carried their work from the coast to Magdala.

The labour of these Officers, two of whom have been obliged to return to England from loss of health, will prove very valuable.

I am greatly indebted to Major General Sir Charles Staveley, K.C.B., who has afforded me the most valuable support and assistance throughout the campaign. He laid the first foundation of order at Zoulla, and when summoned to the front, ably commanded the first division during the advance in the action of Arogie and at the capture of Magdala. As Second in Command, he has possessed my fullest confidence.

Major General Malcolm, C.B., commanded the second division, which held the line of country from Senafé to Antalo, and subsequently to Lake Ashangie.

It required great temper and judgment to maintain the good understanding which I had established with the Chiefs and people of the country.

General Malcolm did this, and by his vigilance and activity kept the communications in Tigre in good order, and restored order in the district of Ashangie.

His Excellency Sir Seymour Fitzgerald was so good as to grant my request for the services of Major General Russell, who left his important office, Military and Political, as Resident of Aden, to command at Zoulla.

In the administration of that post, General Russell has entirely fulfilled my expectations and wishes.

I am greatly indebted to him for the excellent manner in which he has conducted the very important and trying duties of his command.

Brigadier General Collings, an Officer of mature judgment and experience, conducted to my satisfaction the command at Antalo—a position of vital importance, both as affording support to the front and as the last point of connection with the friendly province of Tigre, the supplies of which were so valuable.

Brigadier General Stewart commanded at Zoulla for some time, and on Major General Russell's arrival proceeded to Senafé; in both commands Brigadier General Stewart met with my approbation.

Brigadier General Wilby was usefully employed in the Koomeylee Pass in the earlier stages of the Expedition, when the difficulty in arranging the transport of supplies to Senafé was greatest.

In the attack on Magdala, General Wilby commanded the 2nd Brigade of the first division which assaulted that formidable position.

Brigadier General Schneider commanded the first brigade of the first division which led during the advance on Magdala, was engaged at Arogie and in the assault on Magdala.

Both of these officers have met with my approbation in the exercise of their respective commands, and have been very favourably recommended to my notice by Major General Sir Charles Staveley.

Brigadier General Petrie, commanding Royal Artillery, has afforded me every assistance. He was constantly present with the advanced troops, and directed the whole of the Artillery at Magdala.

General Petrie mentions most favourably his Divisional Commanders, Lieutenant Colonels Wallace and Milward, whose reports on their repective commands will be forwarded.

It was due very much to the care and judgment of Colonel Wallace that the elephants with the heavy batteries accomplished their unequalled march with so much success.

Lieutenant Colonel Milward, whose merits I had learnt to appreciate in China, was permitted by His Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief to join me for the special purpose of directing the Steel Mountain Batteries. The success of these weapons has been fully established, and the rapidity and completeness with which they were organized is due to Colonel Milward's experienced direction.

General Petrie also mentions the Commanders of Batteries, Lieutenant Colonel Penn, Captains Twiss and Murray, and Brevet Major Hills, V.C., Majors Marett and Bogle, and particularly his Brigade Major, Captain Geary, and his Aide-de-Camp, Lieutenant Chapman, of the Royal Artillery.

Colonel Graves, 3rd Cavalry, very efficiently commanded the whole of the Cavalry on several occasions, including the operations before Magdala.

The 3rd Bombay Light Cavalry very soon after its arrival in Abyssinia with the Pioneer Brigade, lost nearly one-half of its horses from the epidemic.

Immediate steps were taken to remount the regiment from Egypt and Bombay.

When the force advanced from Antalo, Colonel Graves' regiment was remounted, and, by the great care bestowed on the horses, their condition was preserved in a remarkable manner.

Colonel Graves deserves much credit for the efficiency which his regiment has maintained under these trying circumstances.

Lieutenant Colonel St. Clair Wilkins, commanding Royal Engineers, arrived in Abyssinia with the reconnoitring party. His report of the operations conducted by the officers of the Royal Engineers will show how unremitting have been his labours, and how extremely valuable have been his services and those of the department under his orders.

Captain Goodfellow, next in seniority, whose services at Zoulla in constructing the pier have already been noticed, was the chief engineer on the highlands, and displayed great intelligence and activity in every duty throughout the operations.

I desire to express my very high appreciation of the services of the officers commanding the several corps of the Expeditionary Force, and of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers who have served under them during the campaign.

Lieutenant Colonel Tower, commanding Wing 3rd Dragoon Guards, and Major Miller, who brought the wing from India in admirable order.

Major Briggs, commanding 3rd Regiment Sind Horse, and Majors Palliser and Gough, V.C., commanding 10th and 12th Regiments Bengal Cavalry, Lieutenant Colonel Loch, 3rd Light Cavalry, Lieutenant Colonel Wallace, commanding Heavy Artillery, Lieutenant Colonel Milward, Mountain Rifled Batteries, Captain Murray, commanding G. Battery, 14th Brigade, Royal Artillery, Lieutenant Colonel Penn, commanding A. Battery, 21st Brigade, Royal Artillery, Captain Twiss, commanding B. Battery, 21st Brigade, Royal Artillery, Major Bogle, 5th Company, 25th Brigade, Royal Artillery, Major Marrett, Native Mountain Train, Major Hills, V.C., Elephant Mortar Battery, Commander Fellowes, commanding Naval Rocket Brigade, Major Pritchard, commanding 10th Company, Royal Engineers, Major Prendergast, V.C., Royal Engineers, Madras Sappers and Miners, Captain MacDonnell, Royal Engineers, Bombay Sappers and Miners.

Lieutenant Colonel Cameron has won my admiration by the manner in which he has commanded his excellent regiment (The 4th King's Own), and the soldierlike spirit which, by his teaching and example, he has so well fostered and maintained.

Colonel Field, Major Chamberlain, and Major Beville, commanding those admirable Native Regiments, the 10th Bombay Native Infantry, the 23rd Pioneers, and the 27th Beloochees, Lieutenant Beck, commanding detachment Marine Battalion, Major Pierce, 10th Native Infantry.

Major Cooper, commanding 33rd Regiment (The Duke of Wellington's), which led the assault on Magdala.

Major Cooper was amongst the first who scaled the defences near the gateway.

Drummer McGuire and Private Bergin, of the 33rd, were the first who led the way through the stockade to the right, by which the defences of the gate were turned.

Lieutenant Colonel Campbell, 3rd Bombay Native Infantry, Lieutenant Colonel Parish, 45th Regiment (Sherwood Foresters), Lieutenant Colonel Bray, 4th (King's Own) Regiment, Major Thelwall, C.B., 21st Punjab Infantry, Colonel Little, 25th Bombay Native Light Infantry, Lieutenant Colonel Muter, 2nd Bombay Native Infantry (Grenadiers), Lieutenant Colonel Henning, 26th Cameronians, Lieutenant Colonel Combe, 18th Bombay Native Infantry.

I am much indebted to Lieutenant Colonel Holland, Controller of Supply and Transports, for the able and judicious manner in which he performed his very responsible duties, and which imperatively detained him at Zoulla, and deprived me of the benefit of his presence at my head quarters.

Also to Lieutenant Colonel Lucas, Deputy Commissary General, one of the ablest officers of the Department, on whom devolved the whole executive burthen (a burthen which no less efficient and experienced officer could have sustained) of maintaining the supplies at the main base of operations.

Major Mignon, the senior Commissariat Officer on the highlands, who had the important task of organizing the depôt during the advance, and Lieutenant Shewell, who were always with the advanced columns and constantly under my notice These officers were the pioneers of the Commissariat Department, and I am greatly indebted to them for their most valuable exertions.

Lieutenant Colonel Warden had a most arduous task in the organization of the Transport Corps.

His divisions were thrown into work even before their establishment or organization were complete; notwithstanding the misfortunes which beset the corps in its formation, the final result has been most creditable to Lieutenant Colonel Warden, his Second in Command, Major Nuttall, and the many excellent officers of all branches of the service whose energy and unremitting exertions have overcome every difficulty.

Lieutenant Colonel Warden, his officers and the subordinates of the Transport Corps, I desire to express my deep obligation.

My acknowledgments are due to Dr. Currie, C.B., for his able direction of the Medical Department, to Dr. Pelly, Deputy Inspector General, who superintended at Zoulla, and under whose immediate charge were the Native troops and followers of the Expedition.

To Dr. Mahaffy, Deputy Inspector General with the first division, and also Deputy Surgeon Major Guy, Surgeons Madden and Wyllie, and Assistant Surgeon Martin, whose services have been most favorably brought to notice.

I desire to express my appreciation of the very great services of Staff Veterinary Surgeon Hallen, First Class Veterinary Surgeon Lamb, Veterinary Surgeon Anderson, and the officers of that department, also to Captain Swanson, Royal Artillery, Commissary of Ordnance, and to Lieutenant Colonel Bartlett, Treasurer to the Force.

The officers forming the reconnoitring party, consisting of Brigadier General Merewether, C.B., Colonel Phayre, Quarter Master General, Bombay Army, Lieutenant Colonel Wilkins, Royal Engineers, Major Baigrie, Assistant Quarter Master General, Surgeon Lumsdaine, Captain Pottinger, Royal Artillery, Deputy Assistant Quarter Master General, Assistant Surgeon Martin who landed at Zoulla in October last, deserve much credit for their valuable service in selecting the Koomeylee defile as the entrance to Abyssinia,—a decision arrived at after much labour and research, and fully justified by a further acquaintance with the country.

Brigadier General Merewether has afforded very valuable service in political duties in arranging with the various Chiefs at Zoulla, and on the highlands for the transport of supplies, and has ever been most zealous at all times and seasons to promote the success of the Expedition.

Her Majesty's Government are well aware of Brigadier General Merewether's unceasing exertions in favour of the captives since their first imprisonment.

Brigadier General Merewether reports very favourably of the assistance he received from Lieutenant Mockler, Assistant Resident, Aden, who remained in charge of the relations with the Chiefs of Zoulla, and of the services of his Aide-de-Camp, Lieutenant Lockhart, of the Bengal Cavalry.

Colonel the Hon'ble F. Thesiger, Deputy Adjutant General, left England at two days' notice to join the force in Abyssinia; his thorough knowledge of his duties, combined with great ability and untiring energy, render him a most valuable staff officer.

Colonel Thesiger had the duty of keeping me daily, nay hourly, informed of the state of supplies at every post from Zoulla to head quarters, and in this and other duties has rendered me most important services during the campaign.

Lieutenant Colonel Macleod, Assistant Adjutant General, an officer of much experience, and thoroughly acquainted with the Native Army, has ably supported the head of his department, and has performed his duties greatly to my satisfaction.

I am greatly indebted to Colonel Phayre, Deputy Quarter Master General, who has rendered most important services in the early examination of the country, the direction of the Pioneer Force to Antalo, and the subsequent advanced reconnoissance.

The very valuable maps and reports of the route and of the scene of operations, attest the very great energy and intelligence which Colonel Phayre has displayed in the performance of his duties.

Captain Holland, Assistant Quarter Master General, has had charge of his department at head quarters and of all correspondence with the Land Transport Corps.

In these duties Captain Holland's exertions have been conspicuous, and the exactness, promptitude, and ability with which they have been carried out deserve my warmest commendation.

Captain Holland afforded me great assistance in the reduction of the camp followers.

Major Baigrie, Assistant Quarter Master General, an officer of ability and great energy, did very valuable service in the first exploration of the coast in October. During the campaign he has served as Assistant Quarter Master General of the first division, and been very favourably noticed by Major General Sir Charles Staveley, in whose estimation of Major Baigrie I fully concur.

Captain Pottinger, Royal Artillery, Deputy Assistant Quarter Master General, was very useful with the reconnoitring party.

During the campaign he has been attached to head quarters: he has laboured with zeal and shown ability in the performance of his duties.

Captain MacGregor, Deputy Assistant Quarter Master General, was employed with the advanced reconnoissance, and by his ability and energy proved himself a valuable staff officer.

Captain Fawcett, Deputy Assistant Quarter Master General, was also for some time usefully employed with the advanced reconnoissance.

Major Goldsworthy, Brigade Major of Cavalry, has neglected no occasion during the campaign of making himself useful.

Dr. Lumsdaine, when Sanitary Officer at Zoulla, by introducing a good system and rules for conservancy, and seeing them carried out, contributed in a very important degree to the healthiness of the garrison and civil inhabitants.

I am greatly indebted to Dr. Lumsdaine for his constant attention while forming part of the head quarter staff, and for very valuable voluntary service in many extra duties during the Expedition.

Major Maude, Deputy Judge Advocate General, has performed the duties of his office to my entire satisfaction, and has frequently rendered me useful services whilst attending me during the campaign.

Captain Young, Senior Pay Master in Abyssinia, has had very responsible duties in keeping the Commissariat, the depôts, the many columns, and the small posts supplied with money to meet every emergency, duties which he ably and satisfactorily performed. Captain Young accompanied the advance to Magdala.

Captain Hand was nominated to the charge of the Highland Train, when the dimensions of the Transport Corps necessitated the appointment of a sub-director on the highlands.

He had the advantage of the trained muleteers from the Punjab, many of them old soldiers and accustomed to discipline.

The conduct of the muleteers has generally been extremely good, and the services of the Highland Train has been performed in a manner which reflects great credit on Captain Hand and the officers immediately under him.

Captain Griffith, Captain Bainbridge, and Captain Twentyman, Captain Hodges, and Lieutenant Ross have distinguished themselves by their zeal and activity, and deserve special notice.

Captain Hand mentions favourably Lieutenant Gaselee, his staff officer, Lieutenants Ramsbottom, Mortimer, Ryves, and Abadie.

In a separate report I have detailed the special services of the officers of the Intelligence Department, which have been performed immediately under my own orders, or under the Divisional or Brigade Commanders.

I will, therefore, only record here that Mr. Munzinger, the Acting British Consul of Massowa, a gentleman well versed in the languages of Abyssinia, and the earliest in the field, has rendered valuable services both in the early reconnoissance and throughout the campaign.

Major Grant, C.B., whose African laurels had already been won in another field, Captain Moore, an accomplished oriental scholar, Meer Akbar Ali, all of these gentlemen have performed very important duties requiring great tact and judgment.

Major Roome, Bombay Staff Corps, Colonel Brazier, Retired List, have also performed very valuable services.

It would be difficult to enumerate all Captain Speedy's services: his familiar knowledge of the Amharic language and character of the Abyssinians have rendered him invaluable as an interpreter and envoy. He was already well known by character, and he was immediately accepted by the Abyssinians as a guarantee of good treatment and mutual confidence.

I have received the most valuable assistance from the officers of my personal staff.

I selected Colonel Fraser, V.C., Commandant at head quarters, for the charge of the outposts, a duty of special importance in so intricate a country, which Colonel Fraser performed with increasing vigilance and to my complete satisfaction.

Lieutenant Colonel Dillon, Military Secretary, has been by my side, and has shared my labours from the first preparations for the Expedition to its close. I cannot too strongly express my obligation to him.

Lieutenant Hozier, Assistant Military Secretary, was obliged, to my regret, to leave the force from ill-health, during the advance beyond Antalo, but not before he had shown himself to be an officer of great energy and practical ability.

Lieutenant Tweedie, Political Secretary, has performed his special duties with great ability and to my entire satisfaction.

Lieutenant Tweedie attended me in the action of Arogie and at Magdala.

Captain Arbuthnot, Extra Aide-de-Camp (latterly Assistant Military Secretary), was sent on a special mission to Egypt and Syria, which he executed with much judgment, and returned in time to be present at Magdala.

My Aides-de-Camp, Lieutenant W. Scott, Lieutenant R. Napier, and Cornet Lord Charles Hamilton, and Cornet Kennedy, 18th Hussars, have afforded me every satisfaction in the performance of their duties.

Lieutenant W. Scott, with my Cavalry escort, took part in the investment of Magdala.

I am very happy in this opportunity of saying how cordially Commodore Heath has conducted the naval duties of the Expedition in connection with the Army.

The spirit of their commander has been emulated by the officers and the men of the Royal Navy under his orders.

The labour under a hot sun of landing supplies and water, and re-embarking troops, followers, and cattle, has never for a single day ceased since the arrival of the first transport in Annesley Bay.

The history of the labour undergone, by which vast quantities of stores and many thousands of men and cattle have been landed and re-embarked without accident, can only be truly told by Commodore Heath himself; but I have much gratification in expressing, on the part of the Army, how greatly we are indebted to Commodore Heath and the officers and men of the Royal Navy.

Greatly too are we indebted to Captain Tryon, R.N., the able Director of Transports.

His thoroughly efficient control of the large fleet under his direction, and his readiness of resource, relieved me from all anxiety in regard to his highly responsible and important office.

The campaign has been one of severe military labour from the first landing to the re-embarkation.

Every regiment of Infantry carried its own pack of tools, and became pioneers, working hardly, whether in the long marches of the advance or the more trying monotony of the plains of Zoulla.

The port of Zoulla, with its landing piers; the railway, with its numerous bridges; the road through the Koomeylee Pass to Antalo and Magdala; the water-supply at all the stations; the intrenchments at Addigerat and at Antalo; the commissariat and transport lines, and the camping-grounds, where the most perfect order was required to water quickly many thousands of animals, all formed one great military work on which the campaign has been supported.

It would be impossible for me to do full justice to the merits of each portion of the force.

All ranks and classes have been inspired with the same honourable spirit, whether in military labour or in conflict with the enemy, and have borne themselves as if success depended on their own individual exertions and devotion.

I beg permission gratefully to acknowledge the confidence placed in me by Her Majesty's Government for India, and the unhesitating promptitude with which all my requisitions have been complied with.

I am deeply sensible of the support and encouragement which I have received from His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge in every stage of the Expedition.

Major General Sir C. STAVELEY, K.C.B., to the Deputy Adjutant General, Abyssinian Expeditionary Force, Magdala.

CAMP BEFORE MAGDALA,

April, 14*th* 1868.

SIR,—With reference to General Orders of the 11th instant, I have the honor to report that I received orders to proceed on the morning of the 10th instant with the first brigade, under Brigadier General Schneider, strength as below,* from the Dalanta plateau across the Bashilo river, and occupy the height above the latter in front of Magdala; also to cover a reconnoissance by Colonel Phayre, Deputy Quarter Master General of the force.

Four companies of Sappers were ordered to make a road for elephants up the height, and the A. (3rd Battery, 21st Brigade) Mountain Battery, under Lieutenant Colonel Penn, and the Rocket Batteries, Naval Brigade, under Commander Fellowes, R.N., were to ascend the plateau when a road was reported practicable by Captain Goodfellow, R.E., Senior Engineer Officer.

The march proved a most distressing one for the troops, laden as they were, for want of transport, with great coat, waterproof sheet, and blanket. The ascent is very long and steep, and the animals carrying water being unable to keep up with the column, the troops suffered severely from thirst.

	Officers and Rank and File.
* A. (3rd Battery, 21st Brigade) Royal Artillery	94
Royal Naval Brigade	87
10th Company, Royal Engineers	21
4th King's Own Royal Regiment	473
1st Company, Madras Sappers	77
Head Quarters (3 Companies) Bombay Sappers	288
23rd Punjab Pioneers	600
27th Belooch Regiment, Head Quarters (Wing)	260

The Deputy Quarter Master General having sent me a report that the King's road up the Arogie Pass on our left was secure for guns and baggage, and which I forwarded to the Commander-in-Chief, His Excellency ordered them to proceed by that route, escorted by three companies of the 4th (King's Own) Regiment, one of the 10th Bombay Native Infantry, and one of the 23rd Punjab Pioneers. I had just arrived at the end of the ridge overlooking the road leading to the entrance of the Pass, about one mile distant, when I was joined by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, who directed me to move the 23rd Bengal Pioneers, under Major Chamberlain, to the left, the more effectually to protect the head of the Pass. This regiment had no sooner got into position than the guns from Fala and Selassie (two of the three ambas which form the defences of Magdala) opened fire, and large numbers of men were seen streaming down the mountain. One portion of the enemy advanced with great confidence direct on our position, and another towards the Pass to attack the Artillery and baggage now coming into sight.

His Excellency having sent me orders to prepare the troops to receive the enemy, I directed Brigadier General Schneider to cause them to lay down their packs and advance; the 4th (King's Own) Regiment in skirmishing order, supported by the wing of the Belooch Battalion, a small detachment of Royal Engineers, and four companies of Sappers, covered by the Naval Rocket Brigade, which had just come up.

Our troops had to cross a narrow dip in the ground, and the 4th (King's Own) Regiment, while in the act of extending on the other side, came close on the enemy, drove back and dispersed him with great gallantry, killing and wounding a large number. The enemy came on with great courage, little anticipating the rapid effect of the Snider rifle and dash of our troops.

To the left the enemy pressed close up to the 23rd Bengal Pioneers under Major Chamberlain, and the advancing Mountain Artillery and baggage under Lieutenant Colonel Milward, R.A. He was received and driven back by the Pioneers with much loss, and the Mountain and Rocket Batteries on mules under Lieutenant Colonel Penn, R.A., and Commander Fellowes, R.N., which the enemy no doubt mistook for baggage, coming into action at this moment supported by a company of the 4th (King's Own) Regiment under Captain Kittoe, and another of the 23rd Bengal Pioneers under Captain Paterson, in skirmishing order, caused great destruction. Lieutenant Sweny, 4th (King's Own) Regiment, the baggage master, lost no time in parking the baggage, and the escort of the two companies 4th (King's Own) Regiment, and one company 10th Native Infantry, coming into action under Captain Roberts and Lieutenant Durrant, 4th (King's Own) Regiment, assisted materially in driving off the enemy. This portion of the enemy being moreover in a hollow on the left of the position of the 4th (King's Own) Regiment, I directed Brigadier General Schneider to move two companies to the edge of the plateau, thus taking him in flank.

Two of Lieutenant Colonel Penn's guns under Lieutenant Taylor, R.A., the Beloochees, Royal Engineers, and Sappers, came into action towards evening, and assisted the Naval Rocket Battery to dislodge some sharpshooters who were annoying us from some cover on our right front.

Night coming on, and the enemy having almost disappeared, I withdrew the troops to a position selected by the Commander-in-Chief, where they bivouacked for the night. The second Brigade joined us there towards morning.

I enclose a return of our wounded, all of whom were brought in early, and everything done for them that could possibly be required by Staff Surgeon Madden in charge of the field hospital of the first Brigade. A number of Abyssinian wounded were also brought in and attended to.

I cannot ascertain with any degree of accuracy the enemy's loss; but as 375 dead, including King Theodore's Commander-in-Chief, were counted on a small part of the field, it is not unreasonable to estimate the killed and wounded at 2,000 men. The Galla Chiefs who had men in the enemy's ranks admit 700 killed.

Brigadier General Schneider was most energetic in carrying out the orders conveyed to him. He mentions the assistance he received from the officers of his staff, viz., Captain Beville, his Brigade Major; Captain Hogg, Deputy Assistant Quarter Master General; and Lieutenant J. G. McRae, Aide-de-Camp.

The following officers of my staff were most active during the action, and afforded me very valuable assistance:—Lieutenant Colonel Wood, Assistant Adjutant General; Major Baigrie, Assistant Quarter Master General; and Lieutenant Saunders, 20th Hussars, Aide-de-Camp. My extra Aide-de-Camp, Captain G. Arbuthnot, R.A., whom I had detached in the morning, also rendered good service.

I wish to recommend to the favorable notice of the Commander-in-Chief Lieutenant Colonel Cameron, Commanding the 4th "King's Own" Regiment; Lieutenant Colonel Milward, Commanding the Division of Mountain Batteries; Lieutenant Colonel Penn, Commanding the A. 21 Steel Mountain Battery; Commander Fellowes, R.N., Commanding the Naval Rocket Batteries; Major Chamberlain, Commanding 23rd Punjab Pioneers; Major Beville, Commanding Belooch Battalion; Major Prendergast, V.C., the Senior Officer with the Royal Engineers, and companies of Bombay and Madras Sappers and Miners; Lieutenant Colonel Loch, Commanding detachment 3rd Light Cavalry; Captain Roberts, Commanding 2 companies 4th "King's Own" Regiment, Baggage Guard; Captain Kittoe, 4th (King's Own) Regiment, and Captain Paterson, 23rd Punjab Pioneers, Commanding escorts to the Artillery; Lieutenant Sweny, 4th (King's Own) Regiment, Baggage Master, and Staff Surgeon Madden in charge of field hospital first Brigade.

I forward a sketch of the ground and position of the troops during the action, also a return of officers and men recommended by Major Chamberlain, 23rd Punjab Pioneers, for distinguished conduct.

I have, &c.,

No. 4.

Brigadier General Petrie, Commanding the Royal Artillery, to the Deputy Adjutant General, Abyssinian Field Force.

CAMP NEAR MAGDALA,
April 15th, 1868.

SIR,—I have to request the favour of your laying before His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief the following report of the operations of the Artillery during the action before Magdala on the 10th instant, and its capture on the 13th, and which, should it meet with his approval, I respectfully request may be forwarded for the information of His Royal Highness the Colonel of the regiment.

At day-light on the morning of the 10th instant, the first Brigade, first division, to which the A. Battery, 21st Brigade, was attached, left the Dalanta plain, and after a steep and difficult descent of about five miles, arrived at the bed of the Bashilo river, where the battery and baggage of the Brigade, under escort was halted for a few hours, until the result of a reconnoissance being made by the General of the division was ascertained. Between 1 and 2 o'clock P.M., Lieutenant Colonel Milward, R.A., who had taken command of the detachment, received orders to proceed towards Magdala by the King's road, through the Arogie valley. Soon after 4 o'clock the battery on cresting a small hill within long range from the hill of Falla, was halted by order of Lieutenant Colonel Milward for the purpose of closing up. Almost immediately fire was opened by the guns of the enemy on Falla at our troops protecting the road, and a little distance in front of the battery, it was also perceived that the enemy were pouring down the side of the hill with the view of attacking our troops. A large number of them made straight for the battery and baggage immediately in rear of it. The battery at once came into action and opened a most destructive fire, which, with that of the Infantry in support, effectually checked the efforts of the enemy in that direction. Colonel Milward, who was in command of the troops in this position, has forwarded a separate report through the General Officer commanding the division.

The second Brigade, to which the remainder of the Artillery was attached, had marched some hours after the first Brigade, and during the action was halted at the Bashilo, so that Lieutenant Colonel Penn's battery alone was engaged.

The second Brigade joined during the night, and the division halted on the 11th and 12th. On the morning of the 13th orders were received for an advance on Magdala, and the following positions were assigned to the Artillery:—The G. Battery, 14th Brigade, under Captain Murray, and two 8-inch mortars, manned by a detachment of No. 5 Battery, 25th Brigade, under Major Hills, V.C., were placed under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Wallace, and took up a position with Selassie in front and Falla on the right; they were intended to fire at long ranges should the enemy offer opposition to the advance of our column up the hill.

The A. Battery, 21st Brigade, Lieutenant Colonel Penn's, ascended a short way with the column, and took up a position on a spur running out from Falla, from which it commanded the road at the head of the ascent. The B. Battery, 21st Brigade, under Captain Twiss, ascended in rear of the Infantry of the leading Brigade, both batteries were under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Milward. No opposition was offered to the ascent of the column, and three guns of the B. Battery were at once sent to the top of Selassie by a most difficult path, impracticable even for laden mules. Very few rounds were fired from this position, when it was observed that Lieutenant Colonel Milward had placed the other three guns in a better position with Lieutenant Colonel Penn's battery, which had in the mean-time been brought up by order of the Commander-in-Chief at the foot of Selassie, and directly opposite the gate of Magdala, 1,300 yards distant. The three guns were, therefore, moved from the summit, so that Lieutenant Colonel Milward had the formidable battery of twelve guns and four rocket tubes under his immediate supervision.

On the heights of Falla and Selassie being secured, orders were sent for Lieutenant Colonel Wallace to bring up the G. Battery, 14th Brigade, and the 8-inch mortars. This was done by means of elephants, the ascent being too steep for horse draught. Only a few shots had been fired during the day by the steel guns; in the afternoon, however, about an hour before the assault, fire was opened from all the guns of the different batteries, that of the steel guns was directed against the gateway of Magdala, and its precision and the correct bursting of the shells, both double and common, fully established these small guns as a formidable description of ordnance, and well adapted for the work for which they were originally designed.

The G. Battery, 14th Brigade, and 8-inch mortars did not reach so good a position as that of the Mountain Batteries. On observing that the Armstrong shells were bursting short, I sent orders for the battery to join the others, but was informed in reply that, owing to the nature of the ground, it was impracticable. Captain Murray, however, increased his range, and threw some shells with good effect on the top of the fort. The range was 2,400 yards.

Major Hills threw a few shells only from the 8-inch mortars, as he found his position was not sufficiently advanced to enable his fire to produce any decided effect.

The A. and B. Batteries kept up a fire over the heads of the troops advancing to the assault, after which all operations of the Artillery may be said to have ceased. I beg to inclose statements of the ordnance captured and of the ammunition expended.

As the active operations of the campaign have now been brought to a successful conclusion, it becomes my duty to bring to notice the zeal with which all ranks of the regiment have performed their duty; the difficulties they have encountered in bringing their guns so far into the interior of a mountainous country have been cheerfully and readily overcome.

Lieutenant Colonel Wallace has been in command of the G. Battery, 14th Brigade, and the 8-inch mortars, since leaving Addigerat, and the rapidity with which he has brought them to the front, and the condition of the elephants on which they have been transported, show the care he has bestowed on the command entrusted to him.

Lieutenant Colonel Milward, immediately on his arrival, devoted himself to the organization of the two Mountain Batteries, and to his constant supervision much of the success of this new description of ordnance may be attributed. On the 10th and 13th their capabilities were fully developed under his orders. I have also personally, on many occasions, been indebted to him for the ready manner he has afforded me the benefit of his professional experience.

Lieutenant Colonel Penn, with his battery, has from the commencement been with the most advanced troops, and has had to traverse the Passes in their most rugged state; but all difficulties have been readily overcome, and the excellent practice of his battery on the two occasions it has been brought into action, may be ascribed to the energy and care he has bestowed on his command.

Captain Murray, by his untiring exertions, brought his guns on their carriages as far as Antalo. Since then his carriages have had frequently to be taken to pieces, and transported on elephants, involving an immense amount of labour and careful supervision, without which his battery could not have arrived in a state fit for action.

Captain Twiss with his battery left the coast at a much later date than the other batteries; and the rapid way he has brought it to the front deserves much praise. Much attention has been paid by him to the instruction of those under him in the capabilities of the new description of battery intrusted to them.

Major Hills, V.C., has brought up the 8-inch mortars in a very creditable manner. His detachment has been small, and the exertions of all have been necessarily great.

Captain Geary has been my Brigade Major since the formation of the force. His exertions have at all times been untiring; and his zeal in promoting the efficiency of the arm to which he belongs, whether on the march or before the enemy, has been unceasing.

I am much indebted to Lieutenant Chapman for his services as Aide-de-Camp. On the 13th he accompanied Major General Sir Charles Staveley, K.C.B., with the column of assault, for the purpose of securing and preventing accidents from the gunpowder in the fort. Both he and Lieutenant Nolan (Lieutenant Colonel Milward's Adjutant) rendered very important assistance in organizing the steel batteries on their arrival from England.

I regret that neither Major Marett nor Major Bogle has had the good fortune to serve in the more active operations of the campaign. The batteries of both do them credit, and to the latter I am much indebted for the manner in which he sent out the detachment of his battery, which has been serving under Major Hills, V.C.

In conclusion I have only to mention the cheerful and zealous manner in which all ranks of officers and men have performed their duty in what I venture to say has been a severe and trying campaign.

Lieutenant Colonel WALLACE, Commanding the First Division of Royal Artillery, to the Brigade Major, Royal Artillery, Abyssinian Expeditionary Force.

CAMP RARA GUDDY,
May 23rd, 1868.

SIR,—In accordance with instructions contained in your letter dated 11th instant, I have the honor to report as follows upon the elephant equipment of G.-14 and 5th Battery, 25th Brigade, Royal Artillery.

The four guns and carriages of G.-14, 12-pounder breech loading Armstrong guns were distributed in the following manner:—

	Elephants.
For each gun, 1 elephant	4
" carriage, 1 do.	4
" limber and one wheel, 1 do. ...	4
" pair of ammunition boxes and one wheel, 1 do.	4
For every three wheels of remaining eight, 1 do.	3
TOTAL ...	19

One of the latter elephants had but two wheels: the load was made up by the sheers, tackle, &c.

There are no means of weighing the several portions of the carriages, material, &c., but the following weights were given me at Poona Arsenal. I am, however, inclined to believe that the carriage is considerably heavier than noted:—

	cwt.	qrs.	lbs.	lbs.
Gun	8	1	0	= 924
Carriage	8	2	14	= 966
Limber	4	0	2	= 450
Wheels	2	3	6	= 314
Ammunition box ..	2	1	8	= 255

The cradle probably weighs about 150 lbs. The elephant pads, gudalahs, &c., I am informed by Lieutenant Ouchterloney, weigh 500 lbs. each set, consequently the weight of the several loads would be as under:—

			lbs.
Gun, elephant	Gun	924	1,574
	Cradle	150
	Pads, &c.,	500
Carriage, elephant ...	Carriage	966	1,616
	Cradle	150
	Pads, &c.,	500
Limber, elephant ...	Limber	450	1,414
	Wheel	314
	Cradle	150
	Pads, &c.,	500
Ammunition boxes, elephant	2 boxes	510	1,322
	Wheel	314
	Pads, &c.,	400
Wheels, elephant	3 wheels		1,442
	Pads, &c.

With regard to the loading, it has been found impossible to use the sheers, it being difficult to get the animals under the fall, and remain quiet there. Moreover, the nature of the soil is seldom such as to afford a good hold for the pickets. The loading has, therefore, been effected as follows:—In the case of the gun, one spar (with the carriage, two) is placed, one end resting on the ground, and the other on the cradle (the elephant being of course sitting), the breech screws being removed, handspikes are inserted into the bore at each end, and by these the gun is lifted up along the spar into its bed on the cradle by eight men. To assist in this, a rope is attached to the gun at the trunnions, and passed over the cradle, and manned on the opposite side by three or four men; this tends to keep the load steady, while the men lifting get fresh purchase.

The carriage being heavier, 12 men are required to lift it, the arrangements are the same, except that two skids are used instead of one, up which to slide the load.

The limber is lifted in a similar manner (without skid) by men placed in the cradle, and a wheel laid upon it, and lashed securely.

The ammunition boxes are carried, slung one on each side of the animal, with a wheel laid on top of the pad.

The three wheels are slung one on each side, and one laid on the top.

With regard to the time required for loading, the chief delay is in equipping the elephants with their gear and cradles: once this is done, the gun and carriage are loaded in two or three minutes. The other loads take longer, having to be lashed.

MORTARS.

The 8-inch mortar with its bed requires two elephants, the weight being as follows: those of travelling beds, cradles, pads, &c., being, as in the case of the Armstrong guns, approximately only:—

	cwt.	qrs.	lbs.
Mortar	8	1	12
Iron (firing) bed	7	2	0
Travelling (wooden) do. ...	1	2	0
Cradle	2	1	0

The loads would be—

Mortar, elephant, Mortar ...	924	1,844 lbs.
Travelling bed	168
Cradle ...	252
Pads, &c. ...	500
Bed, elephant, Iron bed ...	840	1,760 lbs.
Travelling, do. ...	168
Cradle	252
Pads	500

The weight of skin, implement boxes, handspikes, &c., are not known, but they form a good load for an elephant.

The powder has been carried on another elephant, and the shells on mules, four to each mule. The powder could likewise have been so carried.

The same objections to the use of the sheers exist with the mortars as with the guns. The loading has been effected thus:—

Two skids are placed (the elephant being seated) on the cradles, the other ends on the ground; these are kept at such a distance from each other by iron stays as will admit of the truckles of the travelling beds remaining on them; the tackle is attached to the bed, passed over the rollers or cradle, and manned on the opposite side of the animal by some 14 men; four men with handspikes heave the mortar on beds up to the skid, and the tackle being then hauled on, the load is run up into the cradle in a few seconds; to prevent the pad or bed being displaced by running up the load, a third skid is placed on the hauling side against the cradle, and thus check the tendency of the cradle to come over with the haul, and supports the gear, and keeps it in place. The delay in preparing the elephants is the same as with the guns.

The unloading is performed under the same arrangement with both description of pieces, though with the guns it is a much easier process than when loading, and frequently one skid only has been used with the carriage.

For marching in ordinary countries, the equipment now used is, I think, all that can be desired; the only alterations I would suggest is, that curled hair should be used, as for saddles, instead of coir, for stuffing the underpad which should be somewhat thicker than that now used.

The skin of the elephant is so originally tender that it easily becomes galled, and serious galls and sores ensue from the friction as well as the pressure of the heavy weight carried, and which have been on their backs at times from 12 to 20 hours without interruption.

In mountainous country, such as that recently travelled over, I would propose that the pads be fitted with breechings and breast-pieces, as the rope now used for this purpose, and which in the one case is pulled tight under the tail, and in the other under the throat, has caused very severe galls and sores to those parts, notwithstanding that a piece of chafing leather was placed between the rope and skin. Moreover, in ascending, the strain caused by the weight being thrown back, acted very detrimentally on the respiration, almost choking the elephant.

To remedy this defect, probably an arrangement like a horse-collar might be applied. Pads are also needed to place under the elephants' knees and elbows, when sitting down to be loaded on rough and stony ground.

I consider that it would be an improvement if the pads were attached and secured in the same manner as the cradles, that is, by being secured from the sides, under the belly, instead of by rope passing completely round and over the animal. The objection to the latter method is, that if the ropes are found to be loose, either from carelessness on the part of the mahout, or the tricks of the animals, it cannot be adjusted without removing the load; whereas, under the other arrangement, the ropes can be drawn tight as in the girths of a saddle.

The cradles, &c., supplied to G.-14 were somewhat slight, having been intended for a 6-pounder battery. The bed for the gun had to be cut to receive the larger circumference of the 12-pounder gun.

No. 6.

Lieut. Colonel MILWARD, Royal Artillery, to Brigadier General, Petrie, Commdg. Royal Artillery, Abyssinian Field Force.

CAMP BELAJO,
May 8th, 1868.

SIR,—In compliance with the orders of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, I have the honor to submit the following report on the equipment, condition, and services of the Steel Mountain Batteries attached to the division of Artillery under my command.

On my arrival at Zoulla on the 4th January, I found that the equipments which had arrived from England some weeks previously in excellent condition had been taken over by the officers commanding the 3rd and 5th Batteries, 21st Brigade, and that some progress had been made towards fitting the pack-saddles and mounting the batteries on mules, which had been supplied from those in charge of the Transport Train.

I attribute the rapid progress made in the fitting out of these batteries, in a great degree, to the exertions of Lieutenants Nolan and Chapman, and the few non-commissioned officers under their command. These officers, with such small assistance as the exigencies of the service could afford at that most difficult period of the campaign, had disembarked, unpacked, and arranged the whole of the equipments of two batteries. They had procured and taken charge of 200 mules, and on the arrival of the batteries from Bombay, little was left to the Commanding Officers but to make the final arrangements to complete their batteries in a condition to take the field.

The mules supplied were all taken from those lately arrived from Suez,—for the most part Spanish. The manner in which these animals have done their work proves that they were of good quality, and only require constant care, good feeding, and careful packing, to ensure their thorough efficiency. I may, however, take this opportunity to observe that the very large Spanish mules do not keep their condition or carry their loads as well as those of moderate size. I have invariably observed that a few days of short rations threw them out of condition, which they did not recover as rapidly as could be desired.

Being of opinion that the scale of equipment laid down in the printed list supplied with the batteries was quite insufficient, I obtained your permission to draw up a proposal for an increase in the number of mules and the quantity of ammunition to be carried with each battery. I accordingly submitted the following as a sufficient scale of equipment to take into the field, and having received in due course the approval of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, it has been adopted throughout the campaign:—

MULES.

Guns and Carriages.	Ammunition and Rockets.	Spare Carriage.	Wheels.	Forge.	Artificers' Tools.	Material for Repairs.	Mounted N. C. O.'s and Trumpeters.	Spare.	TOTAL.
18	61	1	2	1	1	6	3	20	113

AMMUNITION.

Projectiles.	In Ammunition Boxes.	In Reserve Boxes.	TOTAL.
Common shell	168	Nil	168
Shrapnell „	144	32	176
Double „	120	48	168 } 604
Case shot	72	20	92
Rockets	72	80	152

The loads of ammunition were found to be too heavy to be carried conveniently, and it was found desirable to remove one shell from each box. It was also found necessary to reduce the weight of the rocket-cases by removing four from each, and to reduce the carriage-load by the weight of the wheels, which were placed on a separate mule. The scale of entrenching tools was quite inadequate for the probable requirements, and sufficient provision had not been made for the carriage of small articles not easily enumerated, but none the less necessary in the equipment of a battery. Boxes were made for the purpose, which were fitted to be carried on the top of certain loads, and arrangements were made to carry a sufficient supply of entrenching tools. These altogether necessitated a larger number of mules than was originally contemplated, and, with the somewhat large proportion of spare animals necessary to meet the requirements of so peculiar a campaign, brought up the total number to 113.

In order to familiarize officers and men with the guns and ammunition entrusted to them, practice to a small extent was carried on at Zoulla, during which I found that firing with double shell had a tendency to shake the wheels to an extent which might be found inconvenient in actual service. I accordingly constructed wooden mortar beds, which were found to answer the purpose admirably. These were hastily constructed, and were not of the best materials or dimensions; but I would recommend that, in all future batteries of 7-pounder rifled guns, properly constructed carriages of this nature should form part of the equipment.

The practice carried on at Zoulla was sufficient to show the officers and men that the guns were good and effective beyond what they could have anticipated. They applied themselves to mastering the details of drill and the movements of the batteries with the utmost zeal and with the best results. I cannot give too much praise to officers and men of garrison batteries quite unaccustomed to the work for the rapid progress made, and for the degree of efficiency obtained.

The strength of the batteries being quite insufficient, 1 Sergeant, 2 Corporals, and 25 Privates of the 4th (King's Own) Regiment were attached to each battery; these men have since acted as drivers, and have been found most useful and efficient.

After careful consideration, I decided on the following distribution of the mules: this arrangement has been maintained throughout, and has been found to work well:—

Sub-division.	No. 1.	No. 2.	No. 3.	No. 4.	No. 5.	No. 6.	Remarks.
Gun	1	1	1	1	1	1	A small proportion of spare material for artificers will be carried in the mail boxes on the wheel mules.
Wheels	1	1	1	1	1	1
Ammunition	4	4	4	4	4	4
D. shell	1	1	1	1	1	1
Rockets	1	1	1	1	1	1
		Spare Wheels.	Spare Carriage.	Spare Cradle, &c.	Spare Wheels.	Forge.
Miscellaneous Stores ...	1	1	1	1	1	1
	10	10	10	10	10	10

Reserve.

15 mules, 8 double shell each.
5 „ 16 rockets „
2 „ 16 Shrapnel „
1 „ 20 case.
5 „ Spare material.
1 „ Powder in cases.
1 „ Forges, tubes, &c.
1 „ Veterinary stores.

The mules for the reserve will be furnished in equal proportions by the divisions. The reserve will be packed separately under the Conductor of Stores. The mules will be picketted with their divisions.

On the 27th January, the A. Battery under Lieutenant Colonel Penn marched from Zoulla, reaching Senafé on the 31st January, Addigerat on the 5th February, and Antalo on the 20th February. The excellent manner in which the march was so far completed left nothing to be desired. Antalo was reached without a casualty. No load was even displaced on the road; there were no galls, no sore backs, no sickness. From Addigerat to Antalo the battery was attached to the advance brigade, the road always very hilly and rough, had been only partially made in many places, and could only have been traversed with great difficulty by animals less perfectly laden. No difficulty however was found which was not overcome by the energy and intelligence of officers and men.

At Antalo, His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief having expressed a desire that a longer range might, if possible, be obtained with the double shell, I caused a trial to be made with 4-oz. cartridges, and with them I obtained a range of 1,450 yards without apparent distress to gun or carriage. I therefore made up a few of these cartridges, which were afterwards used with good effect.

Wood tangent scales were also made for use, instead of the quadrant, when firing at high angles. These were only roughly constructed by the battery artificers, but they were found useful, and I would recommend their adoption in all future equipments.

Marching from Antalo on the 12th March the A. Battery accompanied the advance throughout—the almost insuperable difficulties of the road were surmounted without accident or loss—the great ravines of the Tacassie, the Jiddah, and the Bashilo were crossed without casualty; that of the Jiddah with the advanced guard of the army, over a track which might well have been considered impassable, but the only damage was the loss of a foresight broken in the fall of a gun with the mule which carried it over a cliff.

Arriving before Magdala on the 10th April, this battery found itself in action with the enemy. On this occasion 19 rounds per gun were fired at ranges varying from 450 to 1,800 yards with shrapnel and common shell, the practice was excellent, and caused heavy loss to the enemy. The fuzes acted well, the ranges were changed with ease, and the success in changes of position of the battery were made with the greatest ease and rapidity. I observed with one gun a slight tendency, after firing a few rounds rapidly, to jamming of the shell in the bore. This however was at once removed by a damp sponge, and I would suggest that these should be used invariably when rapid firing is considered necessary.

The B. Battery under command of Captain Twiss did not leave Zoulla until the end of February, and in the mean time the mules had been almost constantly engaged in heavy transport duty between Zoulla and Senafé. Leaving at so late a date, the battery was called upon to march rapidly to the front, and it reached Antalo without a halt. From Antalo to the front the difficult marching did not afford any opportunity for recruiting, and the mules are not in such high condition or so fine in appearance as those of A. Battery; they have however carried their loads well, and no accident involving loss of stores has occurred. B. Battery did not cross the Bashilo until the afternoon of the 10th April, and was not therefore engaged on that day, but having been brought to the front on the following morning, I had the honour of commanding both batteries together, on the 13th April, at the capture of the fortress of Magdala. On this occasion eighteen to twenty rounds per gun were fired at ranges from 1,300 to 1,500 yards, common and double shell only being used, 15 rounds of the latter were fired with 4-oz. charges at a range of 1,400 yards, and carried well to that distance. The common shells were used in shelling the defences of the gate of Magdala, and the precision of the fire could not be excelled. The shells were observed to burst regularly and without failure. No difficulty was experienced in loading or in boxing and fixing the fuzes; and that the intended effect was produced was manifest from the fact that the defenders of the gate were observed to retreat in large numbers, some time before the advance of the assaulting party was ordered.

The storming party having secured an entrance, one battery was advanced, and at my suggestions, the gun, with a small supply, ammunition was carried by the gunners up the steep ascent through the narrow entrance, and brought into action within the fort. No further occasion for its services arose; but I would venture to point to this service as one of vast utility in the future of these mountain guns. It will be a rare occasion when the ascent to a breach will offer greater difficulties than those of the ascent to the gate of Magdala.

On the 10th and 13th April, 25 Hales' Rockets were fired; they acted well, and I consider them in all respects good and efficient.

Having reached Ashangi on the return march, I obtained the permission of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to fire a few rounds over the lake, with a view to observe the action of the fuzes in ricochet, and to afford foreign officers and others an opportunity of witnessing the effect of the bursting of the different natures of shells.

It is with much gratification I have to report that the result was eminently satisfactory, confirming my opinion as to the perfect serviceability of the fuzes, establishing the fact that they are not extinguished on striking the water, and demonstrating what a formidable projectile can be thrown from a minature piece of ordnance, with an insignificant charge of powder.

In conclusion I beg to record my opinion that the value of the 7-pounder steel mountain guns, with their projectiles and equipments, is successfully established, that in the hands of good gunners, with batteries of sufficient strength, and mules in good condition, they are capable of carrying into any country which can be traversed by an army an Artillery fire far more effective than any which has been hitherto attained in mountain warfare.

Major General GEORGE MALCOLM, C.B., Commanding 2nd Division, Abyssinian Expeditionary Force, to the Deputy Adjutant General, Abyssinian Expeditionary Force.

CAMP ASHANGI,

May 5th, 1868.

SIR,—I have the honour to request that you will be so good as to bring to the notice of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief the efficient assistance I have received from Major George Bray, Assistant Adjutant General, and Captain Watts, Deputy Assistant Quarter Master General in commanding the 2nd Division Abyssinian Expeditionary Force, and in preserving the line of communication from Senafé to Antalo, and latterly to Ashangi.

2. The march of regiments, detachments, and convoys passing in constant succession through this division to the front required, on the part of these officers, most careful attention and much trouble from the difficulties of transport, and also in enforcing the stringent orders of the Commander-in-Chief with regard to the reduction of followers, camp equipage, and carriage. I believe that their exertions materially assisted the general arrangements. I have also to thank them for the assistance in the disposition of the various posts which were necessary to secure our communications.

3. I am much indebted to Brigadier General Collings, Commanding at Antalo, and to Brigadier General Stewart, Commanding at Senafé, and Lieutenant Colonel Little, Commanding at Addigerat, for their able support in all matters. It is difficult to enumerate the many subjects which had to engage their attention in collecting and forwarding supplies, pushing on troops, maintaining order and security along the road, and the more delicate arrangements for Native carriers, on whom the army was so very dependent for its food. I could in many cases only give general instructions, and much was left to their judgment and discretion. The commands of Brigadier General Collings were especially important. Before my arrival on the highlands, he commanded at Senafé, and at Addigerat and Antalo he was required in a great measure to act on his own responsibility.

4. The garrisons of Senafé, Addigerat, and Antalo have been, until the last two months, chiefly composed of regiments and detachments which marched to the front; during their stay in the division, the conduct of all was good. Among the few complaints made by the Natives, I am not aware that any have been brought home to either British or Native soldiers. The 25th Regiment Native Light Infantry under Major Fairbrother, and the wing of the 3rd Native Infantry under Captain Strutt, have had heavy convoy duty, which they have performed most cheerfully and satisfactorily. The former regiment also improved the road from Addigerat to Facado, and completed the entrenchments at the former station. I do not mention the heavy duties of the various companies of Sappers and of the detachment of the 21st Bombay Native Infantry under Lieutenant Beck, of the 10th Native Infantry under Major Pierce, of the 33rd Foot under Captain Johnstone, all of which are known to His Excellency.

There have been few instances of collision between soldiers of escorts and Natives attempting to plunder, in all of which the troops and officers have shown great forbearance and judgment.

The postal duty from Senafé to Antalo has been very satisfactorily performed by the sowars of the 10th Lancers and 12th Cavalry, whose conduct at the posts along the line of communication has been most exemplary.

I have especially to thank Major Thacker, Assistant Commissary General at Senafé, for his able management of the Native carriage, and his general arrangements along the line of communication.

I am not less indebted to Major Leven, Assistant Commissary General, first at Addigerat and afterwards at Antalo. The difficulties which these officers had to encounter in pressing on supplies have been great, and they have been marked with success against many obstacles.

Captain Newport, Deputy Assistant Commissary General, who lately came to Addigerat, has conducted his duties with great assiduity.

I have also to acknowledge the services of Colonel Brazier, C.B., and Major Roome, of the Intelligence Department, and their valuable assistance in arranging for the Native carriage, maintaining friendly intercourse with the Chiefs and people of the country, and their endeavours to restore confidence whenever interrupted through misunderstanding. Major Roome's services in discovering and checking marauders in the Sooroo Pass is known to His Excellency, and in this, as in other instances, he has well maintained his character for good judgment and ready action.

My thanks are due to the officers of the Land Transport Train, Lieutenant Seton, R.A., and Captain Ellis, R.A., at Addigerat, to Captain Annesley at Senafé, and to Captain Seton at Antalo, and to all officers of that department for their unwearied exertions.

8. Surgeons Major Deeble and Maitland satisfactorily superintended the medical arrangements, and gave every assistance in sanitary matters, which, at Senafé and Addigerat, were carefully superintended by Assistant Surgeons Jay and Greenhill, R.A.

9. Veterinary Surgeons Kettle, Wilson, and Blake have efficiently superintended the care of the sick mules at Facado and in the neighbourhood of Senafé and Antalo. Mr. Kettle had in the absence of other officers several times charge of the Facado station, and I have had reason to observe his careful arrangement of his sick mules. Mr. Wilson's conduct at Goose Plain, when a number of Arab muleteers deserted the mules in a body, showed decision and judgment.

10. The posts up to Ashangi have been lately placed under my orders, and I would beg to bring to the Commander-in-Chief's notice the good services of Major Armstrong, commanding at Ashangi, who, with a small force at his disposal, has, with much exertion, maintained order and the arrangements for bringing in supplies, as also for Native carriage to the front, all of which were from evil-disposed persons in danger of interruption.

11. I was much pleased with the conduct of Lieutenant Wilson, Madras Army, attached to the 10th Native Infantry, in marching a party of his men from Attilla to the Balago Pass at very short notice. His presence there and his attention to his duty have effectually stopped the annoyances to stragglers and the postal sowars upon that part of the road.

12. I would also mention Captain Callwell, Deputy Assistant Commissary General at Attilla, who has had a most difficult duty to perform, and has had much trouble in encouraging the Native carriage. If sufficient grain and forage have not been collected at Attilla, Balago, and Messeck for the return army, it must be attributed to the disturbed state of the country, and not to want of exertion on the part of Captain Callwell.

13. The Native officers commanding at the different posts have generally shown much discretion in conducting their duties and in purchasing grain and forage. The jealousies of the chiefs in the matter of Native carriage have latterly given much trouble in this respect. I would mention the name of Subadar Bhica, 3rd Regiment Native Infantry, who was promptly sent and as promptly marched with his company from Ashangi to Mukkum, where his arrangements for good order and security have been most successfully exerted. Ressaldar Hurry Sing of 12th Bengal Cavalry, at Agoola, was placed in a most difficult position at one time: his good arrangements and cool forbearance had a most salutary effect.

14. Our arrangements have been materially assisted by the telegraph and the unwearied exertions of Captain St. John, R.E., and his subordinates, in completing and repairing the line; we owe them our best thanks.

15. I must not omit to mention Mr. Murchawarké, His Highness Prince Kussa's envoy, to whom I am much obliged for his assistance in maintaining friendly relations between us and the Chiefs and in providing Native carriage, and doing his utmost to rectify all misunderstandings.

16. I would also beg to make favorable mention of my Aide-de-Camp, Lieutenant Heath, 33rd Foot, who has given me assistance in many ways, and is a promising young officer.

17. I must, in conclusion, apologize for the length of this report; but the duties performed in this division have been in great part those of departments and detached officers. Their careful attention and zealous co-operation was essentially necessary and has been well given. I have called for reports from Brigadier Generals, and Lieutenent Colonel Little as to the duties performed by the officers under their respective command, which, on receipt, I shall forward for submission to His Excellency. Our duties were but careful, and I may say anxious attention to assist the troops in front in performing the more brilliant part of the campaign which has been brought to such a speedy and successful termination.

I have, &c.,

No. 8.

Major General RUSSELL, Commanding at Zoulla, to the Military Secretary to His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, Abyssinian Expeditionary Forces.

CAMP ZOULLA,

June 3rd, 1868.

SIR,—I have the honour, in giving over the command of the Zoulla district, to submit, for the information of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, the services of the troops and departmental officers under my command.

On taking command of the Zoolla district about the middle of March last, the troops were thus distributed:—

At Zoulla.—The 5th Battery, 25th Royal Artillery, the head quarter wing of the 18th Regiment Native Infantry, one company Madras Sappers. Encamped and working on the railway between Zoulla and Koomeylee—A wing of the 2nd Grenadier Regiment Native Infantry, a wing of the 18th Regiment Native Infantry, a portion of a company Madras Sappers and Miners.

At Koomeylee—Head quarters wing of the 2nd Grenadier Regiment Native Infantry, a portion of Madras Sappers.

At the posts in the Passes.—The 21st Bengal (Punjab) Native Infantry.

On assuming command of the Zoulla district, there were four companies of the 45th Regiment encamped with the wings of the 2nd Grenadier and 18th Regiments Native Infantry on the plain between Zoulla and Koomeylee, that had been for about six weeks employed in plate-laying and laying sleepers in making the road for the rail.

Orders had been received to send the 45th to the front, but labour not being procurable, and their services being urgently required for the railroad, they were detained. They left for the front about the 20th of March. All the troops, both British and Native, did good work, and when it is remembered that the railroad was entirely constructed by military labour, no other record of their good work is necessary.

I cannot speak too highly of the services performed by the 5th Brigade, 25th Battery of Royal Artillery under the command of Major Bogle. This battery was detained at Zoulla, and its men and mules were constantly employed in carrying and escorting treasure and ammunition from Zoulla to the highlands. In this service they marched nearly 1,000 miles. The cheerfulness with which Major Bogle and his officers and men undertook this duty is deserving of the highest praise. Major Bogle was not satisfied with merely performing the duty when ordered, but came forward on all occasions expressing a wish that his battery might be employed for the good of the service, rather than remaining in garrison here. Considering that his battery was the only portion of British troops on the plains, I think the willing work done highly creditable. I made to the Assistant Quarter Master General a special report.

The Madras Sappers have been constantly at work in increasing the width of the pier, making embankments along the shore to prevent the invasion of the sea, erecting hospital and other buildings, and assisting in the making of the railroad.

Those of the Sappers at Koomeylee were employed on the railroad and at the wells, and they all performed their work with untiring energy. The commanding engineer will doubtless report on them.

The 2nd Grenadiers and 18th Regiment Native Infantry landed at Zoulla early in February, and have been continuously employed in working parties, landing stores, or on the railroad. Wings of these regiments under the command of Captain Boyd, Officiating Second in Command, 2nd Grenadier Regiment, and of the 18th Regiment Native Infantry, under Major Alexander, were for nearly four months encamped between Zoulla and Koomeylee, cutting through embankments and making the road for the rail, carrying sleepers and laying them, and all such work appertaining to the formation of a line of rail. These men encamped in a hot plain, digging and carrying sand, removed from all excitement, and not even having the recreation of camp life and its pleasures, deserve credit for the willing performance of not interesting work, and I think the men and their commanding officer deserving of praise. Colonel Muter, Commanding the 2nd Grenadier Regiment, and commanding at Koomeylee, carried out his varied and arduous duties most efficiently. The arrangements necessary to provide for the comfort of the troops passing through and for their carriage, and the general superintendence of so large a camp, with some 8,000 transport animals in it, are not light. In addition to this, the management for the supply of water was a matter requiring constant attention. All these prove that he had great responsibilities, and I think he showed himself equal to them.

The head quarter wing of the 2nd Grenadier Regiment was employed at Koomeylee in working parties on the railroad, wells, and other works, and the remarks on the other wing apply equally to this one.

The 2nd Grenadier and the 18th Regiments have been both similarly employed in working parties at Zoulla and on the rail, and the remarks on one apply equally to the other regiment. So hard was the work at Zoulla, every man that could be spared being sent to labour on the railroad, that they scarcely ever had two nights in bed, and frequently not this, and in addition had to furnish working parties to land stores, working at the pumps for water, &c.

Lieutenant Colonel Combe, Commanding 18th Regiment Native Infantry, gave me every assistance and met every demand on his overworked men. As a General Officer was in command at Zoulla, his duties were not so various as had he been detached, but he most effectually assisted myself and the General Officer commanding before me.

The 21st Punjab Native Infantry under the command of Major Thelwall occupied the posts in the Pass, two companies being for some time at Senafé.

This regiment worked most cheerfully and with energy. They had to patrol daily in armed parties up and down half-way between stations. Other parties had to patrol likewise to collect and burn dead animals. The several posts which I inspected in the latter part of April were kept in excellent order. The men's lines were tastefully laid out, and neatness and order prevailed. The encampments for convoys and for troops were judiciously selected and arranged. The sanitary condition of the stations and of the line of road between them were decidedly good; without seeing the work that had to be done, and how efficiently it was carried on, it is scarcely possible to form an estimate.

Major Thelwall, Commanding the corps, and Major Hudson, Second in Command, who commanded at various times at Undul Wells, Captain Collett who commanded at Rary Guddy, and Captain Tyler who commanded at Sooroo, I would especially bring to the notice of His Excellency: they and their men did excellent work, and when it is to be remembered two continual streams of convoys passing through their posts at all times, and that order and cleanliness prevailed, I think all deserving of credit.

The 26th Cameronians landed on the 2nd April, and were sent up to Senafé in detachments; they were utilized in working parties of from 200 to 350 men daily as long as they remained, embanking the pier, on the railroad embankments, and carrying commissariat stores, their services were at the time of great value, as labour was not procurable; when they did march, they were sent in escort of treasure.

Of the departmental officers in the Zoulla district, I would submit the services of S. Pelly, Esquire, Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals, Indian Branch. His administrative duties were of a peculiarly arduous nature. He had to arrange for the supply of medical stores to the whole force, to distribute the several medical officers on arrival, and to survey every vessel for the several corps and departments; he has had primarily and finally to survey each vessel, and to visit them with me after the troops or followers had been embarked. He has worked earnestly and well, and were it not for the cordial assistance I have received from him, the embarkation of the troops could not have proceeded so rapidly as it has.

Lieutenant Colonel Holland, Controller of Supply, has at all times consulted with me, and has met every request I have made for the good of the service.

I have also received every assistance from Lieutenant Colonel Lucas, Deputy Commissary General.

Lieutenant Colonel Warden, Director Land Transport Corps, has exerted himself and has used his best endeavours to carry on his very arduous duties. I have always found him most willing to accept any recommendation or suggestion offered.

These officers are well known to His Excellency, but I trust I am not in error in mentioning them in as far as they have been associated with me.

From Major Roberts, V.C., the Assistant Quaster Master General, I have received most valuable assistance, and he has conducted the duties of the department at Zoulla most entirely to my satisfaction. He has lately had very arduous duties in surveying and allotting vessels, and arranging the embarkation of the troops, and has, in connection with the naval and transport authorities, carried on the duties to the satisfaction of all. He has taken such interest in the embarkation, and has been so energetic and efficient, that I submitted a request from him to be permitted to remain at Zoulla and complete the embarkation, which request has been granted. I am especially indebted to him for his very valuable assistance.

Dr. Guy, Senior Medical Officer, British Troops, Zoulla, has given every assistance. His attention to the comfort and wants of the sick, and the care and consideration shown in receiving them on arrival from the highlands, and embarking them, have been marked.

Major Gammell, the Deputy Assistant Quarter Master General at Zoulla, has worked with great zeal and in a very satisfactory manner. He has evinced considerable ability; until quite lately, he was the only assistant to Major Roberts.

Major Baigrie, Captains Fawcett, Hogg, and James have only lately joined. They have worked with zeal, and have been of great assistance; but as they, up to quite lately, belonged to the troops in the highlands, I presume their services are recorded by those under whom they served.

Captain Gregson, 26th Cameronians, was Brigade Major here for some little time when there was considerable work consequent on the embarkation. He is a very promising officer, and I regret having to lose him; he worked with great zeal and energy.

I would especially bring to notice Captain Hawkes, ex-Commissariat Officer at Zoulla, his energy and zeal, and his talent for organization were considerable. During the very rapid embarkation of troops and animals and followers, there was not a single check; to me it is a marvel how he managed to have all prepared: he was always equal to the task, however difficult.

Koomeylee being under my command, I would submit to His Excellency the excellent work done by Major Nuttall, the Second in Command, Land Transport Train. He had a very difficult command, sending off convoys, arranging everything for the very large depôt of animals. His energy and zeal are as great as ever, and he has, I think, exhibited considerable judgment in carrying on his work.

Having been ultimately associated with Commodore Heath, C.B., Commanding-in-Chief in the Indian station, I wish to submit how I value the ready support and co-operation I have received from him.

The very rapid embarkation of the troops will testify how much the Military Department is indebted to Captain Tryon, R.N., the principal Transport Officer; had we not been in concert and working for the good of the service, the work could not have been carried out as it has.

Captain Edye, R.N., Commanding the Satellite, who has arranged the working of the lighters, and the conveyance of troops and animals to the ships, has most cordially assisted us. It is not for me to enter into the assistance afforded by Captain Edye in the disembarkation.

Lieutenant Osborne, R.N., of the Satellite, has been in charge of the embarkation lighters. He has worked from morning to night, and deserves our thanks.

I would also especially mention Lieutenant Green, R.N., the Transport Officer, who has been associated with the Assistant Quarter Master General in the primary and final surveys of vessels, his cheerful and cordial assistance has been marked, and I would especially mention him for consideration.

I have, &c.,

E. L. Russell, Major Genl.,
Commanding Zoulla.

I would also bring to notice First Class Veterinary Surgeon Lamb, in charge of the animals of the Land Transport Train; his duties were very responsible, they are not so apparent as the work of officers of the General Department or Military, but not the less useful. The utility of the thousands of baggage animals was dependent on his supervision; he had the superintendence of Zoulla, the Pioneer Walls, and Koomeylee, and did his duties with zeal and great efficiency. Every animal landed had to be inspected and cared for by him: his services in surveying vessels for the transport of animals have been of great importance and very responsible. He has been of great assistance to me; he has worked well and earnestly for the good of the service.

E. L. Russell, Major Genl.

No. 9.

From the Controller of Supply and Transport, to the Military Secretary to His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

CAMP KOOLLA,
May 28th, 1868.

SIR,—In accordance with the instructions conveyed in your telegram of yesterday's date, I have the honour to submit, for the consideration of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, the following report on the department under my control.

2. The Deputy Commissary General and Director, Land Transport Corps, having been already called upon to forward reports on the working of their respective departments direct to Army Head Quarters, it only remains for me to speak of the general working of both, leaving it to the above officers to bring to His Excellency's notice any particulars that may be necessary, as well as the names of such Officers who may be deserving of special mention.

3. The working of the Commissariat, organized as it has been of necessity from the three Presidencies, has achieved under Colonel Lucas' able direction a success which is equally creditable to the officers of each, who appear to have one and all so ably and cheerfully assisted him; the unprecedented difficulties which beset the department, so well known to His Excellency, that I forbear to trouble him with an unnecessary recapitulation of them, and I trust that the exertions of the department generally have already secured His Excellency's full approbation.

4. The Land Transport Corps under Colonel Warden, organized under such disadvantages, was a source of much anxiety at first; but short as the duration of the campaign has been, this department has made most satisfactory progress towards efficiency, a result which is mainly due to the earnest exertions in the right direction of Major Warden and the officers of the corps, who have cheerfully undergone an amount of toil and hardship most creditable to them individually, which has materially tended to ensure to Colonel Warden the success he has reached, and which could never have been attained without the most zealous and hearty co-operation amongst those under his command.

5. I desire to recommend to His Excellency's favorable notice the following officers of the Commissariat and Land Transport Corps, whose services have been under my more immediate observation :—

Captain Willoughby proceeded to Egypt in August last, and was employed in taking up ships, superintending the dispatch of animals to Zoulla, and arranging for supplies for the force; joined the force at Zoulla the middle of January last, and was immediately ordered by His Excellency to return to Egypt on special duty connected with the requirements of the force; returned to Zoulla the beginning of March, since when he has been assistant in my office.

6. Captain Willoughby's duties, which were of a most responsible and arduous nature, were conducted with much judgment, for which he is deserving of great credit. As my assistant, Captain Willoughby has rendered most valuable assistance; the separation of my office from Army Head Quarters having necessitated a considerable increase of work.

7. Major Stansfeld, Madras Commissariat, succeeded Captain Willoughby in Egypt, and has filled the important and responsible position there to my entire satisfaction.

8. Captain P. Bartholomew, Lieutenant Luckhardt, and Veterinary Surgeon Boulter proceeded to Egypt with Captain Willoughby, and have done excellent service in their respective departments.

9. Lieutenant Carnac, of the Land Transport Corps, was temporarily attached to my office previous to Captain Willoughby joining, and I found him a most intelligent and hard-working officer, evincing much interest in the success of the new corps he had so lately joined.

I have, &c.,
H. W. HOLLAND, Lieut. Col.,
Controller, Supply and Transport.

No. 10.

Lieutenant Colonel A. W. LUCAS, Deputy Commissary General, Abyssinian Expeditionary Force, Zoulla, to the Deputy Adjutant General, Army Head Quarters.

CAMP ZOULLA,
May 20th, 1868.

SIR,—The campaign having now terminated, and the embarkation of the army being so far advanced, I have the honour to forward the following report on the working of the Field Commissariat throughout the Expedition for submission to His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

2. The exceptional circumstances, and the very great difficulties under which the Commissariat operations have been carried on, are well known to His Excellency.

1*st*.—The short time in which the whole of the preparations had to be made, the very difficult nature of the country, the feeding of the whole of the army, followers, and cattle having to be arranged for from India, Egypt, and England, the provisioning of the force inland being almost entirely dependant on supplies from the sea-coast, makes the present campaign the most difficult the Commissariat has ever entered upon.

3. At the period the Expedition was organized, the Commissariat establishment in India had been reduced to the very lowest limit at which it was possible to carry on work in time of peace, the sudden and enormous pressure to collect and ship off the supplies required for 12,000 fighting men, 30,000 followers, and some 30,000 animals, compelled the Commissary General at Bombay to weaken all Commissariat out-station offices to strengthen the Presidency Office; hence, with the exception of Commissariat officers and some few of the warrant and non-commissioned grades, the field establishment had to be formed from new and untried materials, and which necessarily added greatly to the labour and anxiety of the officers.

4. It will be observed from the accompanying nominal rolls of officers, warrant and non-commissioned officers, that although the organization was from Bombay, the Commissariat was drawn from the three Presidencies, and may, therefore, be looked on as the Indian Commissariat.

5. One list exhibits the general duties on which the several officers have been employed, and although it appears almost invidious to make a distinction where one and all have worked so well, the object I may safely mention of the whole having been to insure the success of the Expedition and efficiency of the department. I must in justice bring to His Excellency's special notice the services of the under-mentioned:—

Major Mignon, who landed with the Pioneer Force, overcame the difficulties consequent on the landing on a strange and barren shore, and who has since so ably conducted his duties as Assistant Commissary General, 1st Division, with the advance.

Major Bardin, Assistant Commissary General, 2nd Division, who is a most valuable officer, and who organized the inland depôts between this and Senafé, and proceeded to join the advance on the army marching to the front.

Captain Hawkes, who has performed the very important and heavy duties in charge of the depôt at Zoulla and out-depôts to Senafé, and through whose indefatigable exertions so much of the efficiency of the Commissariat with the army is attributable.

Major Heysham, also attached to the Zoulla depôt, and who was deputed to visit the different ports in the Red Sea, and so ably performed the important special duties required from him,—vide reports already submitted to His Excellency.

Captain M. W. Willoughby, Assistant Commissary General, and who performed the duties of collecting and forwarding supplies and cattle from Egypt in a most efficient manner until he was transferred to the office of the Controller at the end of February last.

Major Stansfeld, who succeeded Captain Willoughby as Senior Commissariat Officer in Egypt, and has since so ably conducted the important duties there.

Major J. Thacker, in charge of the depôt, Senafé, and out-depôts to Antalo, and who has laboured with unremitting zeal to ensure efficiency on the highlands, and by the means of Native carriage pushed on so large a quantity of supplies.

Captain N. R. Burlton, also attached to the Zoulla depôt, and whose unremitting attention to the duties in the office in a most trying climate, and under great difficulties, and—

Lieutenant Shewell, who arrived with the Pioneer Force and has served both at Zoulla and in the advance, and to whose good management, the purchase of so large a quantity of supplies is attributable.

6. The second list exhibits the duties performed by the warrant and non-commissioned grades, and I beg to bring prominently to the notice of His Excellency the very valuable services rendered by Conductor Henderson. I cannot speak too well of this warrant officer; his zeal, attention, and intelligence is beyond all praise, and I trust I may not be considered as asking too much in recommending that the rank of Lieutenant, with promotion to the grade of Deputy Assistant Commissary, be granted to him. Mr. Henderson is perfectly qualified for the improved position, and on the promotion being granted him, I am confident he would perform all duties required with credit to himself and advantage to the State. Conductor Lee, Bombay Commissariat, and Conductor Greatorex, Madras Commissariat, have served excellently, and I beg to recommend their promotion to the grade of Deputy Assistant Commissary.

7. The termination of the war will, I fear, cause a loss on the large quantity of surplus supplies, but this could not be avoided; the nature of the country in which we are serving made it imperative to insure the safety of the army, to have a reserve of provisions to last until the re-opening of the fair season. Had the war lasted, the whole would have been consumed by the end of October next. From the peculiar nature of the country, it is not even now safe to withdraw the surplus provisions from the highlands. The Pass has already been closed three times from rushes of water during the current month, and it is therefore essential that the reserve be kept at Senafé to the last, and which may probably cause the loss of the surplus stock now there; but this is preferable to running the risk of leaving the force without food.

8. The services of the undermentioned officers temporarily attached as Sub-Assistant Commissary Generals to the force may now be dispensed with, and I beg to recommend that they be permitted to rejoin their regiments:—

Captain Callwell;
" Newport;
Lieutenant Hore;
" Mackinnon;
Ensign Humfrey;
" Scott.

9. I beg to solicit His Excellency's kind consideration of the hardships and difficulties the whole of the followers have undergone, and the cheerful manner in which all their duties have been performed; and I beg to recommend that clerks and followers of all classes who have served three months in Abyssinia be granted a gratuity of one month's pay each on discharge in addition to pay to the date of landing in India.

10. The camels purchased in Egypt by Captain Willoughby have been attached to the Commissariat, and I cannot close this report without mentioning them; they are all well selected and first-class animals. I have worked them with the Egyptian drivers, who have been found excellent camel-men. They are strong and hardy men, well acquainted with their duties, and are, I think, far superior in a campaign of this description to Asiatics. They have been found obedient and hard working, and always willing to take punishment from the officer commanding them, but not from subordinates. I am of opinion in any future operations that these men would be most valuable in the field, but only in having proper interpreters attached to them, and their inspectors or petty officers being appointed from their own class.

11. In conclusion I trust the general working of the Commissariat has met with His Excellency's approval.

I have, &c.,

A. W. Lucas, Lieut. Col.,
Deputy Commissary General,
Abyssinian Expeditionary Force.

Depy. Adjut. Genl., Abyssinian Expeditionary Force.

No. 12.

The Principal Medical Officer, to the Military Secretary to His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, Abyssinian Expeditionary Force.

CAMP ADDIGERAT, May 22nd, 1868.

SIR,—On the conclusion of a campaign which I feel assured will be regarded as one of the most successful in the military history of our country, I trust His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief will permit me, as head of the Medical Department of the Abyssinian Expedition, to bring to his notice the names of the three medical officers noted below* who, from their positions in the service, and the responsible duties which devolved upon them, have established, I respectfully submit, a fair claim to some honorary distinction or reward.

Deputy Inspector General Pelly, Principal Medical Officer of the 2nd Division, and senior officer of the Indian Service (medical), has been stationed at the base of operations during the campaign, and the various duties which he has been called upon to perform in that position have necessarily been of a very important and responsible nature.

Dr. Pelly has displayed administrative abilities of a high order, and nothing could exceed his devotion to the interests of the service in connection with the Expedition.

Deputy Inspector of Hospitals Dr. Mahaffy, also of the Indian Medical Service, and Principal Medical Officer of the 1st Division, accompanied the force in advance, and on all occasions, as I doubt not His Excellency is well aware, was indefatigable in providing for the care and comfort of the sick, and doing the utmost in his power to meet the medical requirements of the force.

I consider Dr. Mahaffy an excellent administrative officer, and his services in this campaign have been highly meritorious.

Staff Surgeon Major Guy, 27 years' service and second Senior Medical Officer of the British service with this force, has been stationed at Zoulla from the commencement of the campaign in the capacity of Superintendent of hospital-ships, and Principal Medical Officer of the European troops at Zoulla.

Without going into details, I may state generally that Staff Surgeon Major Guy's duties, more especially in connection with the arrival of troops and invaliding of sick to England, have been such as to require ability and judgment.

* Dr. Pelly, Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals; Dr. Mahaffy, Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals; Staff Surgeon Major Guy.

Dr. Guy is a hard-working and conscientious medical officer, and I can honestly testify that he has discharged the duties of his appointment ably and satisfactorily.

Staff Assistant Surgeon W. S. Martin was appointed to the exploring party, which was sent to Abyssinia in September last, and accompanied it through various expeditions undertaken for the purpose of discovering a practicable route for troops from the sea to the highlands.

He wrote an excellent report upon the different routes examined, and compiled a valuable meteorological record.

On the arrival of the Expeditionary Force in Abyssinia, His Excellency was good enough, on my recommendation, to appoint Dr. Martin to the office of Secretary to the Principal Medical Officer of this force.

The duties of this appointment, I may be allowed to observe, are of a difficult and laborious nature, more especially in connection with medical statistics, a branch of science with which Dr. Martin is fully conversant.

I feel it due to this officer to testify to the able and efficient manner in which he has discharged duties requiring high attainments and great industry.

I may add that Assistant Surgeon Martin's scientific and professional acquirements are very considerable, and I look upon him as a medical officer of great promise in the department.

On the grounds of valuable services performed during this arduous and peculiarly difficult campaign, I conceive that Dr. Martin has established a strong claim to promotion for meritorious and distinguished services, and if the rules of the service permit (and I know of none which precludes a medical officer of upwards of five years' service from obtaining promotion), I beg strongly to recommend that Staff Assistant Surgeon W. S. Martin be promoted to the rank of Surgeon, as a reward to himself and an encouragement to others of the department.

In 1865 Dr. Martin held medical charge of the wing of 45th Regiment at Neemuch, during a severe visitation of epidemic cholera.

In 1866-67 was in medical charge of the sanitarium at Poorundhur, and in 1868 was Secretary to the Principal Medical Officer of the Abyssinian Expedition.

In addition to the officers whose services I have now submitted to His Excellency for favourable consideration, there are many others who have displayed zeal and ability, and have proved themselves in many respects highly efficient medical officers in the field.

This class comprises officers of different grades and standing, in both the British and Indian Medical Services, and as I wish justice to be done to every one whose services have been in any degree deserving of special notice, I shall not fail to adopt such measures as will insure their merits being brought under the immediate notice of the professional heads of the two departments in England and India, in order that their services in this campaign may be permanently recorded.

I have, &c.,

S. Currie,

Inspr. Genl. of Hospitals, and Principal Medical Officer, Bombay Staff, Abyssinian Expeditionary Force.

S. Currie, Inspector General, Abyssinian Field Force.

No. 14.

From Lieut. Colonel St. Clair Wilkins, R.E., Commanding Engineer, Abyssinian Expeditionary Force, to Captain T. J. Holland, Assistant Quarter Master General, Abyssinian Expeditionary Force, Head Quarters.

Zoulla, May 30th, 1868.

Sir,—I have the honour to submit, for the information of His Excellency Lieutenant General Sir Robert Napier, G.C.B. and G.C.S.I., Commander-in-Chief, Abyssinian Expeditionary Force, a brief report of the operation of the Engineer Department in Abyssinia, of the services of the officers of the departments, together with a report in detail of the several works executed.

Plans of the port, coast, depôt, and camp of Zoulla, the railway line, and other works are annexed.

The officers of the reconnoitring party, despatched from Bombay on the 16th of September last year, having, on the 2nd of October, examined the port of Massowah and the water-supply of that port on the plains of Mucculloa, five miles distant from the sea, formed the opinion that that harbour was too small to accommodate more than half-a-dozen vessels, and that the water-supply was of too limited and precarious a nature to meet the requirements of the Expedition, the Euphrates, and the Coromandel, containing the exploring force, then steamed southwards into Annesley Bay, and the water-supply at Negoosa, on the promontory of Buri, was examined without satisfactory results. Crossing the bay, the vessels took up a position off the village of Zoulla, and the water-supply from the Huddas River promising fairly, and an investigation of the shores round the bay, combined with information obtained presenting no better prospect, it was determined to make Zoulla the base of exploration in the country.

The beach at Zoulla shelving very gradually into the sea, it became at once a matter of great importance to commence the construction of a suitable pier for landing purposes. Some iron girders and stout rafters had been brought up in the steamers to assist in forming a pier; but from the nature and formation of the shore, it was approved that a long pier would have to be constructed from local resources. The plain bounding the sea was covered with low bushes, but unfortunately no stone was to be had; under these circumstances, fascines were prepared from the brushwood, and being strongly staked down formed retaining fences for the filling in.

Arrangements were at once made for the collection of Native crafts from Massowah and neighbouring ports, and the conveyance of stone from the opposite site of the bay commenced towards the middle of October. Sea-walls were then built outside the fascines, and by degrees the pier was run out 900 feet into the sea, giving a depth of 5 feet at low water springs. The greater portion of the pier was filled with stone.

This stone pier was completed sufficiently to be used in landing the advanced brigade and their horses in November; and by the middle of December the pier was in general use, having a tramway laid from its head to some distance up the beach, then greatly facilitating the landing of Commissariat, Land Transport Train, Ordnance, and other stores. A tramway was laid down on the beach, running down to low water line as early as October, and was of much service previous to the pier coming into use.

In this month also a road, 50 feet in breadth, was cleared through the jungle from the pier to the camp, 1¼ miles distant.

By the end of November, the works executed at Zoulla comprised the nearly finished stone pier, a cleared road to camp from the sea, the clearing out of the old village wells in the bed of the Huddas River, and the construction of twenty new ones, whereby about 2,000 men and 2,000 animals were watered daily; a large store shed, and a water-shoot, 480 feet in length, raised on trestles above the sea, for conveying to the tanks which were being collected on shore sweet water condensed by Her Majesty's ship Satellite.

The satisfactory progress made with the Zoulla works generally up to the close of the year is attributable to the untiring zeal and energy displayed by the officer in executive charge, Captain W. W. Goodfellow, Field Officer, and Second in Command of Royal Engineers with the force.

It is unnecessary for me to bring this officer's subsequent services to His Excellency's notice; those services having been performed under His Excellency's own observation. I would wish, however, to record how highly I appreciate Captain W. W. Goodfellow's services, and how much I feel indebted to him for his support and example, and for the cheerfulness and fertility of resource he has so constantly displayed.

On His Excellency's arrival at Zoulla early in January, many additional Commissariat and other sheds had been erected, and the commencement made of a second pier—a pile pier—the materials for which had been prepared and sent out from Bombay.

Captain Chrystie, R.E., Field Engineer, assumed charge of the Zoulla works on the 1st of January, and in his hands the pile pier made rapid progress, and was nearly completed up to the island by the 5th of February, when Captain Chrystie was ordered to Senafé, and was relieved at Zoulla by Captain Wood, R. E., Field Engineer.

Captain Wood completed the pile pier, and built a new head to the stone pier, greatly improving it. Captain Wood's work was distinguished by its solidity and permanent character. That the piers were not damaged by the late gales is attributable to this officer's good work at the head of the piers. Captain Wood was unfortunately taken ill, and had to go on board the hospital-ship; Lieutenant Lee, Royal Engineers, Assistant Field Engineer, assuming charge of the Zoulla works.

I have much pleasure in testifying to the excellent character of the works carried out by this officer, who has had many years' experience on public works.

Lieutenant Lee completed the works at Zoulla as they now stand.

A tramway having been proposed to be laid on the lowland country between Zoulla and the base of the mountains at Koomeylee, a distance of about twelve miles, Lieutenant Willians, Royal Engineers, Assistant Field Engineer, commenced surveying the line in November, and the works were commenced in December, when the ships with the plant from Bombay began to arrive.

An iron girder bridge of three spans of 20 feet was constructed over a branch of the Huddas River in December, and about a mile of earthworks were constructed and rails laid by the end of January.

Six miles of railway, with a branch of half a mile to the Commissariat sheds, were completed by the 19th February, and the Commissariat Department commenced running all their stores and provisions to the 6th-mile siding. This enabled the Land Transport Train to move the whole of their animals from Zoulla, thus relieving the water-condensing operations enormously, and saving considerably in time and animals in the trip from the coast to Senafé.

All Commissariat and other stores now sent out to the 6th-mile siding were conveyed away by carts and baggage-animals sent out from Koomeylee, and which returned to that post the same day.

A second Commissariat siding was opened for traffic at the 9th mile from Zoulla on the 28th of March, thus further reducing the labour of the transport animals.

At the end of April the railway was completed to within a mile of the camp at Koomeylee. The traffic on the line had now become so great that the Commissariat Department absorbed the whole of the rolling-stock. It was found that what with the Commissariat requirements and the increased time taken up by the lengthened journey, trains for the conveyance of railway plant could no longer be given. With extreme reluctance, it was then decided that the works must be brought to a close by the construction of a loop-line and terminus at about a mile from Koomeylee.

The heat on the plains was so great when the works were being close, that not more than five and a-half to six hours' work could be obtained from the workpeople.

By great good fortune, water was obtained from wells at the 4th, 7th, and 9th miles on the road, by the excavation of wells 50, 65, and 85 feet in depth respectively at each point named.

Watering-tanks for the engines were set up by the side of the line, and fed from these wells by piping.

A good supply of water being obtainable at the 4th mile, "Pioneer Wells," the locomotive workshops were established at this place. It was also found desirable that the whole of the locomotive establishment should be permanently situated at the "Pioneer Wells," so as to be close to their works.

The railway, properly speaking, is only a tramroad, so far as the rails and rolling-stock are concerned. The rails are light, and the rolling-stock consists of contractor's engines and trucks. Nevertheless the tramroad has been called upon to do the duty of a railway, and it has, by constant care and management, been kept up to the work required of it.

The main line from Zoulla to Koomeylee is 10¼ miles in length, and altogether 12 miles 106 yards of rails have been laid. For the first 6 miles the plain rises pretty gradually from the sea to a height of about 100 feet above that level. The railway line then passes through a low range of hills, keeping the bank of the river, there is some heavy work on this portion of the line in cutting, embankments, and bridges. The line then descends about 50 feet into the Koomeylee plain, and rises to a height of 348 feet at the Koomeylee terminus.

Eight iron girder bridges and a large number of drains have been constructed on the line.

The whole of the railway, earthworks, embankments, cuttings, bridges, and drains, have been executed by troops of the force and by men of the Army Works Corps. A few civilian plate-layers, some from Bombay, and some obtained from the shipping and departments of the Army, have superintended the plate-laying. The greater portion of the railway will have been constructed by the 23rd Punjab Pioneers, commanded by Major Chamberlain, and the 2nd Bombay Grenadiers under Lieutenant Colonel Muter. I am particularly desirous that the services of these two corps, in performing a duty so utterly new to them, should be brought to His Excellency's notice. The cheerfulness and willingness on the works of the men of these corps, inspired by the spirit and tone of their officers, have been most conspicuous, and is deserving of the highest praise. The Punjab Pioneers are very clever, and quite artistic in all they do under the guidance of their skilful commander. The wells made by them at the station called "Pioneers' Wells" and at the bridge are models of skill in well-digging.

The 2nd Grenadiers worked on the line during the hot season, but they always evinced the greatest alacrity and desire to further the work.

I respectfully wish to bring to His Excellency's special notice the services of Captain Darrah, R.E., Field Engineer, who has superintended the railway works from the commencement to the completion, as well as the services of his assistants, Lieutenant Williams, R.E., Assistant Field Engineer; Lieutenant Pennefather, R.E., Assistant Field Engineer; Lieutenant Band, R.E., Assistant Field Engineer; Lieutenant Graham, 108th Regiment, Assistant Field Engineer.

Lieutenant Williams, R.E., commenced the railway survey on 16th November, and he remained on the works superintending the bridges till 15th March, when he was ordered to the front. He returned to Zoulla on 20th May, and resumed his position on the railway.

Lieutenant Pennefather joined the railway works on 23rd of December, and he has never left the works for a day up to this time.

Lieutenant Baird, R.E., arrived from Bombay on the 28th February, and he at once took up the appointment of Traffic Manager of the line.

Lieutenant Graham, 108th Regiment, joined Captain Darrah on the 20th January, and he has been on the works the whole campaign.

As the railway works have been carried out under my own supervision, I am able to speak from personal observation of the devotion to duty displayed by Captain Darrah and his assistants.

Early and late day by day, for upwards of five months, have these officers, under most trying circumstances of climate, strained to the utmost ability and strength to further the success of the Expedition so far as the railway was concerned.

His Excellency should be informed of the exemplary conduct throughout of the under-mentioned non-commissioned officers employed on the railway works from nearly their commencement to the completion. All skilled men, the value of their services have been increased by their good conduct:—

Corporal Heinig, R.E., 10th Company; Sergeant Webb; Corporal Reeks; Private Cooper; Private Cox, 1st Battalion, 4th King's Own Regiment; Private Miller, 45th Foot.

The difficulties of even trusting a railway with unprofessional labour have been greatly enhanced from the circumstances of five different descriptions of rails having been provided for the work on four different principles of fixing.

Had it been possible to land and carefully stack each description of rail prior to plate-laying, the variation in the rails would not have been the cause of much inconvenience.

As it happened, this difference of pattern proved most annoying, for the disembarkation of the plank just kept pace with the requirements of the works, and the line was fed from hand to mouth throughout, consequently there was no time for sorting and stacking.

The Kurrachee rails have given the greatest trouble in laying and maintenance, being very much worn and bent, and being a joint chair and not a fish-plated rail.

The 40-lb. fish-plated rail would have been more useful if the fish-plate holes had fitted those in the rails. In five cases out of ten they did not fit, nor would the bolts go through the holes.

My opinion is that railways required for the operations of war should be carried out entirely as a civil work by engineers and contractors who make it their business to construct railways, and who would bring to bear on the works their own experience and that of professional establishments.

In the present case it is worthy of remark, as a set-off that, although the railway works have not been constructed so well and so quickly as they would have been by a professional contractor, yet the line was made in time to be exceedingly useful, and the difference of expense between the two systems is very great.

I understand the tender of an eminent contractor for making the Abyssinian railway was at the rate of £6,000 a mile, which would have brought up the cost of the whole line to about £72,000, exclusive of rails and plant.

As near as I can ascertain, the cost of making the Abyssinian railway has been about £6,000, exclusive of rails and plant.

It must not be supposed from this statement that the contractor (had the line been let to him) would have made a large profit. His expenses would have been very great for labour and superintendence.

Roads.

Early in November last year, when it was determined to explore the Koomeylee Pass, No. 1 Company of Bombay Sappers were sent to work in the Sooroo defile under Lieutenant Jopp, R.E., Assistant Field Engineer's superintendence.

From the time of the Koomeylee Pass being adopted as a route, strenuous exertions were made to construct a cart road through the Sooroo defile, the road was completed by the 31st January, the works having been well carried out under the directions of Lieutenant A. K. Jopp, R.E., Lieutenant (now) Captain Sturt, R.E., Lieutenant Coaker, R.E., who are deserving of His Excellency's notice.

The Sooroo defile occupied the labour of two companies of Sappers and two companies of Beloochees for three months. The road, when completed, had a breadth of about 10 feet, and was constructed on the principle of ramping over boulders and obstacles, instead of attempting their removal by blasting. The boulders which it was necessary to remove with the miner's drill, were found to be of the toughest description of granite, and for some time the Sappers were unable to make any impression upon them.

Almost simultaneously with the construction of the Sooroo defile road was the work of clearing a cart-road the whole way from Zoulla to Senafé, a distance of 63 miles taken in hand. The rise in this road, in the length of 63 miles, is 7,400 feet.

About a mile of defile road at Rayrayguddy had to be built much in the same manner as the Sooroo; and at 1½ miles from Senafé, a ghaut road, 1½ miles in length, had to be cut out of the mountain side.

The whole road was open for cart traffic the early days of February.

The road has been kept in a perfect state of repair up to the 8th of May, when thunder-storms commenced breaking over the passes and doing serious damage to the made road.

A cart-road was also made between Senafé and Addigerat, a further distance of seventeen miles. Two pieces of ghaut-road occur on this line, the Goon Goona and Kersuba Ghauts from Addigerat to Antalo; so much of the route was cleared as to render it possible for the 9-14th Battery to be driven to that post.

Beyond Antalo to Magdala, the road can only be described as a track passable for laden mules and elephants.

A detailed description of the roads will be found in the accompanying report.

An alternative route was commenced by the Huddas River, but was abandoned through sickness of the troops engaged and from other causes.

Captain Hills, R.E., Field Engineer, who held the post of Executive Engineer at Koomeylee and Senafé during the campaign, has exerted himself in a very creditable manner in exploring for the best line of road to be taken to the Huddas.

Water-supply.

When large bodies of troops and followers had landed at Zoulla, and animals of the Transport Train accumulated in great numbers, it became necessary to condense a large supply of water.

About 200 tons of water were landed daily from steamers in the harbour by means of a wooden shoot which conveyed the water to iron tanks, from which a long wooden trough was kept constantly filled.

The troops soon moved up-country, and on the opening of the sixth-mile siding on the railway, the whole of the Transport Train animals were moved to Koomeylee, then the supply required from the condensers became greatly reduced.

The allowance of water to every individual in Zoulla—camp, officers, soldiers, and followers—has been 1½ gallons daily per head, a by no means wasteful allowance when the climate is considered.

A water-supply for about 5,000 aninals and proportion of men was provided at Koomeylee in December and January; but on these numbers being greatly increased in March, it became necessary to increase this water-supply.

Force, suction, and chain pumps were set up at the wells, capable of watering 10,000 to 15,000 animals and 5,000 men, and long ranges of troughs were provided, rendering the watering of animals an easy operation.

Lieutenant Le Mesurier, R.E., Assistant Field Engineer, came out from England specially to set up the new American tube wells and pumps at the different posts. This energetic officer took charge of the whole water-supply generally, and, with his assistants, inaugurated and carried out a very efficient system of water-supply at each post as far as Addigerat.

Lieutenant Le Mesurier's creditable exertions have doubtless come under His Excellency's own observation, it only remaining, therefore, for me to bring to His Excellency's favourable notice the services of Lieutenant Le Mesurier's assistants,—Lieutenant Clarke, R.E., Lieutenant Sargeaunt, R.E., Lieutenant Protheroe, M. S. C., Lieutenant Mainwaring, R.E., Assistant Field Engineers.

The water works between Koomeylee and Addigerat being of a permanent character are detailed in the accompanying report.

Lieutenant Le Mesurier has favoured me with the following remarks upon the water-supply between Addigerat and Magdala.

Beyond Addigerat no stores could be carried, and paved slopes were made into the nullahs for the animals, Norton's tube wells supplying drinking water.

Beyond Antalo, four Norton's tubes and driving apparatus complete were carried on six mules as far as Lat. They were then of necessity left behind, and finally reached Magdala on the eve of our departure, enabling us, however, to obtain a supply of pure drinking water after a want of it for sixty hours.

The water was obtained from the following sources:—

Lake Ashangi, measuring 3½ miles by 2½ miles, and 17 fathoms in depth, and possessing the peculiarity of having no outlet:

The River Ayangua, rising at Lat, and said by some to be the source of the Tacazze:

The Tellare River was crossed at Dildee;

The Tacazze River was crossed at Miya;

On the Wadela plateau the supply was obtained from the Santara, Gosho, Gashoss, and Fanta Rivers, running into the Jita.

The Jita River, about 2,500 feet below the Waddela and Dalanta plateau, was dry on the advance of the army on 4th of April, and nearly so on its return on 23rd April. The distance in a lee line from one plain to the other is not less than 3 miles, and the journey to accomplish by the King's road nearly 10 miles.

Water was found on Dalanta plain in pools in the small valley.

The formation here apparently was basaltic trap, while on the Waddela it was sandstone.

The Bashilo River, 8 miles north of Fahla, running and knee deep, after several severe thunder showers, was the only water crossed deserving the name of river.

It was the main source of supply to the army when encamped before Magdala.

The water in the small Native wells in the immediate vicinity of Magdala was unfit for any purpose, owing to the number of dead animals, &c., and the small supply obtained from the well dug by the troops, though clean, was of a peculiarly bitter taste.

A medical officer assured me that it was not injurious.

Telegraph.

Lieutenant St. John's telegraphic operations have not come under my observation beyond the Passes.

A statistical report by Lieutenant St. John is contained in the accompanying report of engineering operations.

I can, however, bear testimony to the value of Lieutenant St. John's telegraph.

I may say the telegraphic communication has been simply invaluable, and it has not failed when most wanted.

I have now to bring to His Excellency's notice that the engineer park having had the advantage of being formed with great care in Bombay, under Captain Greig's directions, has always been enabled to comply with the requisitions made upon it. It has fulfilled its purpose completely, and therefore calls for no further remarks.

Captain Greig has expressed himself well satisfied with the exertions of his assistants,— Lieutenant Saxton, R.E., Assistant Field Engineer; Cornet Dalrymple, Assistant Field Engineer.

In concluding this remaining portion of my report, it remains for me to bring to His Excellency's favourable notice the services of my Brigade Major, Captain Charles Goodfellow, V.C., R.E., Field Engineer, which have been so valuable to me by reason of his energy of character and experience in the conduct and management of Public Works.

Royal Engineers and Sappers and Miners.

Of the Royal Engineers and Madras and Bombay Sappers and Miners, the under-mentioned companies have been present with the force:—

X. Company, Royal Engineers.

Madras Sappers and Miners:—

G. Company.
H. „
K. „

Bombay Sappers and Miners:—

No. 1 Company.

The X. Company, Royal Engineers, are divided into,—

1. Telegraphists.
2. Signallers.
3. Well-borers.
4. Photographists.

The telegraphists have been employed between Zoulla and Antalo only, under the orders of Lieutenant Puzey, and under the general superintendence of Lieutenant St. John, R. E.

The signallers made themselves useful to the army the whole way from Senafé to Magdala, and their services were more especially valuable whilst the army crossed the ravines of the Takazze, the Jiddah, and the Bashilo, and on the advance on Magdala, in communicating with distant points relative to placing guns in position.

His Excellency is aware of the services of the officer under whom those men worked so willingly and efficiently.

The well-borers made themselves generally useful on the line of march from Koomeylee to close to Magdala, proving the efficacy of the American pumps as applicable to the line of march of an army. The operations of these men were judiciously directed by Lieutenant Le Mesurier, R.E.

The photographers have completed a series of views from Zoulla to Magdala, illustrating all points of interest on the line of march of the army. It is to be regretted that rather more professional and artistic knowledge was not brought to bear on this subject. Some beautiful effects of light and shade have been lost, owing to the views not having been taken at the proper time of day.

Major Pritchard, R.E., commanded the 10th Company, Royal Engineers, and was with the photographers throughout the Expedition.

Madras Sappers.

Major H. N. D. Prendergast, V.C., R.E., commanded the detachment consisting of G., H., and K. Companies; staff officer with the detachment, Captain Foord.

The G. Company* have been posted at Zoulla and Koomeylee during the whole campaign. The services performed by this company on the public works at Zoulla, on the railway, and on the Koomeylee water-works, have been excellent.

The sepoys of this company excavated a well on the railway line, 85 feet in depth, without lining of any kind, and proved themselves very skilful workmen.

I have much pleasure in recording the good services rendered by Lieutenant Morris, commanding this Company, in superintending the water arrangements at Koomeylee. These services have proved most beneficial to the Transport Train establishment at that post.

Lieutenants Protheroe and Mainwaring have been before mentioned.

The H. Company† have been employed during the whole campaign on the public works at Zoulla, and have been most industrious.

This company has shown itself ever ready and willing to undertake any work required of it.

Lieutenant Pennycuick, R.E., commanding the H. Company, appears to have conducted the duties of his position in an efficient manner.

Lieutenant Cunningham, R.E., has been employed on detached duty at Antalo.

K. Company.‡—This company commenced work in the Senafé Pass after a short stay at Zoulla, and afterwards, when joined by head quarters, improved the track route between Antalo and Magdala, rendering it suitable for laden mules and elephants, and were present at the action of Arogee and taking of Magdala.

Captain Elliott, N.I., Commanding, Lieutenant Bird being Subaltern Officer.

Lieutenant Coaker, R.E., was detached from the company on its arrival at Zoulla, and worked with the 4th Company, Bombay Sappers, throughout the campaign.

* G.—Lieutenant Morris, R.E.; Lieutenant Protheroe, S.C.; Lieutenant Mainwaring, R.E.

† H.—Lieutenant Pennycuick, Commanding; Lieutenant Cunningham, 1st Officer.

‡ K.—Captain Elliott, N.I.; Lieutenant Bird, S.C. Lieutenant Coaker, R.E.

Bombay Sappers and Miners.

With head quarters, Captain Macdonnell, R.E. Commanding, Lieutenant Merewether, R.E., Adjutant.

No. 1 Company* arrived at Zoulla in October from Aden. After a short time, this company were sent to the Sooroo defile, and worked on the roads, the passes, till December, when it marched to Senafé and worked on the ghaut till the end of January, when it was removed on to Addigerat, working on the road between Senafé and Addigerat, more particularly on the Kersabba Ghaut, for which pieces of road great credit is due.

The company then proceeded to Antalo, and were employed in constructing the telegraph, returning to the Sooroo Pass in time to repair the damage done during the month of May, and remained there on duty till all the troops had cleared out.

This company was commanded by Lieutenant Newport, and I consider they did very efficient service under their excellent officer's command.

Lieutenant Osborne, R.E., was attached to this company in January, and subsequently performed the duties of Adjutant from January to May during the time Lieutenant Merewether was absent.

No. 2 Company.†—This company arrived in this country with head quarters early in December, and after a short stay at Zoulla worked on the Senafé Pass, and principally on the Sooroo defile, for which the company deserves great praise. The company was then pushed on to Antalo, and thence to Magdala, assisting in the road-making, and were present at the action of the 10th of April and capture of Magdala on the 13th.

Captain Sturt, R.E., commanded, and also worked this company, an arrangement which was most beneficial to the interests of the company.

No. 3 Company.‡—This company worked for two months at Zoulla on the stone pier; the men were employed eight hours a day. They were then removed up into the Pass; were worked on the Senafé Ghaut. They worked between Senafé and Addigerat, and between Addigerat and Antalo. Assisted in road-work between Antalo and Magdala, and were present in the action of the 10th and taking of Magdala on the 13th April.

Captain Leslie, S.C., commanded, and the company worked under the orders of Lieutenant Jopp, R.E.

4th Company.§—Worked two months at Zoulla on the stone pier eight hours a day; were then employed at Lower Sooroo, and subsequently in the Senafé Ghaut. Assisted in making the road between Senafé and Addigerat and Addigerat and Antalo. Also were employed generally in road-making between Antalo and Magdala, and were present in the action of the 10th, and capture of Magdala on the 13th April.

Lieutenant Leacock, S. C., commanded this company, working under the directions of Lieutenant Coaker, R.E.

ST. CLAIR WILKINS, Lieut. Col., R.E.,

Comdg. Engrs., Abyssinian Expeditionary Force.

ADMIRALTY, June 29th, 1868.

A despatch has been received by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty from Commodore Leopold G. Heath, C.B., the senior officer of Her Majesty's ships and vessels on the East India Station, relative to the services rendered by the Royal Navy in connection with the Abyssinian Expedition.

The following are extracts from the despatch which is dated on board Her Majesty's ship Octavia, Annesley Bay, June 10th, 1868:—

The re-embarkation of the Abyssinian Expeditionary Force being now practically completed, I propose to lay before their Lordships a summary of the work which has been done by the Royal Navy, and to submit the names of those officers and others whom I wish to bring to their special notice.

The Expedition which Sir Robert Napier has so successfully commanded will take its place in history as one of the most remarkable of modern days.

It has been pushed four hundred miles through a country about which little was previously known, except that it was mountainous and pathless,—a country supposed to be without water, and access to which could, it was said, be gained only by crossing great deserts, or scaling tremendous mountains,—a country moreover whose resources in supplies were doubtful, and the disposition of whose inhabitants towards us was uncertain.

It has been conducted by a General who, with prophecies of failure on all sides and from all countries, without adequate time for organising his land transport, upon which he knew all would depend, with a period for campaigning limited on the one hand by the S. W. monsoon, which prevented an earlier commencement of operations, and on the other by the local rains, which have already begun to fall, nevertheless answered to the call made upon him, and by continued and unceasing personal vigilance, by patience, by boldness, by perseverance, has gained England's end, and raised her name amongst all nations.

The Navy's part in this Expedition has been a humble one, but it has been none the less arduous, and none the less useful, for the Army landed at a port without fresh water, without grass, without resources of any kind but what were brought to it by sea; it had not only to build its own landing piers, to make its own railway, to raise its own huts and store-houses, but also to bring from distant ports the materials of which all these were made; and under these circumstances, it is impossible but that the assistance of the Royal Navy must have been very valuable, not merely from the actual labour it supplied, but from the superintendence and organization which it brought to bear upon the operations of landing. The Navy, moreover, furnished a small but efficient body of fighting men, which did good service in front of Magdala, and at a subsequent date it supplied a larger body for the defence of Senafé. These last were, however, almost immediately re-embarked as fresh troops arrived from India. In this Expedition there have been landed by the help of, and under the superintendence of, the Royal Navy—

Troops	14,214
Cavalry Horses (including Staff)	2,538
Natives, not soldiers	26,254
Land Transport Horses or Mules	19,580
" " Camels	6,045
" " Bullocks	7,086
" " Donkeys	1,850

and all these, with the exception of the greater portion of the land transport animals, have been again embarked.

The Navy has superintended the manufacture of 27,470 tons of fresh water for the use of the troops on shore, and 9,563 tons for replenishing the transports for the return voyage. It has landed railway plant and engines for a line of 12 miles, and it has freely lent its officers to supplement the departments of the Army which required them.

Finally, it has fixed and maintained lighthouses, and supplied a body of pilots with such success, that, although there have been 621 entries into the harbour of Zoulla, but one vessel (a small brig) has been lost.

I have thought it right to recapitulate these services, and to place them on record, because, although less brilliant and less dazzling than those performed by that portion of the Army and Navy in advance, they have been, I think, of vital importance to the Expedition, and they have been performed with the utmost zeal and alacrity notwithstanding the intense heat of the climate.

I wish now to bring to their Lordships' notice the good conduct of the officers and men who have carried out this work.

Their Lordships have already acknowledged the services of Captain Joseph Edge, of Her Majesty's ship Satellite, in the early part of the Expedition. Upon that officer, and upon Captain Colin Campbell, of Her Majesty's ship Octavia, have since then devolved all the organizations of the necessary working parties, the distribution of the tugs and lighters, and the general superintendence of the watering arrangements.

Captain Campbell commanded the Naval small arm brigade which was landed for the defence of Senafé, but which was not sent up in consequence of the unexpected arrival of Her Majesty's 26th Regiment from India. Captain George Tryon has worked the transport department with great zeal and energy, and has secured the good-will of all the heads of departments with whom he has had to deal.

The services of Captain Richard Bradshaw, of Her Majesty's ship Star, in erecting and maintaining lighthouses, in superintending the pilot department, and in performing other hydrographical duties, have before been acknowledged by their Lordships.

Mr. George G. Bardin, Inspector of Machinery float, has been most zealous and useful.

Sir Robert Napier will doubtless refer in his despatch to the services of Commander Thomas H. B. Fellowes, of Her Majesty's ship Dryad, Commanding the Naval Rocket Brigade.

The conduct of the remaining commanders, including Commander William H. Maxwell, of the Flag Ship, and Lieutenant George W. Allen, in temporary command of the Dryad, has been worthy of all praise; and whether attending to the interests of the Expedition at Aden or Suez, or Berbera, or employed in the dreary work of maintaining the pilot service at the seven fathoms patch, has been such as to merit my warmest commendation.

Equally good has been the behaviour of those in lower ranks. The officers and ships' companies have had unusually trying work, and, notwithstanding the burning heat of the sun and constant unavoidable exposure to it, they have done their duty with the greatest energy.

My Secretary, Mr. Henry H. Wyatt, has carried out the extra work which has been thrown upon him with his usual zeal and intelligence, and I am equally satisfied with Lieutenant Henry C. Walker, my Flag Lieutenant.

I enclose a list of officers and others who have, I think, earned promotion by special services.

OFFICERS and others recommended for promotion on account of special services.

Names and Rank.	Ship.	Nature of services.
T. H. Butler Fellowes, Commander ..	Dryad	With Royal Naval Rocket Brigade.
Charles S. Cardale, Senior Lieutenant ...	Satellite
George L. Atkinson, Acting-Sub-Lieutenant	Octavia
Henry N. M. Sedgwick, Assistant Surgeon	"
William E. Boxer, Assistant Paymaster ...	"
Duke A. Crofton, Midshipman (upon passing)	"
Daniel S. May, Navigating Lieutenant (Harbour Master)	"	Has had hard work; there have been generally upwards of 150 vessels in port, and scarcely an accident has happened.
James H. Ferguson, Engineer	"	Specially useful to the Expedition, having taken charge of the Locomotive Department.
William Callar, Gunner, 3rd Class	Argus	Strongly recommended by Commander Hallowes as useful at the embarkation of animals at Berbera.
Thomas King, Chief Boatswain's Mate ...	Octavia	General good work.
Charles R. Lewis, Chief Carpenter's Mate ...	Star	Special good conduct and skill in erecting lighthouses.
Charles Barkley, Private, R.N. (doing duty as acting Corporal)	Octavia	Special good conduct and intelligence at the water depôt.

Commodore.

[Enclosure to Despatch from Commodore Heath.]

Summary Proceedings of the Royal Naval Brigade,

ROYAL NAVAL BRIGADE,
Camp Marrawah, May 2nd.

1. As the campaign is now drawing to a close, and the Royal Naval Brigade under my command will, ere long, be broken up and re-embarked, I avail myself of the opportunity of a halt to report on the general proceedings of the brigade.

2. The brigade, in compliance with instructions received from Commodore Leopold G. Heath, C.B., landed at Zoulla on the 25th of January, and encamped on the plain.

3. I commenced organizing them immediately, and as soon as mules could be supplied lost no opportunity of drilling in batteries and exercising firing rockets, and performing field evolutions.

4. The men rapidly acquired a perfect knowledge of the drill and the management of mules, and I was therefore enabled to report the brigade ready to march to the front immediately that the rocket tubes were supplied.

5. On the 27th of February I received orders from Brigadier General Stewart, Commanding at Zoulla, to proceed to Antalo on the 29th of February to join the advanced division, with Sir Robert Napier, K.C.B., K.C.S.I., the Commander-in-Chief.

6. The brigade marched at daylight on the 29th, and consisted of 100 officers and men (European), 2 farriers, 13 grass-cutters, 3 water-carriers, 6 bearers for sick, 1 sweeper for hospital, 88 battery mules, 54 baggage and provision mules, or their equivalent in camels, 11 officers' horses, 3 bullocks for carrying water.

7. We carried with us five days' rations for men and animals.

8. On arrival at Senafé on the 5th of March, I reported myself to Brigadier General Schneider, Commanding, and was ordered by him to complete to seven days' provisions, and to march on Antalo on the 7th of March.

9. We arrived at Antalo on the 16th of March, and I reported the arrival of the brigade to Brigadier General Collins. In the evening orders arrived from Sir Robert Napier to send on all the troops belonging to the 1st and 2nd Brigades, first Division, to the front immediately.

10. The Royal Naval Brigade was at first attached to the 2nd Brigade, 1st Division, and marched from Antalo on the 17th of March for Magdala, in company with B. 21 Battery, Royal Artillery, 33rd Regiment of Foot, 23rd Punjab Pioneers, and a detachment of Scinde Horse.

11. After incessant and somewhat harassing marches, we arrived at Lat on the 23rd of March, and joined the first Division under Sir Charles Staveley.

12. The whole division under Sir Charles Staveley marched on the 25th to join the Commander-in-Chief, who was reported to be at Dildee.

13. On the 29th of March we marched on Takazzee, and on arrival were enabled to telegraph to the Commander-in-Chief, who was encamped on the heights at Santara.

14. We marched on the 30th of March up the almost perpendicular ascent leading to Santara, and joined His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

15. On my reporting the arrival of the brigade to His Excellency, he gave me a warm and hearty welcome, and expressed the gratification he felt at having a force representing the navy under his command. He also expressed his desire to see the rocket batteries drill and fire, in order that he might estimate their value.

16. I accordingly turned out the Naval Brigade, and proceeded, under the immediate direction of the Commander-in-Chief, accompanied by his staff and a large number of the officers of the army to the top of an adjoining hill, and fired rockets at various elevations as directed by His Excellency.

17. On the conclusion of the practice, Sir Robert expressed his gratification at the appearance of the brigade, and at the efficiency, range, and power of the rockets, and immediately placed us in the first Brigade under Brigadier General Schneider.

18. On the 31st of March we marched with the Commander-in-Chief and the first Brigade, to which we were now attached, on Gahso, and thence on Abdikoom, Sindee, and across the Jitha, on to the Dalanta Plain overlooking the Bashilo, and in view of King Theodore's camp in the neighbourhood of Magdala.

19. On the 10th of April we marched with the Commander-in-Chief and first Brigade at 4-30 A.M. on Magdala by the King's Road, down the steep and precipitous south bank of the Bashilo and across the river.

20. After crossing the Bashilo, a force, consisting of a squadron of Cavalry, the 4th Regiment and Punjab Pioneers, were sent under Sir Charles Staveley over the hills on the right of the King's Road; but the path which they took was found impracticable for laden mules with the batteries, and the Naval Brigade and A. 21 Battery, Royal Artillery, was therefore ordered to proceed by the King's Road up the Arogie Pass, the Naval Brigade leading.

21. After ascending the Pass, and on skirting Islamgie and Fahla Hills, within range of the guns of the latter, King Theodore, who was on Fahla, opened fire on the Naval Brigade, and very shortly afterwards his troops, numbering about 10,000 men, descended with astonishing rapidity with the intention of attacking and cutting us off, having supposed that our battery mules were laden with baggage.

22. The Commander-in-Chief, who was on the spot, immediately directed me to form up on a commanding position, dismount the batteries, and open fire on the enemy, at the same time directing the Infantry to advance.

23. So easily are the rocket tubes handled that they were brought into action in a very short time, and the Royal Naval Brigade were enabled to return the first shot. After this the fire was kept up with rapidity until the enemy was driven back, and I was ordered to take the batteries down on the plain to clear out the parties of King Theodore's troops who were firing from behind bushes.

24. The action was concluded and the troops ordered off the field at dark, by which time 2,000 of the enemy were killed and wounded.

25. As much rain had fallen during the afternoon and evening, all were wet through; but as no tent could be pitched and a vigilant look-out had to be maintained, those not on guard slept in the battery.

26. At 2-30 A.M., on the 11th of April, we shifted our ground and encamped on the hill to the north-west of Magdala. At 8 A.M. Lieutenant Prideaux and Mr. Flad, two of the captives, accompanied by one of the chiefs of King Theodore, came into camp with a message from Theodore stating that he felt unable to contend with the British force after the result of yesterday's engagement, and offering to give up the captives. Sir Robert wrote to say that King Theodore must come into camp himself, and that both he and his family should receive honorable treatment. The King returned the letter with indignation, but subsequently relented, and on Sunday, the 12th of April, sent in all the European captives. He did not come himself.

27. On Monday, the 13th of April, as the King had attempted to fly, but had found it impracticable to do so, and had not given himself up or surrendered Magdala, Sir Robert Napier resolved to proceed with the attack, and accordingly the force, consisting of the first Brigade and second Brigade, which had by this time arrived, were moved on the plain between Islamgie and Fahla; the Native Infantry were sent to occupy Fahla, and the 33rd and 4th Regiments Islamgie. This was done without any resistance being offered, and the Naval Brigade and Artillery moved up under Magdala. King Theodore's army now laid down their arms by thousands, and only a small number remained with the King in Magdala.

28. The Naval Brigade were placed on a ridge between Fahla and Islamgie, facing Magdala, whence we threw rockets into Magdala until ordered to advance. On our arriving under the gate of the town, the assault had commenced, and I therefore ordered the rocket tubes and some rockets to be carried up by hand after the Infantry. The town was speedily taken, and King Theodore shot himself inside the gate.

29. We bivouacked in Magdala that night, and returned to the camp on the morning of the 14th of April.

30. The rockets, as reported by the captives and Natives, had astonished King Theodore and his troops, and one had gone close to the King while he was on Fahla, which he afterwards picked up, and said to Mr. Flad, it was impossible for him to fight against people who used such things.

31. The Gallas tribes now began to come in, and to rob and plunder the defenceless inhabitants who were leaving Magdala in great numbers for Debra Tabor and Tigrié. I was, therefore, ordered to send out pickets with rockets to drive them off, and this duty was performed until we struck our camp.

32. On the 17th of April we re-crossed the Bashilo, ascending 3,500 feet by the King's Road on to the Dalanta Plain, and encamped. On the following day Magdala was burnt, and the Commander-in-Chief came over with the remaining troops.

33. A large quantity of hay and grain, crosses, jewels, and manuscript books were taken from Magdala, and all, excepting the books, were sold by auction on the 20th. A trophy was selected and given to each battery and regiment. A valuable and handsome shield, with gold filigree and lion's skin, and a solid silver cross, fell to the lot of the Naval Brigade. The proceeds of the sale will be distributed among the troops, the manuscripts sent to the British Museum.

34. On the 20th of April the Commander-in-Chief held a grand review on Dalanta Plain of the troops, and made a speech, in which he expressed his thanks to all for their zeal and devotion. The Naval Brigade was placed on the right of all troops, except the Cavalry.

35. On the 22nd of April we re-crossed the Jitha, and commenced the return march to Zoulla.

36. The marching of the men of the Naval Brigade has been excellent throughout, no case having occurred of men falling out on the march, although their boots have frequently been completely worn through, and even men who were sick would endeavour to and succeed in performing long marches. The most strict discipline has been maintained throughout, and in both these points specially the Naval Brigade can compare favourably with any troops.

37. I have now the very great pleasure of reporting that very few punishments have been requisite to maintain discipline. There are a large proportion of most deserving and praiseworthy officers, petty officers, and seamen, of whom I would wish to bring the names of the following more particularly to notice :—

Lieutenant Charles Searle Cardale, who has always most zealously performed his duties, and assisted me most materially, and has always been ready to perform any duty.

Mr. Henry Nanton Murray Sedgwick, Assistant Surgeon, whose constant kindness and attention to the sick, often under trying circumstances, has met with my warmest approval.

Charles Henry Jones, Chief Gunner's Mate, who has performed the duty of Sergeant Major.

Robert Smith, Gunner's Mate, who has done duty as Quarter Master Sergeant, and has been most attentive and useful.

Thomas Vaughan, Boatswain's Mate, and John Graham, Boatswain's Mate, who have throughout the march had, the trying duty of bringing up the rear and superintending the re-loading of mules that had cast their loads or broken down.

Benjamin Starkes, Coxswain of the barge, and Charles Austin, Second Captain of the foretop, who have done duty as Sergeants of batteries.

38. I feel that I should fail in my duty were I to close this despatch without recording the cordial and even warm feeling that has been shown by all ranks of our comrades in the army towards the Naval Brigade, from the Commander-in-Chief to the private soldier, and which feeling we most heartily reciprocate.

39. I trust that the complete success in every particular of the Naval Brigade of the Abyssinian Field Force will give satisfaction.

I have, &c.,

T. H. BUTLER FELLOWES,

Commander, Commanding.

ADMIRALTY, June 30th, 1868.

A further despatch has been received by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty from Commodore Heath, of which the following is a copy :—

(Enclosure 1.)

SERVICES OF OFFICERS LENT FROM THE NAVY TO DO DUTY WITH THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE.

Her Majesty's Ship "Octavia," Annesley Bay, June 10th, 1868.

SIR,—I have the honour to report that the officers lent by me to Sir Robert Napier for service on shore have now returned to their duties, and I have the satisfaction of forwarding to their Lordships for record copies of the letters received by me on their return.

I have, &c.,

L. G. HEATH,

Commodore.

The Secretary of the Admiralty,
Whitehall, London.

ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE.

Adjutant General's Office, Head Quarters,

Camp Zoulla, June 4th, 1868.

From the Deputy Adjutant General, Abyssinian Expeditionary Force, to Commodore Heath, C.B., R.N., &c., &c., &c.

SIR,—In forwarding for your perusal, and for communication to the officers concerned, copies of letters received from Lieutenant Colonel Wilkins, Commanding Engineer, Abyssinian Expeditionary Force, I am directed by Sir R. Napier to convey to you His Excellency's best thanks for the kindness displayed in placing their valuable services at his disposal.

I have, &c.,

FRED. THESIGER, Colonel,

Dy. Adjt. Genl., Head Quarters.

ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE,

Zoulla, May 28th, 1868.

From Lieutenant Colonel ST. C. WILKINS, R.E., Commanding Engineer, A.E.F., to Colonel the Hon'ble F. A. THESIGER, Deputy Adjutant General.

SIR,—I have the honor to report, for the information of His Excellency Lieutenant General Sir Robert Napier, G.C.B. and G.C.S.I., Commander-in-Chief, that at the close of March last, Commodore Heath, C.B., R.N., Commanding-in-Chief, very kindly permitted Mr. J. W. Ferguson, R.N., Engineer of H.M.S. Octavia, to take charge of the Railway Locomotive Department.

2. The locomotives being in bad working order, from the misconduct of the Superintendent sent up from Bombay, which necessitated his removal, threatened serious results to the traffic on the line.

3. The difficulty was overcome by the appointment of Mr. Ferguson. Mr. Ferguson has had charge of this branch of railway management during the most important period from the 1st April to the close of the campaign.

4. By his skill and ability, Mr. Ferguson's services have had an important bearing upon the success of the railway traffic management. It is therefore due to that officer that these services should be brought to His Excellency's notice.

I have, &c.,

ST. CLAIR WILKINS, Lieut. Col.,
Comdg. Engr., A.E.F.

ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE.

From Lieutenant Colonel WILKINS, R.E., Commanding Engineer, Abyssinian Expeditionary Force, to Colonel the Hon'ble F. A. THESIGER, Deputy Adjutant General, Abyssinian Expeditionary Force.

SIR,—I have the honor to bring to the favorable notice of His Excellency Lieutenant General Sir Robert Napier, G.C.B. and G.C.S.I., Commander-in-Chief, the services rendered in the Engineer Department by the undermentioned officers of the Royal Navy and Royal Marines, placed at His Excellency's disposal by Commodore Heath, C.B., R.N., Commanding-in-Chief, and appointed Assistant Field Engineers with the Abyssinian Field Force :—

2. Lieutenant S. C. Darwin and Navigating Lieutenant Thomas Pounds, R.N., have superintended the water-supply of Zoulla from the condensing ships.

3. Lieutenant Arthur S. Phillpotts, R.N., has been indefatigable in carrying out his onerous duties of landing railway plant and other heavy engineering stores.

4. Navigating Lieutenant Wm. H. Hayward, R.N., has been attached to the Telegraph Department, and his services have been distinguished for ability and energy.

5. Lieutenant Geo. F. H. Rule, Royal Marine Light Infantry, has served with the Army Works Corps during the campaign, and the Commanding Officer has, on several occasions, reported in the most favourable manner of the assistance he has received from Lieutenant Rule.

6. I would mention that the duties performed by Lieutenant Phillpotts, Navigating Lieutenant Hayward, R.N., and Lieutenant Rule, R.N., have fallen under my own observation, and I have the highest satisfaction in bringing their meritorious services to His Excellency's notice.

I have, &c.,

ST. CLAIR WILKINS, Lieut. Col.,
Commanding Engineer,
Abyssinian Expeditionary Force.

ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

ABSTRACT OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNCIL OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA, ASSEMBLED FOR THE PURPOSE OF MAKING LAWS AND REGULATIONS UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE ACT OF PARLIAMENT, 24 & 25 VIC., CAP. 67.

The Council met at Simla on Wednesday, the 22nd July 1868.

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, presiding.
His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, G.C.S.I., K.C.B.
The Hon'ble G. N. Taylor.
The Hon'ble Major General Sir H. M. Durand, C.B., K.C.S.I.
The Hon'ble H. S. Maine.
The Hon'ble John Strachey.
The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple, K.C.S.I.
The Hon'ble F. R. Cockerell.

COORG COURTS' JURISDICTION BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. TAYLOR, in moving for leave to introduce a Bill to define the jurisdiction of the Courts in Coorg, said that the Bill as framed by Mr. Saunders, when Judicial Commissioner of Coorg, would embody the details requisite to ensure the efficient working of the courts of that province, and be modelled on the Acts recently passed for the administration of civil and criminal justice in the Panjáb and other Non-Regulation Provinces.

The Council were doubtless aware that the small mountainous province of Coorg, probably not larger than an ordinary District elsewhere, was situated in the south-western corner of Mysore, and was administered by the Commissioner of that territory. It was annexed by the British Government more than thirty years ago in consequence of the hostility and rebellious conduct of its Rájá, our tributary; and, what was perhaps more remarkable, at the express desire of the people of the country who were thoroughly harrowed and worn out by the savage and revolting cruelties which had been perpetrated by their own native rulers for a series of years. The people were a hardy warlike race, and were described as retaining to the present day much of the primitive simplicity, as well as the independence, of their character. Our administration had not failed to give satisfaction, and the courts of judicature established since our assumption of the country had been well suited to the wants and habits of the people. But a great change had passed over the province of recent years. Owing to the extension of coffee-planting, to which the soil and climate of South Coorg were peculiarly adapted, and to the influx of Europeans connected with that growing industry, civilization had progressed, commerce extended, and the work of administration had consequently increased. Until quite recently, the Superintendent was the only European executive and magisterial officer in the province, and his court was held forty miles from the tract chiefly occupied by the English planters. The want of an Assistant Magistrate and executive officer, who could communicate with the settlers by word and letter in their own language, soon began to be keenly felt. On the urgent representation of the Planters' Association, the Commissioner strongly advocated the appointment; and the Government of India had recently allowed an European Assistant to be posted to South Coorg. A question, however, at once arose as to his duties: it was asked by the local authorities if he should try all cases in which Europeans were concerned all over the Province; and it was proposed that, for this purpose, he should have concurrent jurisdiction with all local courts in all civil cases up to Rs. 3,000. The object was to allow all Europeans to bring their cases to his court in preference to the ordinary courts of the country if so inclined. It was then pointed out that this could only be done by a legislative enactment, as in the case of other Non-Regulation Provinces in respect to which it had been found necessary to pass laws to confer civil and criminal jurisdiction not hitherto exercised. It seemed desirable, therefore, instead of confining the measure to the single object of providing a jurisdiction for the court of the European Assistant, which could not have been easily fitted to the existing system, to take the opportunity of remodelling the whole judicial machinery of the Province and placing it on a proper legal basis.

The Commissioner was accordingly desired to prepare and submit a Draft Bill, defining the constitution and jurisdiction of the various courts he proposed to retain, and the kind of procedure he would lay down for them. This he had now done. Several grades of courts of both civil and criminal jurisdiction were proposed on the model of those in the Panjáb and Central Provinces, though under different local names; retaining as far as possible the present system and the simple rules of procedure now in force. He (MR. TAYLOR) would not detain the Council by going over the several provisions of the measure; but with the above explanation of its object, he would ask His Excellency's permission to introduce the Bill.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

OUDH RENT BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. STRACHEY moved that the further report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to rent in Oudh be taken into consideration. When the Bill was introduced, he stated that there were two objects for which legislation was necessary; first, to give the force of law to the engagements entered into by the Government, and to confirm the concessions made by the taluqdárs of Oudh in favour of certain classes of tenants; and second, to provide for many matters relating to the recovery of rent, in respect of which the existing law was either doubtful or unsatisfactory.

Since the Bill was last discussed in Council, it had been twice referred to a Select Committee, and all its provisions had been carefully scrutinized. The opinions of all the principal revenue officers in Oudh, and of many officers in other provinces, had been given, and every section of the Bill had been discussed by him personally with the present Chief Commissioner and Financial Commissioner, and with the chief taluqdárs. He believed that no Bill had yet come before this Council which had been more thoroughly examined and criticized.

So far as the Bill referred to the engagements entered into between the Government and the taluqdárs, it was stated in the report of the Select Committee, dated the 15th September last, that the taluqdárs were completely satisfied with the provisions of the Bill. They had repeatedly declared that the Bill carried out faithfully all the engagements of the Government, and they themselves confirmed to His Excellency in person the accuracy of this statement when His Excellency visited Lucknow in November last.

In respect, therefore, of those portions of the Bill which referred to those particular questions, nothing more need be said, for no changes of importance had been subsequently made in them.

One addition, indeed, had been made to section 5, with the object of negativing more distinctly the transferability inter vivos of rights of occupancy. This had been done merely to make the intention of the section clearer. It was never proposed that those rights of occupancy should be transferable without the consent of the landlord. With such consent, they would be transferable, if the conditions of the last proviso to section 5 were complied with.

When he introduced this Bill, he said that, except the rights of occupancy declared to be possessed by the class of cultivators who had once possessed proprietary rights in the land which they now held, no rights of occupancy were recognized by this Bill, and he added that no rights of occupancy could hereafter be created by the Government, or could grow up in Oudh, as they could grow up in provinces where Act No. X of 1859 was in force, from the mere occupation of the land for twelve years, or for any other time. So far as the Government was concerned, the only class of tenants with rights of occupancy was the class described in section 5 of this Bill. If any other rights of occupancy were claimed, they could only be established by the decree of a competent Court of law, and such claims would not be affected by this Bill. If any tenant claimed to possess a right of occupancy different in kind to the rights of occupancy therein described, it was of course open to him to sue for that right in a Court of law, and to prove his claim if he could. If such rights should in any case be established, they must be protected by the Courts, in accordance with those orders of Lord Canning which formed the legal basis of all existing rights in land in Oudh, and which declared that all persons "would be secured in the possession of the subordinate rights which they had heretofore enjoyed." He had thought it desirable to mention this, although he did not suppose that the matter was one regarding which there was likely to be any doubt. He might add that what he had now said was in strict accordance with the views of Sir Charles Wingfield. He had repeatedly stated in the official correspondence which had been published, that, although he considered that non-proprietary tenants must be assumed to be tenants-at-will until the contrary was proved, he had never desired to shut against any one the judicial tribunals by which claims to rights in land were heard and determined.

He would have to propose some verbal amendments in two of the sections which referred to the right of tenants to claim compensation, under certain circumstances, for unexhausted improvements. No change of importance, however, was proposed in the original provisions of the Bill in regard to this matter. There was no part of the Bill which he believed to be more important than this, or which he looked upon with greater satisfaction. This was, he believed, the first attempt that had been made in India—he was very sure that it would not be the last—to legislate on this subject, regarding which there had lately been so much discussion at home.

The time had, he hoped, almost passed away in which it was necessary to argue in favour of the principle that property created by the industry of a tenant ought to belong to him, and that it ought not to be liable to confiscation at the pleasure of a landlord. The justice of this principle was the more evident in a country like India, where for the most part, whatever improvements were made were commonly made by the tenants and not by the landlords. That being the case, it was right to assume, as this Bill assumed, that in the absence of any specific agreement to the contrary, improvements made by a tenant had been made with the tacit consent of the landlord.

The necessity for legislation on this subject had lately received a strong illustration.

When he introduced this Bill, he believed that, although in the present state of the law, it was, to say the least, very doubtful whether a tenant could in any case obtain compensation for improvements which he had made without his landlord's consent, it did not occur to him (MR. STRACHEY) to imagine that the tenant, by making such improvements, even of the most trivial description, exposed himself not only to the chance of losing the money that he had expended, but to the danger of being summarily ejected altogether from his holding. Yet this had lately been declared by a Full Bench of the High Court at Agra to be the existing law in the North-Western Provinces, and if it were the law there, it might perhaps be supposed that it was the law in Oudh also. He asked the attention of His Excellency and of the Council to that judgment of the High Court which he held in his hand. It was dated the 20th July 1867, and it had recently been published for the information of revenue officers by the Board of Revenue in the North-Western Provinces. This judgment laid down the general rule that a tenant, even though he possessed a right of occupancy, made himself liable to ejectment if he dug a kachchá well without the previous consent of his landlord, although it was admitted that there might be local usages forming exceptions to the general law.

He did not wish to say much on this subject, for he thought that the bare statement of those facts was sufficient for his present purpose. But the matter was one of very great importance. The right of occupancy possessed by an hereditary tenant was, as his hon'ble friend Mr. Maine had clearly shown, a right of property in the land. Such a tenant was in fact a part-proprietor. Whether this sort of property were economically good or bad,—he himself believed it to be good,—had nothing to do with the present question. Not only did that right of property unquestionably exist, but the right was often a very valuable one. That such a right, or for that matter, any other right should be capable of annihilation by the digging of a kachchá well seemed to him to be truly extraordinary.

For what was a kachchá well? It was really a misapplication of terms to call it a well, or it would be so, if they had in English any other word by which it could be described. A kachchá well, in the greater part of Northern India, was a mere hole dug in the ground to the depth of a few feet, and perhaps 3 or 4 feet in diameter, and it cost usually a few shillings to make. The digging of those holes for the supply of water for irrigation was very commonly, as the Board of Revenue had truly said, as essential as the ploughing of the land to the production of any crop at all.

Yet the digging of such holes, without which no crop could be raised, exposed a man, unless he had got the consent of the superior owner of the land, to the confiscation of the property which he and his ancestors had perhaps held for centuries! If they were to be told that in those parts of Ireland in which the Ulster custom of tenant-right prevailed, and in which tenants often invested large sums of money in the improvement of their farms, it had now been found to be the law that such a tenant might be summarily ejected, and his property confiscated, if he manured his crops, or removed the weeds from his corn-fields, they might say, without any exaggeration of the fact, that such a law was less extraordinary and less unreasonable than that law which had been declared to be the law of the North-Western Provinces of India.

He would not for a moment call in question the accuracy of the conclusion as to the state of the existing law which the High Court had thus declared, and he might add, in justice to the Court, that the Judges had shown most clearly by the terms in which their judgment was worded, that they felt strongly the injustice and the inexpediency of the law which they held themselves bound to administer. While he was glad to know that after the passing of this Bill, there would be no danger of any such law being applied in Oudh, he thought that the facts which he had now noticed demanded the serious attention of the Government.

An important change had been made in that part of the Bill which related to the enhancement of the rent of tenants not having rights of occupancy. The original Bill following the practice hitherto in force in Oudh and in those Provinces to which Act No. X of 1859 was applicable, provided that when (with certain exceptions) a landlord desired to enhance the rent of a tenant, he must, before a certain date, serve a notice upon him through the tahsíldár, specifying the rent demanded and the fields in respect of which enhancement was to take place. Although the intention of these provisions was the protection of the tenant, it had been found that their actual effect had been of a very different character.

They had placed in the hands of the landlord a power of enhancing rents which he would not otherwise have exercised, and the tenant often looked on the notice served through the tahsíldár as an order of the Court that he was to pay the increased rent which had been demanded by the landlord. This procedure had been objected to on other grounds also. It often led to unnecessary and objectionable interference by the Courts between landlord and tenant in cases in which, if left to themselves, they would settle by mutual agreement the terms upon which the land was to be held. The Select Committee, in accordance with the almost unanimous opinion of the officers who were consulted, came to the conclusion that this custom of issuing notices of enhancement of rent through the tahsíldár ought to be done away with. All that was really necessary was that, when a dispute arose regarding the amount of rent to be paid by a tenant to a landlord, the Court should be able to ascertain without difficulty the terms which were actually agreed upon between the parties. Section 36 of the amended Bill provided for this difficulty. If in any suit between a landlord and a tenant not having a right of occupancy, the amount of rent payable by the tenant were disputed, the Court would assume that the tenant was liable to pay rent at the same rate which was payable for the last preceding year, unless it were shown by evidence in writing that the parties had agreed that the previous rent should be altered. This was almost equivalent to saying that an enhancement of rent must always take place under a written lease. If no arrangement could be come to between the parties, the landlord would have the remedy in his own hands by exercising his power of ejectment. A strong encouragement would thus be given to the adoption of the highly beneficial custom of giving written leases for a term of years. He (MR. STRACHEY) believed that while this change in the law would be advantageous to tenants, it would be entirely approved by the better class of landlords.

Since the Bill was introduced, an important change had been made in Chapter VI, which related to distress for arrears of rent. The result of the original proposals would have been a lawsuit in every case in which the landlord exercised the power of distraint, and the expense of this litigation could have fallen, almost invariably, on the tenant. The Bill, as it now stood, followed in regard to distress for arrears of rent, in all essential respects, the procedure of Act No. X of 1859.

A proviso had been added to section 109, to the effect that in the notification by which the Code of Civil Procedure was extended to Oudh, the words "ancestral property" should be held to include the property in land of persons admitted to engagement for the land-revenue at the Summary Settlement of 1858-59. This required explanation. For political and other reasons, the Government determined that ancestral property in land should not be sold in satisfaction of decrees of Court without the sanction of the Judicial Commissioner. In cases coming under the present Bill, the sanction of the Financial Commissioner would be necessary. But according to the orders of Lord Canning under which the sanads of the taluqdárs were granted, the property in land of an Oudh taluqdár, as he (MR. STRACHEY) explained when he introduced the Bill to define the rights of taluqdárs, was not, legally speaking, ancestral. That property depended entirely upon the gift of the British Government, and not upon any hereditary rights. Consequently, if the proviso that now added to the Bill had been omitted, the land of a taluqdár might have been sold in satisfaction of decree of a Revenue Court without the sanction of any superior authority, and thus the desire of the Government to prevent property of this description passing into the hands of strangers would have been frustrated. This defect in the law would continue to exist after the passing of this Bill in respect of the decrees of the Civil Courts.

A change had been made in section 125 which required notice. As the Bill originally stood, there was no doubt that sufficient means were not given to taluqdárs for the speedy recovery of arrears due by under-proprietors holding sub-settlements. In such cases, there could be no exercise of the power of distraint, and the taluqdár who, under the system in force in Oudh, was directly responsible for the punctual payment of the Government revenue would not always have had, under the Bill as it was formerly drawn, sufficient means of recovering from under-proprietors the arrears, on the receipt of which his power of paying that revenue might depend. The only means that he could take was the institution of suits in Court. Theoretically, the taluqdár had been protected against ultimate loss by the liability of the under-proprietor to have his tenure sold in execution of decree, but, as he had before said, there were such great difficulties in the way of thus bringing landed property to sale, that this security was really not worth much. In the interest of the Government and of the under-proprietors themselves, some further provisions were quite as necessary as they were in the interest of the taluqdár. It must be remembered that a large portion of the taluqdár's demand on the under-proprietor holding a sub-settlement consisted, in fact, of the revenue that was due to the Government, and the amount of this demand on the under-proprietor did not depend on any voluntary agreement between him and the taluqdár, but was determined by a judicial decree. The Government was therefore interested, as well as the taluqdár, in the payment of the sums due under a sub-settlement by an under-proprietor. Under these sub-settlements in Oudh, a heavier burden was ordinarily placed on the land than would be the case if the revenue were paid directly to the Government instead of to the taluqdár. Special rules had long been found necessary in the case of village communities and of proprietors dealing directly with the Government, to save them from ruin when they failed to meet the Government demand. Timely study of the causes of default was necessary, and if it was objectionable to leave such cases to the mechanical procedure of the Courts, it was not less objectionable to leave unprotected the interests of under-proprietors holding sub-settlements under taluqdárs. In the latter cases also, it was right that the causes of default should be discovered and appropriate remedies applied. The so-called rent that was paid by an under-proprietor holding a sub-settlement, differed in its nature from the rent ordinarily paid to a landlord. It was in fact, in a great measure, revenue payable to the Government, and it seemed right that it should, when necessary, be recovered as such. In this manner, while effect was given to the judicial decree of the Settlement Court, and the rights of the taluqdárs were upheld, the under-proprietor would at the same time be protected against the danger of unjust treatment on the part of the taluqdár. The Bill as it now stood gave to the Deputy Commissioner power to exercise, for the satisfaction of a decree against an under-proprietor, all the powers which he might have exercised for the recovery of an arrear of revenue.

He did not think that he need refer in detail to any of the other changes in the Bill which had been noticed in the report of the Select Committee.

Many of these were of little importance, and the rest had been explained sufficiently in the report.

He had said nothing to-day regarding those questions of tenures and of the rights of landlords and tenants which had been the subject of so much discussion. When the present Bill and the Bill to define the rights of taluqdârs in Oudh were introduced, he gave his opinion fully upon all these matters, and he thought that no useful purpose would be gained by going into them again. The merits of the policy which had been followed by His Excellency in Oudh had been, as every one knew, keenly criticized. Few Indian questions had created so much interest as these questions connected with the Province of Oudh created in their day. Experience would infallibly show hereafter whether in its main principles the policy of His Excellency was right or wrong. Having had in his hands for two years the administration of Oudh, he (MR. STRACHEY) had had as good opportunities as most men of forming an opinion on these matters. He contented himself now with repeating what he had often said before, that he believed the policy followed by His Excellency in Oudh to have been just and necessary, and in complete accordance with the real intentions of Lord Canning, and he was glad to know that he had borne a part in carrying that policy into effect.

The Hon'ble MR. MAINE said that he had seen references to the judgment of the High Court of the North-Western Provinces on which his hon'ble friend had placed so much stress, but before the present moment, he had not had an opportunity of reading it. So far as he could judge from a cursory perusal, it seemed to correspond with the description of it given by Mr. Strachey, and no doubt the Viceroy, after what had been said, would direct an enquiry to be made of the North-Western Provinces Government as to the probable effect of the decision on the status of the ryot. But he, MR. MAINE, was anxious to say that the High Court did not appear to be in the very least to blame for the law it had laid down. It avowedly based its decision partly on the general custom of the country as shown to it by evidence and authority, and partly on the wording of parts of Act X of 1859. But the Judges expressly justified their decision on the ground that they were interpreters of the law, and not legislators. He would read a passage from the judgment of the Full Bench, in which the Court indicated, as far as a Court could do so with propriety, that it doubted whether the law, which it was obliged to declare, was in accordance with good policy.

"There may, of course, be local usages forming exceptions to the general law; but we see no reason to doubt that the law is such as it is represented to us to be by the pleaders who appear for the plaintiff in this case. The law may or may not be opposed to good policy. The act of digging a well or planting a tree does not necessarily imply or assert a proprietary right in the land in which the well is dug or the tree planted. Whether it be most expedient that the tenant should be encouraged to improve his holding by all means, or that the benefits resulting from certain modes of improvement should be secured to the landlord or left to his option, may be a question, but it is one which we are not called upon to consider. The Court must recognize the law as it is found to exist, so long as it shall not be superseded by positive law, and must apply it in all cases not governed by local usages or special contract.

So also in respect of the penalty incurred by a tenant who is guilty of a breach of contract of the kind which this case brings to our notice, the unwritten law of the country must be our guide. Were we free to legislate upon the subject, it might seem to us equitable and expedient to look to the amount of injury actually caused to the landlord by the act complained of, and to grant him relief and compensation whenever possible, otherwise than by ejectment of the tenant. But it is not contended or proved that any other penalty than forfeiture of his holding for such a breach of contract is sanctioned by the law of these Provinces."

The case made strongly in favour of an opinion which he, MR. MAINE, held, and which, judging from many communications he received from learned Judges of the High Courts, he inferred that not a few of them held that, if common justice was to be secured to the masses in India, it would never to do to trust exclusively to declarations of law by Courts however dignified, but the active interposition of the Legislature was indispensably necessary.

The Hon'ble Sir H. M. DURAND said that, in signifying his general assent to this Bill, he had to observe that some of its provisions involved principles that, under ordinary circumstances, would have been open to much discussion and conflict of opinion, and which would have demanded more sifting and limitation in application, than they had here met with. The Hon'ble Mr. Maine had touched upon one such radical point when noticing the decision of the High Court to which the Hon'ble Mr. Strachey adverted, and this was by no means the only point affecting the rights of the proprietor of land, or the landlord, that might be adduced. We had, however, during the progress of this Bill so repeatedly received the assurance that its every section had the concurrence, not only of the administrative authorities in Oudh, but also specially of the talúqdárs and landlords, that this legislative enactment came before us under peculiar circumstances. Under these circumstances, namely, the primary action of the Government in this matter, the liberal concessions of the taluqdárs to meet the views of Government, and the continual assurances given by the hon'ble mover that the consent of the taluqdárs was obtained, pari passu, to every provision and section admitted into the Bill so that the latter had their entire approval, he (SIR H. M. DURAND) signed the Report of the Committee. He must add that, though occasionally prevented by other duties from attending some of the sittings of the Committee, he was enabled, by the information given him by the Secretary, Mr. Whitley Stokes, not to lose, on such occasions, the chain of its proceedings. But, though he had followed with care and interest the consideration of the provisions of this Bill, he was bound to add that what has had great weight with him in accepting the Bill was, the information derived from one enjoying in a peculiar degree the confidence of the taluqdárs. He alluded to Sir George Yule, from whom he learnt that the taluqdárs, though they regarded the Bill as drafted in a spirit adverse to their rights, and containing provisions based on the theoretical, views of a particular school, were nevertheless willing to accept the Bill, because they considered that, as a formal legislative enactment, it contained an acknowledgment of their rights, and was a solemn guarantee that would render any future invasion of those rights by succeeding Governments difficult, if not impossible.

The Hon'ble MR. COCKERELL wished to put to the hon'ble mover a question in regard to section 41. He would ask why the tenant holding on an unexpired lease had been classed with the tenant who had distinct rights of occupancy, and was made liable to ejectment only under the operation of a decree granted for that specific object? It appeared to him that all tenants were properly divisible into two classes, namely, those who had rights of occupancy, and those who had not, and that the mere lease-holder, without any distinct right of occupancy, whether the term of his lease had or had not expired, must necessarily belong to the latter class. In the amended Panjáb Tenancy Bill, the holder of an unexpired lease was classed with tenants who had no right of occupancy, and made subject to provisions precisely similar to those of Clause 1, Section 42 of this Bill. It seemed to him that in that case, the class of tenant referred to was properly dealt with, and should be similarly treated in this enactment. In other words he held that the lease-holder against whom a decree of arrears of rent had been obtained, should be liable to be ousted at his landlord's pleasure in the execution of such decree. The lease was in the nature of a contract by which the holder thereof is bound to pay a certain rent; if his rent-payments fell into arrear, he had failed to perform his part of the contract, and, as in ordinary contracts, the default of either party rendered the contract voidable. He submitted that a lease became justly cancelled by the mere fact of the holder's failure to act up to its conditions. He saw no use in the provision of section 40, that a tenant whose rent was in arrear on a certain date, might be ejected, if such ejectment could only take place after a decree for that special purpose had been sought for and obtained independently of any decree establishing the fact of the arrears of rent.

The Hon'ble MR. STRACHEY said that, if he rightly understood the question, he thought that the section required no alteration. If a tenant held under an unexpired lease, it was not proper that he should be liable to be ejected until the decree of a competent Court had declared that he was so liable in consequence of his failure to act up to the conditions of his contract.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE PRESIDENT said that it was a subject of congratulation that this Bill, which he might describe as defining the rights of the tenants in Oudh and the principles on which those rights were founded, had now been brought to so satisfactory a conclusion. Considering the circumstances under which so many of the rights and privileges of the taluqdárs had arisen—considering that these rights had been gained at the expense of the old village landed proprietors, who were now often reduced to the condition of tenants with rights of scarcely appreciable value,—the Government of India were, in HIS EXCELLENCY's opinion, bound to mediate between the tenants as a body and the taluqdárs. While he, THE PRESIDENT, admitted that in every case these claims of tenants had not received all the consideration they might have had, they had in fact obtained a great deal, and HIS EXCELLENCY entertained a hope, which he might say amounted to a conviction, that the result of the present measure would be beneficial to all classes, taluqdárs, sub-proprietors and tenants. He (THE PRESIDENT) had always felt a strong interest in the subject, and for many years he had taken a large part in all that had been done to settle the conflicting claims to which he had referred, not from any undue animus on his part against the taluqdárs, but because he thought the tenants were the weaker party, oppressed, and in former days despoiled by their landlords. All that he had done in the matter, HIS EXCELLENCY rejoiced at having done, and he was sanguine that the results anticipated by his hon'ble friend Mr. Strachey would be attained by the measure which the Council was about to pass.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. STRACHEY moved that in lieu of sections 22 and 25, the following be substituted:—

Tenants' right to compensation for improvements.

"22. If any tenant, or the person from whom he has inherited, make any such improvements on the land in his occupation as are hereinafter mentioned, the rent payable by him or his representative shall not be enhanced, nor shall he or his representative be ejected from the same land unless and until he or his representative, as the case may be, has received compensation for the outlay, in money or labour, or both, expended in making such improvements, by him, or the person from whom he has inherited, or whom he represents, within thirty years next before the date of such enhancement or ejectment.

Provision for difference as to amount or value of compensation.

25. In case of difference as to the amount or value of the compensation tendered, either party may present an application to the Court, on a paper bearing a stamp of eight annas, stating the matter in dispute and requesting a determination thereof.

Notice of such application shall be served on the other party by the proper officer, and the applicant shall pay the costs of service.

On receiving such application, the Court shall, after taking such evidence as the parties or either of them may adduce, and after such further enquiry (if any) as it may deem necessary, determine (as the case may be) the amount of the payment or the terms of the lease or both.

In determining such amount, the Court shall take into account any assistance given by the landlord, either directly in money, material or labour at the time of making such improvements, or indirectly by subsequently allowing the tenant to hold at a rate of rent more favourable than the rate at which he otherwise would have held.

The proceedings on any such application shall be deemed to be a suit for the purposes of chapter six (as to reference to arbitration) of the Code of Civil Procedure and of section nine of Act No. XXIII of 1861 (to amend Act VIII of 1859*)*."

He said that the alterations now proposed were little more than verbal. But it had been pointed out that as section 22 now stood, a tenant might claim compensation for improvements on the mere demand by his landlord of an enhanced rent, or on the receipt of a notice of ejectment, although neither the enhancement nor the ejectment might have been actually carried into effect. This would have been clearly unfair to the landlord, and nothing of the sort had been intended when the Bill was prepared, nor by the Select Committee. Doubts had also arisen whether cases under section 25 could, under the Code of Civil Procedure, be referred to arbitration. There was clearly no class of cases in which recourse to arbitration could be more generally proper, and all doubt as to the legality of this course would be removed by the amendment which he now proposed.

The Hon'ble MR. COCKERELL said that before the hon'ble mover of the Bill proceeded to put his proposed amendment of section 25, he (MR. COCKERELL) would suggest for his consideration the propriety of making a slight alteration of its present purport. In Clause 2 of the proposed amendment, it was provided that "the applicant shall pay the costs of service" (of the notice therein referred to). It was elsewhere provided in the Bill that the rules prescribed by the Civil Procedure Code should be generally applicable to proceedings under this Bill. By section 2, Act XXIII of 1861 (which formed part of the Code of Civil Procedure), it was provided as follows:—

Every process required to be issued under Act VIII of 1859 shall be served at the expense of the party at whose instance it is issued, unless otherwise specially directed by the Court; and the sum required to pay the costs of such service shall be paid into the Court before the process is issued, within a period to be fixed by the Court issuing the process.

MR. COCKERELL submitted therefore that the insertion of the words above cited was not merely unnecessary, but was calculated to limit the application of the more comprehensive provisions of the existing law in this matter, and he would for this reason propose the omission of Clause 2, and the substitution therefor of the following words to be inserted after the word "shall" in the first line of the third Clause of the same section,—"cause notice thereof to be served on the other party, and"

The Hon'ble MR. STRACHEY expressed his willingness to adopt Mr. Cockerell's suggestion.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. COCKERELL said that, with Mr. Strachey's approval, he had to propose a slight amendment of section 30. The subject of this section was to a certain extent in pari materia with that of section 25, but whereas in the case of the latter, provision had been made,—probably with regard to the difficulties known to have arisen in the determination of the proper stamp duty chargeable under the new Stamp Act on petitions and applications in suits and proceedings, the value of the subject-matter of which was undefined,—for imposing a moderate fixed stamp duty on the petition or application to be presented to the Court under that section, no such provision had been made in section 30. MR. COCKERELL moved therefore that the omission be supplied by inserting after the word "Court" in that section the following words:—"on a paper bearing a stamp of eight annas."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. STRACHEY also moved that in section 31 the words 'one month' be substituted for 'three months.'

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. STRACHEY then moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

HIS EXCELLENCY the COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF begged to offer a few words of sincere and hearty congratulation to His Excellency the Viceroy and his hon'ble friend Mr. Strachey on the completion of this great labour. He (SIR W. MANSFIELD) had abstained from taking a part in the discussion which had led to the introduction of the Bill, and in the debates which had subsequently taken place, but he had been a careful observer of all that had occurred. He now ventured to bear his humble testimony to the admirable forbearance and moderation which had been exercised by His Excellency the Viceroy and other hon'ble members of the Council in dealing with the great questions submitted to them. Without the display of those qualities, this Bill, which was the solution of those questions, could not possibly have been carried.

When the vast importance of the interests concerned is considered, it was not too much to say that the passage of this law would be deemed hereafter a bright illustration of the history of the viceregal reign, and that it would throw into the shade feats of government and policy which the public at present might consider more brilliant.

For this measure was not merely the termination of a discussion which had spread over many years,—it was not merely a resting-place in the controversy between two rival schools of English thought in the administration of India, a controversy which would probably endure as long as the principles they represented,—but it was also the settlement of a most difficult and complicated political problem which had been discussed with the earnestness certain to be seen in the management of all questions relating to property and its safeguards, and this more especially when there were many classes immediately interested in the particular question. On this occasion the classes were not less than three, that is to say, the taluqdárs, the sub-proprietors, and the tenants of the great Province of Oudh. Of these, the taluqdárs had all the advantages which position and wealth naturally gave them; and their baronial pretensions springing from the possession of landed property, and from their rank under the late native rule, had enlisted the sympathy of politicians in this country and of very important statesmen in England. The second and third classes, the sub-proprietors and the tenants, had enjoyed the benefit of the zealous protection of His Excellency the Viceroy. The contest had now happily been brought to a conclusion with the best results of a just and equitable arrangement, but he (THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF) would repeat his conviction that this conclusion could never have been attained without the exercise of extraordinary forbearance and moderation on the part of the several members of the Council, who represented different principles; and he would further add that the excellence of the measure before them was greatly due to the fact that those most interested, viz., the taluqdárs, had been personally consulted at all stages.

They sometimes heard of complaints outside of hasty or of over-legislation on the part of this Council. HIS EXCELLENCY did not share in such opinions; but it was indeed satisfactory to point to what had been done in this matter. For not only had the classes immediately concerned been consulted on every detail of the Bill; not only had every such detail been laid before them in the different forms which it successively assumed under the hand of the draftsman after the repeated consultations in Committee, but the principles which the Bill embodied had been submitted to the criticisms, and had received the approval of the ablest and most experienced authorities at home. In short, in one form or other, the discussion might be said to have lasted for seven years, a discussion not at all disproportionate to the importance of the interests and the difficulties of the questions concerned. As to how necessary law-making was now in this country, we had had ample illustration in the statements made to-day by the Hon'ble Messrs. Maine and Strachey, and to the care and satisfactory manner with which that legislation was on the whole performed by this Council, testimony had been recently borne by competent authorities in England.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

LOCK HOSPITALS' BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. MAINE, in moving for leave to introduce a Bill to enable Municipalities to provide for Lock Hospitals, said that, when the measure ultimately passed as the Indian Contagious Diseases' Act was under discussion by the Legislature at Calcutta, it was fully understood that the greatest part of the cost of bringing it into operation would fall upon the Government, particularly in places where troops were located. Still it was hoped and believed that the Municipalities would not be unwilling to contribute part of the expenses from their funds, considering the extent to which the localities administered by them were interested in the success of the measure. Since the Bill had become law, however, doubts had been expressed whether, under all or some of the existing laws regulating Municipal Government in India, the Municipal bodies could lawfully devote a part of their funds towards defraying the cost of the new machinery. It was not necessary to consider how far those doubts were well founded, but it was clearly expedient they should promptly be set at rest, and this MR. MAINE proposed to effect by the present Bill, which could enable Municipalities to contribute out of their funds to the expenses of the Contagious Diseases' Act, notwithstanding anything contained in the enactments under which they were constituted. MR. MAINE thought that no apology for a permissive measure of this kind was required. The Indian Municipalities had now power to spend money, sometimes in very large amounts, on works intended to cleanse the cities and towns under their care, and thus to relieve the population from malarious and other insalubrious influences. MR. MAINE would be the last person to say a word in disparagement of these undertakings, but those who expected most from them would probably allow that their effects on the public health would be more or less indirect and remote. It seemed then to MR. MAINE the greatest of anomalies and paradoxes that Municipalities should be able to spend without stint on such works, and yet should be debarred from disbursing a single rupee in combating, by methods perfectly direct and absolutely infallible, a disease which poisoned the very springs of life, and probably killed or destroyed its hundreds, for every one person who fell a victim to the maladies against which the works now undertaken by Municipalities were a security. The Bill would be merely an enabling Bill, and would put no compulsion on the Municipal bodies to whose good sense the matter would be left.

The Motion was put and carried.

The Hon'ble MR. MAINE applied to His Excellency the President to suspend the Rules for the Conduct of Business merely for the purpose of enabling him to introduce the Bill and secure its publication. He would not ask the Council to affirm its principle at present by referring it to a Select Committee.

The President declared the Rules suspended.

The Hon'ble MR. MAINE then introduced the Bill.

The Council then adjourned till the 29th July 1868.

ABSTRACT OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNCIL OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA, ASSEMBLED FOR THE PURPOSE OF MAKING LAWS AND REGULATIONS UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE ACT OF PARLIAMENT, 24 & 25 VIC., CAP. 67.

The Council met at Simla on Thursday, the 30th July 1868.

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, presiding.
His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, G.C.S.I., K.C.B.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. MAINE moved for leave to introduce a Bill for the appointment of Justices of the Peace. He said that the necessity for the present Bill arose from the changes which had been made in the jurisdiction of the superior Courts over European British subjects. The Council were aware that the principal function of Justices of the Peace in India was to investigate allegations against European British subjects, and, if necessary, to fine, imprison or commit them for trial to one of the High Courts. Until recently, the High Court at Fort William, on receiving a warrant from the Governor General in Council, issued commissions for the whole of the Presidency of Bengal and the places subordinate thereto and for most of the Native States, and the High Courts of Bombay and Madras similarly, on receiving warrants from the Local Government, issued commissions for their respective Presidencies and the places subordinate to them. But lately a High Court had been established in the North-Western Provinces, and a Chief Court at Lahore, and a Statute had been passed under which the Governor General in Council was empowered to declare that original criminal jurisdiction over European British subjects should be exercised by the several High Courts in such of the Non-Regulation Provinces as might from time to time be determined, and also to exercise jurisdiction in respect of Christian subjects of Her Majesty residing in the Native States. Under this Act a Notification had been issued under which Mysore and Coorg were placed under the High Court at Madras. The Justices in Mysore and Coorg would accordingly henceforth make commitments to that High Court; and a question had arisen as to whether the High Court at Fort William could any longer exercise its power to issue commissions for those Districts, and it was understood that a difference of opinion on the point existed among the learned Judges of the High Court of Fort William. It was clear that the Government of Madras had no power to issue commissions, inasmuch as Mysore and Coorg were not subordinate to that Presidency. Under these circumstances, an interposition of the legislature seemed absolutely necessary, and if the Council would give him leave to introduce the Bill, they would find that it would settle the matter on the simple basis that commissions for Justices of the Peace should, in future, be issued in all cases by the Court to which they committed. The law on the subject of the issue and supersession of commissions to Justices, and to the administration of their oaths of office, was in a somewhat dispersed condition, and the opportunity would be taken of consolidating the seven enactments in which that law was now contained.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

EUROPEAN VAGRANCY BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. MAINE moved for leave to introduce a Bill to provide against European vagrancy. He said that the papers on the subject had been for some time before the Council, and on the present occasion, if his motion were agreed to, he proposed merely to ask His Excellency the President to suspend the Rules in order that the Bill might be introduced and published.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. MAINE applied to His Excellency the President to suspend the Rules for the Conduct of Business.

The President declared the Rules suspended.

The Hon'ble MR. MAINE then introduced the Bill. He said that the Statement of Objects and Reasons which had for some time been in the hands of members, and which would be published with the Bill, not only described the Bill, but was a condensation of the numerous papers which had been received on the subject. He did not propose to ask the Council to affirm the principle of the Bill by referring it to a Select Committee until they re-assembled at Calcutta.

The Council adjourned till the 6th August 1868.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

EUROPEAN VAGRANCY.

From the Reverend J. R. BALDWIN, Honorary Secretary to the Allahabad District Charitable Association, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department,—dated 4th February 1868.

You did me the honor, at the end of the year 1865, to ask for a report upon the management of the Relief Society of this station, and for an explanation of the principle and practice established here by me.

In reply to your communication, I sent you a letter detailing the scheme in operation and some of the results so far as they could be stated after so short a period of experiment as one year.

In the concluding paragraph of that letter, I ventured to suggest that the scheme of relief first established at Allahabad, and afterwards, by order of Government, recommended for general adoption in other large places, although perfect as far as the individual stations adopting it were concerned, required, for its complete success, that other measures should be taken at the Presidency town to which, by the natural action of the Mofussil relieving societies, vagrancy gravitated.

The other measures which I considered necessary were the introduction of the Vagrancy Act and the more stringent enforcement of Act XXV. of 1861, Chap. XIX., Sections 295, 298, and 301, the establishment on a large scale of a House of Industry, as well as greater facility for shipping men to England or the countries from whence they come.

At the expiration of three years of trial and experience, I have obtained, by a careful investigation and record of every case which has come before me, a mass of information which, I believe, may be useful to the Government, and confirms me in the opinions which I have already expressed as to the imperative necessity for other measures to prevent the increase of vagrancy, and to provide, as far as may be, a remedy against its evils.

Before I enter upon an analysis of the statistics which I have obtained, it may be as well to recapitulate briefly the scheme established at Allahabad, which is adopted, more or less entirely, in other large stations of this Presidency

The principle on which relief is here given is, that every needy European out of employ is entitled to receive at the hands of his fellow-countrymen the common necessaries of life, and such help as shall enable him to seek for other employment, care being taken that the aid most suitable shall be afforded with the least risk of abuse.

In accordance with this plan, a large serai has been placed at my disposal (by G. Ricketts, Esquire, the Magistrate and Collector of Allahabad, to whose assistance and co-operation I am much indebted) for travellers, each room containing a bed and a chair.

Superintendent (European).	Bhistee.
Assistant	Sweeper.
Khitmutgar	Dhobee and Barber.
Cook.	Two Chowkeedars.
Cook's boy.

For the proper discipline of the serai (known as "the Strangers' Home"), there is an establishment as marginally noted.

By this establishment travellers are supplied with food, according to a scale somewhat less liberal than a soldier's rations, at contract rate of six annas per man per diem.

In connection with this home, there is a European civil hospital, also supported by the District Charitable Association.

All Europeans and Eurasians on arrival in the station afternoon, or on Sunday, are allowed free quarters and food for the day, after which they must apply to the Secretary, who makes a record of their case and grants the necessary relief.

Should there be any probability of their obtaining employment in the station, they are allowed to remain some days in the serai, and failing to get work, are provided with a ticket for the rail, with another for refreshments on the way to Mogul Serai, Jumalpore, or Calcutta, according to circumstances.

No Europeans are as a rule allowed to go up-country. To none is money given, but none are sent away without some relief.

It was confidently stated, prior to the establishment of this scheme, that such a rest-house as is here described would encourage and promote the evil which it was intended to remove. This has not been the case.

By the co-operation of the residents, and their steady refusal to give any money at the doors, relief has been strictly confined to food and railway refreshment tickets, so that the applicants have only cost in food the very small sum of Rs. 4-9 per annum, whereas, by the old system of giving money grants, each vagrant obtained from the Secretary on an average Rs. 7-4, besides the very large amount which he was able to gather by house-to-house solicitation. It will thus be evident that, if at each large station, a man could obtain no more than his food and transport, the lucrativeness of the profession would be gone, and the inducement to beg would be removed.

In order to arrive at this desirable result, an establishment has to be retained which raises the cost of each vagrant about Rs. 4, or to Rs. 8-2 as an average. This must be considered an enormous gain. It is a gain primarily to the station which adopts this plan, as by a small general subscription, vagrants can be supported at Rs. 8 per man per annum, while the residents are relieved from the annoyance of sturdy and often dangerous professional beggars; and it is a gain to the community at large as the means of demoralization, which the promiscuous giving of alms furnishes, are thus cut off.

The number of vagrants relieved is as follows:—

In 1864	410
„ 1865	119
„ 1867	183

Understanding that the Government were desirous of obtaining information on the subject of vagrancy generally, I have made an analysis of the different trades or callings of these men as recorded in my register. It gives the following returns, which, I apprehend, may serve to characterize the whole body of vagrants in India, since the applicants who pass under my scrutiny do, as a rule, visit every relieving Officer on their route:—

Sailors	135	Railway employés ...	84
Adventurers ...	115	Eurasians	47
Soldiers	88	Australians	19

Some very important conclusions may be deduced from these statistics.

The first is that the army of loafers is continually being fed from the seaports. Nearly all, viz., sailors, adventurers, and Australians (in all 269) have landed in this country of their own free will, and for the most part without character, without money, and as a mere speculation.

I feel sure that I am not far from the mark when I say that 75 per cent. of those who come before me are, by their own admission (often roughly extorted, and reluctantly given), confirmed drunkards, or men who have lost their employment in consequence of intemperance. I do not think it even probable, from what I know of this class of men, that they will (so long as they remain in this country) obtain employment, or if they do obtain a situation be able to keep it longer than a few months. I am confirmed in this opinion by the statements of the career of these men, the certificates they sometimes produce for short periods of service, and the fact that so many of them appear several times in the register book as applicants for relief.

1st.—The sailors are as a rule persons of bad habits, without certificates of discharge, who have, by their own confession, deserted from their ships, and are either making their way to Bombay, or hoping to obtain employment on the Railway, or have hopelessly settled down into dissipated habits as loafers.

2nd.—The class styled adventurers are persons other than sailors, soldiers, or men who have come from Australia, who have worked their passage out from home, or from the Colonies, to escape apprehension for crimes committed there, or allured by the prospects held out of a land whose gold is good, and where the black man works that the white man may be at ease. As a rule, they have no character nor recommendation, have held and lost numerous situations, and are utterly demoralized.

Altogether they make a very formidable class, and one which, considering the paucity and inefficiency of the Police, we are quite incompetent to provide for or restrain in their injurious and dishonest dealings with the Natives.

3rd.—The third class in this group, which I have called Australians, are men who have come from the Colonies chiefly in charge of horses. They are, for the most part, a set of men of bad characters.

It may be observed that, in the second group, there are two classes who have held honest and profitable situations in the country, and have lost them generally by intemperance.

These are men who have been in the Army or in Railway employ.

Of soldiers who have taken their discharge, with a certificate of employment, there are 88.

Of men who have been dismissed from Railway employ, 115.

It is sad to see the loss and hopeless condition of some of the men who come before me. Some painfully confess that, by their own folly, they have lost themselves, and induced habits which prevent their re-employment, and would gladly re-enlist, or do anything to keep themselves from starvation. Others again, more demoralized still, seem scarcely to feel the degradation of their condition, and too idle to dig, but not ashamed to beg, pass on from one relief society to another, robbing the Natives, and plundering their comrades in order to gratify their love of liquor. The story of a loafer, as told by one of themselves, is truly pathetic, and shows how rapid in this country is the descent from honest industry and independence to ruinous idleness under the terrible influence of drink. Some of these men, whom intemperance has deprived of first one and then another situation, worn out at length with the heat and fatigue, gradually sink into a state of carelessness as to the present, and despair as to the future, and pass their time between Calcutta and Bombay, with long visits to the various hospitals and jails en route during the hot weather.

With this evidence before me of the state of vagrancy in India, I venture to conclude these remarks by some suggestions which I am convinced would, if carried out, palliate, if not entirely remove, this growing evil.

When I speak of this as "an evil," I am not thinking of it merely in its effect upon society, but also as regards the injury which the permission and continuance of it is to the men themselves.

There are three measures urgently required, without which it will be impossible to check vagrancy in India, and a consideration of the two groups brought under your notice will, I think, show clearly the importance of their adoption.

In the first are those who are supplied from the sea-ports—

1st— { Sailors.
Australians.
Adventurers. }

In the second, those who are entertained and discharged in this country—

2nd— { Soldiers.
Railway employés. }

As regards the first group, consisting of sailors, Australians, and adventurers generally, it seems to me that but one remedy will suffice, namely, to prevent absolutely their going up the country.

This might be done by the introduction of a system of passports, which should be given to no man on landing who cannot give some account of himself, and has not some means or some tangible promise of employment. No ships should be allowed to land adventurers of this class, nor any ship masters to discharge their men at any of the sea-port towns without finding their passage back again.

This plan could only be carried out slowly and gradually, and notifications should be issued to English and Colonial Shipping Masters that if they bring out adventurers, they do it on their own responsibility and at their own cost, and that they cannot ship men for the outward voyage only to be cast adrift in India without finding them a passage home.

This passport system could be carried out by the River Police meeting every ship as it anchored, and stopping every adventurer who could not give a good and satisfactory account of himself.

I am not unaware that it will be objected that any such system would be an infringement of the principles of political economy and of the rights of the subject. I answer that India is not ripe for the introduction in their integrity of all the crude notions that now go by the name of the laws of political economy, while I cannot but think that the permission to allow a number of worthless adventurers to land in a country where need of supervisors is small, and English manual labour almost unknown, temptations manifold, the climate unsuitable to colonization, and the Police few and inefficient, is a greater evil and an infringement of the rights and liberties of the residents who must support these vagabonds, and protect themselves as best they can from their incursions.

So that until some organization is introduced to stop the importation of adventurers, vagrancy will continue.

The second group to which I have referred consists of those who have once had employment in this country, but have, by their own misconduct, lost it,—soldiers and railway employés.

Of the number of soldiers who obtain their discharge yearly, the large proportion, 88, have appeared before me within this period. The remedy for this would be that either the discharge should be refused altogether to the soldier to remain in India, in consequence of its exceptional character as a Colony, or that it should be granted with less readiness than at present.

Almost any man who has saved Rs. 200 can now, on the strength of a mere promise of employment, obtain his discharge, and my experience shows me that once released from the restraints of discipline, the very best soldiers often fall.

It could be no injustice to a soldier if, at the time of his enlisting, he was distinctly informed that no discharge could be granted in India, and that, on the purchase of his discharge or expiration of his term of service, he would be landed in the place where he enlisted.

It is by no means an uncommon thing for a man to enlist for the very purpose of coming out to India, by which he obtains his passage out at the cost of his discharge, or for rather more than Rs. 200. It would certainly repay the Government to double the price of discharges in India, and thus throw increased difficulty in the way of the soldiers taking a step fraught with ruin,—the sad commencement of a downward course.

It will be evident that, if discharges were either impossible in India, or only to be obtained with great difficulty, the Railway Company would be obliged, in self-defence, to adopt another plan for obtaining their servants.

At first these servants came out covenanted for a term of years, with passage home promised. These men were of a highly respectable class, and seldom appear among the number of vagrants.

The system was found to be expensive, and as the Railway Company discovered that they could always get servants in the country without giving them a covenant, they have abolished it.

Railway Guards are largely supplied from the Army; the Engine-drivers and Stokers from the sailors. We understand that the number of applicants for employment is greatly in excess of the vacancies.

It is clear that, if the supply of unemployed men at the sea-ports was cut off, and discharges in India discontinued, the Railway Companies would be compelled to fall back upon the former system of employing covenanted men which in every way, except in the matter of expense, seems to have been better than the present one.

The employment of more covenanted men, and the discouragement of adventurers, would effect a decrease in vagrancy in India, for I find that almost every applicant for relief states his expectation of finding employment on the Railroad, and I am sure that this hope draws many from England, the Colonies, and America.

Having considered the remedies which appear to me to be necessary for the prevention of vagrancy in India, with reference to the two great sources of their supply, namely, 1st, adventurers, 2nd, those who have been employed and discharged in the country, it is necessary now to turn our attention to the very important question of the best mode of dealing with the evil as it exists at present.

I will suppose then what I hope yet to see that relieving societies, such as I have described, have been established all over India, and that, as a necessary result of sending vagrants to the sea-ports, the Presidency towns have become full of them. We have now to consider what is to be done with the loafer when we have driven him to the sea-port, and compelled to him to take up his abode there.

It is in the large Presidency towns only where there are European Police that the vagrant can be restrained from doing injury to others, or be himself taken care of. Driven to Calcutta by the system described above, he too often begs to drink and drink to die.

What is required is a measure to prevent him from begging, and some plan to recover the drunkard, and induce in him industrious habits.

For the first, the introduction of a new Vagrancy Act, or the more careful and rigorous enforcement of the present Penal Code, might become advisable. I need not dwell on this any further than to say that, unless men can be prevented from begging, it is almost hopeless to endeavor to reclaim them. I leave this to the consideration of the Legislature, and pass on to the second measure necessary to the reclamation of the vagrant and the drunkard.

There should be in every Presidency town a House of Industry, which should include in its system the punishment, correction, and reformation of the various classes of vagrants, and a rest-house for poor travellers seeking for employment.

The vagrants by a little care and discrimination might be divided into classes according to their characters and antecedents, work should be obligatory for all; but some might be allowed to go out once a week or oftener to seek employment, and have light work allotted to them; others should not be allowed to go out, except once a month, with somewhat heavier work; while the worthless and confirmed drunkards and vagrants should not be allowed to go out more than once a quarter, and compelled to harder work.

If the law against vagrancy were properly carried out, there ought to be no escape from the House of Industry.

This system should not be rendered too severe, as the climate and confinement are in themselves a considerable punishment; nor, on the other hand, should any laxity of discipline or indulgence be permitted, except in the cases of the well-behaved. Part of the labor profit might be returned either to send them home, provide them with clothes, or set them up in trade, &c.

An experiment has been made in America, and I am led to believe with the best result, by which confirmed drunkards have been reclaimed.

The experiment consists in an asylum where inebriates are placed under strict supervision and confinement, with light and constant employment for mind and body, for a period of six months, during which time they are carefully dieted and placed under medical treatment.

The following prescription is the medicine which is principally relied upon for the cure of that internal craving for drink which constitutes the disease :—

Sulphate of iron	...	5 grains	Twice a day.
Magnesia ...	...	10 „
Peppermint ...	...	11 drachms
Spirit of nutmeg	...	1 „

There does not appear to be any sound reason why, under careful medical supervision, this terrible failing should not be conquered, and no greater benefit could be conferred by the Government than the establishment of a House of Industry, where, under proper control, care and kindness, habits of industry, method, sobriety, and honesty, might be induced in those who are now a disgrace to us and sorrow to themselves.

The establishment of this House of Industry should include Superintendent, Overseers of Work, School-master, and Chaplain, who might be one of the Governors.

The combined moral, intellectual, and physical influence of this system ought to palliate, if it cannot remove, the evil of vagrancy; and should the Government consider that my services might be of use in this matter, I should be glad to give my aid to so important an undertaking.

Could you see the sad sights which, day by day, come before me, of poor men whom misery and misfortune have almost driven to despair, and who have with difficulty retained, amid their sorrow, integrity of character and self-respect; of good hearted men in whose faces I read the struggle that has taken place, and is taking place, between what they know to be right and the vicious course which trouble and temptation drive them to adopt; and, lastly, of the worthless and demoralized who, dead to all sense of shame, with bleared eyes, blotched face, shaggy hair, and tattered clothes, are victims of an evil passion, terrible as that of demons; could you see these heart-rending sights, you would agree with me that something should be done to meet so great an evil, and pardon the earnest advocacy of this letter.

P. S.—It might be objected that other stations, especially the smaller ones, have not the same facilities for giving relief according to the plan adopted at Allahabad, the objection is the fence of indifference or indolence. The principle of relief there given, namely, of food instead of money, and that by a central office, rather than by many donors, is as practicable in a small station as in a large one.

Let the Magistrate or Police Officer collect from the residents of the station subscriptions to form a monthly relief fund; let all vagrants be sent to that Officer; let an arrangement be made with the khansamah of the Native serai or of the dâk bungalow to give food and a charpoy for a day or days on the presentation of a perwanah from the relieving Officer; let his passage be paid, not to the vagrant, but to the Station Master, Dâk or Bullock Train Agent, and we may rest assured that but few vagrants will visit a station where charity is so wisely but cautiously administered.

An Act to consolidate and amend the Law relating to Rent in Oudh.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to rent in Oudh and to other matters connected therewith; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

Short title and extent of Act.

1. This Act may be cited as "The Oudh Rent Act," and shall extend only to Oudh.

Repeal of laws, &c.

2. All laws, orders having the force of law and rules in force in Oudh, inconsistent with any of the provisions of this Act, are repealed.

Interpretation clause.

3. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context—

"Oudh." "Oudh" means the territories under the administration of the Chief Commissioner of Oudh at the time of the passing of this Act:

"Court." "Court" means any judicial officer presiding in a Court of revenue for the disposal of matters under this Act:

"Suit." "Suit" means a suit under this Act:

"Assistant Commissioner." "Assistant Commissioner" includes an Extra Assistant Commissioner:

"Land." "Land" applies only to land assessed to the land-revenue, and includes land whereof the revenue has been assigned by Government: it also includes the ungathered produce of land, whether spontaneous or otherwise, and whether growing in earth or water:

"Revenue." "Revenue" means the money payable to the Government on account of land:

"Rent." "Rent" means the money or the portion of the produce of land, payable on account of the use or occupation of land, or on account of the use of water for irrigation:

"Proprietor." "Proprietor" does not include an under-proprietor. Where there are two private rights of property, one superior and the other subordinate, in the same land, "proprietor" means the holder of the superior right only:

"Proprietary right." "Proprietary right" means a proprietor's right in land:

"Under-proprietor." "Under-proprietor" means any person possessing a heritable and transferable right of property in land for which he is liable to pay rent:

"Under-proprietary right." "Under-proprietary right" means an under-proprietor's right in land:

"Tenant." "Tenant" means any person, not being an under-proprietor, who is liable to pay rent:

"Landlord." "Landlord" means any person to whom an under-proprietor or tenant is liable to pay rent:

"Representative." "Representative" means an heir or any other person taking by operation of law or by will a beneficial interest in the property of a deceased person. It includes the guardian of a minor and the legal curator of a lunatic or idiot: and

"Lumberdár." "Lumberdár" means any person who has executed an engagement for the payment of the revenue to Government, or for the payment to a landlord of the rent due from under-proprietors holding a sub-settlement.

Saving of written agreements.

4. Nothing in sections 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25 and 28 shall affect the terms of any agreement in writing heretofore or hereafter entered into respecting the subject-matter of the said sections respectively.

Index not to have force of law.

Nothing in the Index to this Act shall be deemed to have the force of law.

CHAPTER II.

OF CERTAIN RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF LANDLORDS, UNDER-PROPRIETORS AND TENANTS.

Right of Occupancy.

Tenants having a right of occupancy.

5. Tenants who have lost all proprietary right, whether superior or subordinate, in the lands which they hold or cultivate, shall, so long as they pay the rent payable for the same according to the provisions of this Act, have a right of occupancy under the following rule :—

Rule.

Every such tenant, who, within thirty years next before the thirteenth day of February 1856, has been, either by himself, or by himself and some Compensation for Tenants' Improvements.

Tenants' right to compensation for improvements.

22. If any tenant, or the person from whom he has inherited, make any such improvements on the land in his occupation as are hereinafter mentioned, the rent payable by him or his representative shall not be enhanced, nor shall he or his representative be ejected from the same land unless and until he or his representative, as the case may be, has received compensation for the outlay, in money or labour, or both, expended in making such improvements, by him, or the person from whom he has inherited, or whom he represents, within thirty years next before the date of such enhancement or ejectment.

"Improvements" defined.

23. The word "improvements," as used in section 22, means works by which the annual letting value of the land has been, and, at the time of demanding compensation continues to be, increased, and comprises—

1*st*.—The construction of works for the storage of water, for the supply of water for agricultural purposes, for drainage, and for protection against floods; the construction of wells; the reclaiming and clearing of waste lands and jungles; and other works of a like nature;

2*nd*.—The renewal or reconstruction of any of the foregoing works, or such alterations therein or additions thereto, as are not required for maintaining the same, and which increase durably their value.

Compensation how made.

24. Such compensation may, at the option of the landlord or his representative, be made—

(1.)—By payment in money;

(2.)—By the grant of a beneficial lease of the land by the landlord or his representative to the tenant or his representative; or

(3.)—Partly by payment in money and partly by the grant of such lease as aforesaid.

Provision for difference as to amount or value of compensation.

25. In case of difference as to the amount or value of the compensation tendered, either party may present an application to the Court, on a paper bearing a stamp of eight annas, stating the matter in dispute and requesting a determination thereof.

On receiving such application the Court shall cause notice thereof to be served on the other party, and, after taking such evidence as the parties or either of them may adduce, and after such further enquiry (if any) as it may deem necessary, determine (as the case may be) the amount of the payment or the terms of the lease or both.

In determining such amount, the Court shall take into account any assistance given by the landlord, either directly in money, material or labour at the time of making such improvements, or indirectly by subsequently allowing the tenant to hold at a rate of rent more favourable than the rate at which he otherwise would have held.

The proceedings on any such application shall be deemed to be a suit for the purposes of chapter six (as to reference to arbitration) of the Code of Civil Procedure, and of section nine of Act No. XXIII of 1861, (to amend Act VIII of 1859.

Tender of lease for twenty years to bar right to compensation for improvements.

26. If in any case a landlord tenders to a tenant a lease of the land in his occupation, for a term of not less than twenty years from the date of the tender, at the annual rent then paid by the tenant, or at such other annual rent as may be agreed upon, such tender, if accepted by the tenant, shall bar any claim by him or his representative in respect of improvements previously made on such land by the tenant or the person from whom he has inherited.

Survey and Measurement.

Landlord's right to enter and measure lands.

27. Every landlord, his agents and surveyors, may at all reasonable times enter upon any land comprised in his estate for the purpose of surveying and measuring the same.

CHAPTER III.

COMMUTATION AND PAYMENT OF RENT IN KIND.

Commutation of rents in kind.

28. In any district in which a settlement of revenue is in progress, it shall be in the discretion of any officer employed in making or revising such settlement, in any case in which the rent of a tenant having a right of occupancy is paid in kind, or by the estimated value of a portion of the crop, to commute, on the application either of the landlord or the tenant, such rent into a rent in money.

The amount of rent thus fixed shall be binding upon the parties concerned.

All decisions already passed by any such officer, commuting rents in kind or by valuation to rents in money, shall, subject to the same appeal as is given by this Act in respect of decisions passed in suits, be binding on the parties concerned.

Chief Commissioner may extend section 28, and declare officers to hear and decide cases thereunder.

29. The Chief Commissioner of Oudh may extend the provisions of section 28 to any district or portion of a district in which a settlement of revenue is not in progress; and may declare what officers are empowered to hear and decide cases under this section;

and may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General of India in Council, make rules for the guidance of officers acting under this section and section 28, and from time to time, with the like sanction, alter and add to the rules so made:

Provided that such rules, alterations and additions are consistent with this Act.

Division or appraisement of produce taken for rent.

30. Wherever rent is taken by division of the produce in kind, or by estimate or appraisement of the standing crop or other procedure of a similar nature requiring the presence both of the tenant and landlord either personally or by a recognized agent, if either party neglect to be present at the proper period, or if a dispute arise between the parties regarding such division, estimate, or appraisement, either party may present an application to the Court on a paper bearing a stamp of eight annas, requesting that a proper officer be deputed to make the division, estimate, or appraisement.

Procedure in case of dispute.

31. On receiving such application, the Court shall issue a written notice to the other party to attend on the date and at the place specified in the notice, and shall depute an officer before whom the division, estimate or appraisement shall be made.

The award of such officer in respect of such division, estimate or appraisement shall be final, unless within one month from the date thereof, either party institutes a suit to set it aside.

CHAPTER IV.

ENHANCEMENT AND FIXING RATES OF RENT.

A.—Tenants with Right of Occupancy.

Enhancement of rent of tenant with right of occupancy.

32. No tenant having a right of occupancy in any land shall, in case of dispute as to the rent to be paid in respect of such land, be liable to an enhancement of the rent except in pursuance of a decree made under this Act on some one of the following grounds (that is to say):

1st Ground.—That the rate of rent paid by him is below the rate of rent usually paid by the same class of tenants having a right of occupancy for land of a similar description, and with similar advantages, situate in the same village.

Rule.—In this case the Court shall enhance his rent to such amount as the plaintiff demands, not exceeding such rate.

2nd Ground.—That the rate of rent paid by him is more than 12½ per cent. below the rate of rent usually paid by tenants of the same class not having a right of occupancy for land of a similar description, and with similar advantages, situate in the same village.

Rule.—In this case the Court shall enhance his rent to such amount as the plaintiff demands, not exceeding such rate less 12½ per cent.

3rd Ground.—That the quantity of land held by him exceeds the quantity for which he has previously paid rent.

Rule.—In this case the Court shall decree rent for the land in excess at rates to be fixed by the first or the second of the Rules contained in this section, as the case may be.

Nothing contained in the previous part of this section shall affect the terms of any agreement in writing hereafter entered into between a landlord and tenant.

Term for re-enhancement, after decision fixing rent under section 32.

33. After a decision has been passed in accordance with section 32, no suit shall lie for re-enhancement of such rent until the expiration of five years from the date of such decision, except on the said third ground, or, in the case referred to in section 34, until by re-assessment, within the said term of five years, the revenue of such land has been increased.

Enhancement on re-assessment of revenue.

34. On such re-assessment, if the rent of such tenant cannot be enhanced under section 32, by reason of the absence of the grounds therein mentioned, the landlord may institute a suit to enhance the rent to a sum not exceeding double the average amount of the revenue imposed at such re-assessment upon land of a similar description and with similar advantages, held by tenants of the same class in the same village.

B.—Tenants not having Right of Occupancy.

Court not to enquire into propriety of rate of rent payable by tenant not having right of occupancy.

35. The Court shall in no case enquire into the propriety of the rate of rent payable by a tenant not having a right of occupancy.

The rent payable by such tenant for any land in his occupation shall be such amount as may be agreed upon between him and the landlord; or, if no such agreement has been made, such amount as was payable for the land in the last preceding year.

Suits in which there is evidence in writing of agreement to alter rent.

36. If in any suit between a landlord and a tenant not having a right of occupancy, the amount of rent payable by such tenant shall be disputed, he shall not be held liable to pay rent other than that payable by him for the last preceding year, unless the Court is satisfied by evidence in writing that the parties have agreed that the rent so payable shall be altered.

CHAPTER V.

EJECTMENT.

General Provisions.

Grounds on which tenant may contest liability to ejectment.

37. A tenant may contest his liability to be ejected from the land which he holds on any of the following grounds:—

First.—That he holds a lease or an agreement, or a decree of Court, under the terms of which he is not liable to such ejectment:

Second.—That he has a right of occupancy in the land:

Third.—And if he be a tenant not having a right of occupancy, that notice of ejectment has not been served upon him in manner provided by section 43.

Time of ejectment of tenant.

38. No tenant, except a sub-lessor, shall in any case, whether in execution of a decree or otherwise, be ejected from the land in his occupancy, except between the first day of April and the fifteenth day of June in any year after the passing of this Act; unless while his rent is in arrear, he has failed to cultivate the land in his possession in accordance with the terms on which he holds it.

Time of ejectment of sub-lessor.

39. A sub-lessor liable to be ejected under the provisions of this Act may be ejected at any time during his tenancy.

Ejectment for arrears of rent.

40. Any tenant, other than a sub-lessor, from whom an arrear of rent remains due on the fifteenth day of May in any year after the passing of this Act, and any sub-lessor from whom an arrear of rent remains due at any time during his tenancy may, subject to the provisions of sections 38, 39 and 41, be ejected from the land in respect of which the arrear is due.

Tenant with Right of Occupancy.

Ejectment of tenant having a right of occupancy.

41. No tenant having a right of occupancy, or holding under an unexpired lease, or special agreement, or decree of Court, shall be ejected otherwise than in execution of a decree for ejectment.

Provided that if the tenant have a right of occupancy in the land from which the landlord desires to eject him, the decree shall not be made unless at the date of the decree a decree against such tenant for an arrear of rent in respect of such land has remained unsatisfied for fifteen days or upwards.

Tenant without Right of Occupancy.

Ejectment of tenant not having a right of occupancy.

42. A tenant not having a right of occupancy and not holding under an unexpired lease or an agreement or a decree of Court, may be ejected in accordance with the provisions of this Act; first, in execution of a decree for arrears of rent or for ejectment; or second, by notice given by his landlord in the manner described in section 43.

Notice.

Notice of ejectment of tenant not having right of occupancy.

43. The notice mentioned in section 42 shall be written in Hindí and in Urdu: it shall specify the land from which the tenant is to be ejected; and it shall inform him that if he means to dispute the ejectment, he must institute a suit for that purpose on or before the fifteenth day of May next after the service of the notice, or vacate the land on or before that date.

Service of Notice.

On the application of the landlord to the Tahsíldár, or officer authorized to serve such notices, the notice shall be served by such officer on or before the fifteenth day of April in each year, and the landlord shall pay the costs of service.

The notice shall, if practicable, be served personally on the tenant. But if he cannot be found, service may be made by affixing the notice at his usual place of residence, or, if he does not reside in the district wherein the land is situate, at the village chaupál or other conspicuous place in the village wherein the land is situate.

Cessation of Tenancy.

If notice is not contested, tenancy to be held to cease.

44. If the tenant on whom such notice of ejectment has been served, fails to institute a suit to contest his liability to be ejected on or before the fifteenth day of May next after the service, his tenancy of the land in respect of which the notice has been served shall be held to cease on that date, unless, after the service, the landlord has expressly authorized him to continue to occupy the land.

Assistance to eject.

When assistance to eject may be given by Court.

45. If no such suit be brought, and the landlord require the assistance of the Court to eject any person whose tenancy is alleged to have ceased under the provisions of section 44, he may apply for such assistance, and if the Court is satisfied that notice of ejectment was duly served on such person, it shall give such assistance accordingly:

Provided that nothing done by the Court under the previous part of this section shall affect the right of any tenant to institute a suit against his landlord on account of illegal ejectment and to recover compensation for the same.

Growing Crops.

Compensation to ejected tenant for growing crops.

46. Any tenant ejected in accordance with the provisions of this Act, shall be entitled to receive from the landlord the value of any growing crops or other ungathered products of the earth belonging to such tenant, and being on the land at the time of his ejectment:

Provided that if the land shall have been sown or planted by the tenant after the service on him of the notice mentioned in section 42, he shall not be so entitled unless, after such service, the landlord has expressly authorized him to continue to occupy the land.

CHAPTER VI.

DISTRESS FOR ARREARS OF RENT.

Recovery of arrears of rent by distress.

47. When an arrear of rent is due from any tenant, the landlord may distrain the produce of the land in respect of which the arrear is due, subject to the rules contained in the following sections:

Proviso as to tenants who have given security for payment of rent.

Provided that when a tenant has given security for the payment of his rent, the produce of the land in respect of which such rent is payable, shall not be liable to distress so long as the security is in force.

No distress in certain cases.

48. Distress shall not be made for any arrear which has been due for a longer period than one year; nor for the recovery of any sum in excess of the rent payable in the last preceding year for the land in respect of which the arrear is due, unless the tenant has agreed in writing to pay such excess, or unless he has been declared to be liable for the same by a decree of Court.

Power of distress by whom exercisable.

49. The power of distress, vested by section 47 in landlords, may be exercised by managers under the Court of Wards, managing agents and tahsíldárs of estates held under khám management, and other persons lawfully entrusted with the charge of land, and also by the agents employed by landlords or any such persons as aforesaid in the collection of rent if expressly authorized by power of attorney to distrain:

Liability of principal of agent.

Provided that, if any such agent, purporting to act in the exercise of the said power, commits an act, which, under the provisions of this chapter, is illegal, the person employing such agent shall be liable, as well as the agent, to be sued for compensation for any injury caused by such act.

Distress by servants.

50. Any person empowered to distrain property under section 47 or 49, may employ a servant or other person to make the distress; but in every such case he shall give to such servant or person a written authority for the same, and the distress shall be made in the name and on the responsibility of the person giving such authority.

Crops liable to distress.

51. Standing crops and other ungathered products of the earth, and crops or other products when reaped or gathered and deposited in any threshing-floor or place for treading out grain or the like, whether in the field or within a homestead, may be distrained by persons invested with powers of distress under this Act.

But no such crops or products, other than the produce of the land in respect of which an arrear of rent is due, or of land held under the same agreement, as the land in respect of which the arrear is due, and no grain or other produce after it has been stored by the cultivator, and no other property whatsoever, shall be liable to distress under this Act.

Demand of arrear before or at time of distress.

52. Before or at the time when any distress is made under this Act, the distrainer shall cause the defaulter to be served with a written demand for the amount of the arrear, together with an account exhibiting the grounds on which the demand is made.

The demand and account shall, if practicable, be served personally on the defaulter, but if he cannot be found, they shall be affixed at his usual place of residence, and shall thereupon be deemed to be duly served upon him.

Value of distress.

53. Unless the amount of the demand is immediately paid or tendered, the distrainer may distrain property as aforesaid of value as nearly as may be equal to the amount of the arrear with the costs of the distress; and shall prepare a list or description of the said property, and deliver a copy of the same to the owner, or if he be absent, affix it at his usual place of residence.

Service of list of property to be distrained.

Reaping and storing standing crops when distrained.

54. Standing crops and other ungathered products of the earth may, notwithstanding the distress, be reaped or gathered by the tenant, and may be stored in such granaries or other places as are commonly used by him for the purpose.

If the tenant neglect to do so, the distrainer may cause the said crops or products to be reaped or gathered, and, in such case, shall store the same either in such granaries or other places as aforesaid, or in some other convenient place in the neighbourhood.

In either case, the distrained property shall be placed in the charge of some proper person appointed by the distrainer for the purpose.

If the crops or products do not, from their nature, admit of being stored, the distress shall be made (if at all) at least twenty days before the time when the crops or products or any part thereof would ordinarily be fit for cutting or gathering.

Application by distrainer in case of resistance.

55. If a distrainer is opposed, or apprehends resistance, and desires to obtain the assistance of a public officer, he may apply to the Court, and the Court may, if it think necessary, depute an officer to assist the distrainer in making the distress.

Withdrawal of distress on tender of arrear and costs.

56. If at any time after property has been distrained as aforesaid, and before the sale thereof as hereinafter provided, the owner tenders payment of the arrear demanded and of the costs of the distress, the distrainer shall receive the same, and give a receipt therefor, and shall forthwith withdraw the distress.

Application for sale.

57. Within five days from the time of storing any distrained crops or products, or if such crops or products do not, from their nature, admit of being stored, within five days from the time of making the distress, the distrainer shall apply for sale of the same to the proper officer authorized to sell property in satisfaction of decrees of the Court within whose jurisdiction the distrained property is situate.

Form of application.

58. The application shall be in writing: it shall contain a list or description of the property distrained, and it shall state the name of the defaulter, his place of residence, the amount due, and the place in which the distrained property is deposited.

Together with the application, the distrainer shall deliver to the proper officer the sum payable for the service of a notice upon the defaulter as hereinafter provided.

Procedure on receipt of application.

59. Immediately on receipt of the application, the proper officer shall send a copy of it to the Court, and shall serve a notice in the form contained in Schedule C hereto annexed or to the like effect on the person whose property has been distrained, requiring him either to pay the amount demanded, or within fifteen days from the receipt of the notice, to institute a suit to contest the demand.

The officer shall at the same time send to the Court, for the purpose of being put up at the Court-house, a proclamation fixing a day for the sale of the distrained property, not less than twenty days from the date of the proclamation: and shall deliver a copy of the proclamation to the peon charged with the service of the notice, to be put up by him in the place where the distrained property is deposited.

The proclamation shall contain a description of the property, and shall specify the demand for which it is sold and the place where the sale is to be held.

Suspension of sale on institution of suit.

60. If a suit is instituted in pursuance of the aforesaid notice, the Court shall send to the proper officer, or, if so requested by the owner of the distrained property, shall deliver to him, a certificate of the institution of the suit.

On such certificate being received by, or presented to, the proper officer, he shall suspend proceedings in regard to the sale:

Provided that if, in his opinion the property distrained is such that delay will cause damage thereto, he may direct its immediate sale.

Suit to contest distrainer's demand.

61. Any person whose property has been distrained as aforesaid, may institute a suit to contest the distrainer's demand at any time before the expiration of the fifteen days mentioned in section 59.

When such suit is instituted, the Court shall proceed in the manner prescribed in section 60.

If application for the sale of the property is afterwards made to the proper officer, he shall send a copy of the application to the Court, and suspend further proceedings pending the decision of the case.

Withdrawal of distress on execution of bond.

62. The person whose property has been distrained may, at the time of instituting any such suit as aforesaid, or at any subsequent period, execute a bond with one or more surety or sureties, for an amount not less than double the value of the property so distrained, binding himself to pay whatever sum may be adjudged to be due from him with costs of suit.

When such bond is executed, the Court shall give to the owner of the property a certificate to that effect, or, if he so requests, shall serve the distrainer with notice of the same.

Upon such certificate being presented to the distrainer by the owner of the property, or served on him by order of the Court, the property shall be released from distress.

Proceeding with sale, if, on expiration of time fixed, no suit is instituted.

63. On the expiration of the period fixed in the proclamation of sale, if the institution of a suit to contest the demand of the distrainer has not been certified to the proper officer in the manner hereinbefore provided, he shall, unless the said demand, with such costs of the distress as are allowed by him, be discharged in full, proceed, with the sanction of the Court, to sell the property, or such part thereof as may be necessary.

Place and manner of sale.

64. The sale shall be held at the place where the distrained property is deposited, or at the nearest ganj, bázár or other place of public resort, if the proper officer thinks that it is likely to sell there to better advantage.

The property shall be sold by public auction in one or more lots as the officer holding the sale thinks advisable; and if the demand, with the costs of distress and sale, be satisfied by the sale of a portion of the property, the distress shall be immediately withdrawn with respect to the remainder.

Postponement of sale where fair price is not offered.

65. If on the property being put up for sale, a price which the officer holding the sale shall think fair be not offered, and if the owner of the property or his recognized agent apply to have the sale postponed until the next day or (if a market be held at the place of sale) until the next market-day, the sale shall be postponed until such day, and shall be then completed at whatever price may be offered.

Payment of purchase money.

66. The price of every lot shall be paid in ready money at the time of sale, or as soon thereafter as the officer holding the sale thinks fit; and in default of such payment, the property shall be put up again and resold.

When the purchase-money has been paid in full, the officer holding the sale shall give the purchaser a certificate stating the property purchased by him and the price paid therefor.

Proceeds of sale.

67. The officer holding the sale shall deduct from the proceeds one anna for every rupee and fraction of a rupee, on account of the expenses attending the sale.

He shall then pay to the distrainer the expenses incurred by him on account of the distress and of the issue of the notice and proclamation of sale prescribed in section 59, to such amount as, after examination of the statement of expenses furnished by the distrainer, the officer thinks proper to allow.

The remainder shall be applied to the discharge of the arrear for which the distress was made, and the surplus (if any) shall be delivered to the person whose property has been sold.

Officers holding sales not to purchase.

68. Officers holding sales of property under this Act, and all persons employed by, or subordinate to, such officers, are forbidden to purchase, either directly or indirectly, property sold by such officers.

Illegal acts of distrainer to be reported.

69. The officer mentioned in section 57 shall bring to the notice of the Court any illegal act which shall come to his knowledge as having been committed by any person in making a distress under this Act.

If in any case, on proceeding to hold a sale under this Act, such officer finds that the owner has not received due notice of the distress and intended sale, he shall postpone the sale and report the case to the Court, and the Court shall direct the issue of another notice and proclamation of sale under section 59, or make such other order as it thinks proper.

Recovery of expenses if no sale takes place.

70. When such officer has gone to any place for the purpose of holding a sale, and no sale takes place, either for the reason stated in section 69, or because the distrainer's demand has been previously satisfied, the said charge on account of expenses attending the sale shall be leviable by the officer, and shall be calculated on the value of the distrained property, as estimated by him, unless the distrainer's demand has been satisfied before the day fixed for the sale, and notice of such satisfaction has been given by him to the officer.

If the distrainer's demand be not satisfied until the day fixed for the sale, the charge shall be paid by the owner of the property, and may be recovered by sale of such portion thereof as may be necessary.

In every other case the charge shall be paid by the distrainer, and may be recovered under the warrant of the Court by attachment and sale of his property:

Provided that in no case shall an amount exceeding ten rupees be recoverable under this section.

Second proclamation of sale when arrears are adjudged to be due.

71. When a suit has been instituted to contest a distrainer's demand, and the property has not been released on security, if the demand or any portion of it shall be adjudged to be due, the Court shall issue an order to the proper officer authorizing the sale of the property.

On the application of the distrainer (which shall be made within five days from the receipt of such order by such officer), such officer shall publish a second proclamation in the manner prescribed in section 59, fixing another day for the sale of the distrained property, not less than five nor more than ten days from the date of the proclamation; and, unless the amount adjudged to be due with costs of distress be paid immediately, shall proceed to sell the property in the manner hereinbefore provided.

Distrainer to prove the arrear in suits to contest his demand.

72. In all suits instituted to contest a distrainer's demand the defendant must prove the arrear in the same manner as if he had himself brought a suit for the amount under the foregoing provisions of this Act.

If the demand or any part thereof is found to be due, the Court shall make a decree for the amount in favour of the distrainer.

Such amount may be recovered by sale of the distrained property as provided in section 71, and if the distress has not been withdrawn, and if any balance remain due after such sale, by execution of the decree against the person and any other property of the defaulter, or if the distrained property have been released on security, by execution of the decree against the person and property of the defaulter, and, if his surety has been made a party to the suit, against the person and property of such surety.

Compensation for vexatious distress.

73. If the distress is adjudged to be vexatious or groundless, the Court, besides directing the release of the distrained property, may award such compensation to the plaintiff as it thinks fit, not exceeding twice the value of the property distrained.

Suit by third party claiming property distrained.

74. If any person claims, as his own property which has been distrained for arrears of rent alleged to be due from any other person, the claimant may institute a suit against the distrainer and such other person to try the right to the property, in the same manner and under the same rules as to the time of instituting the suit and as to the consequent postponement of sale, as a person whose property has been distrained for an arrear of rent alleged to be due from him, may institute a suit to contest the demand.

Release on giving security.

75. When any such suit is instituted, the property may be released upon security for its value being given to the satisfaction of the Court.

Order if claim dismissed.

If the claim is dismissed, the Court shall make an order in favour of the distrainer for the sale of the property or the recovery of its value, as the case may be.

Compensation for distress of stranger's property.

If the claim is upheld, the Court shall order the release of the distrained property, and may award such compensation as it thinks fit, not exceeding twice the value of the property distrained.

Landlord's prior claim to distrainable produce in possession of defaulting tenant.

76. No claim to any produce of land liable to distress under this Act, and found at the time of the distress in the possession of a defaulting tenant, whether such claim be in respect of a previous sale, mortgage, or otherwise, shall bar the landlord's prior claim, nor shall any attachment in execution of a decree of any civil Court prevail against such claim.

Stranger claiming to be landlord and to have right of distress to be made a party.

77. Whenever property has been distrained for an arrear of rent, and a suit has been instituted to contest the demand, and the right to distrain for such arrear is claimed by or on behalf of any person other than the distrainer, on the ground of such other person being actually and in good faith in the receipt and enjoyment of the rent of the land, such other person shall be made a party to the suit, and the question of the actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent by him before and up to the commencement of the suit, shall be enquired into, and the suit shall be decided according to the result of such inquiry:

Provided that the decision of the Court shall not affect the right of any person having a title to the rent of the land, to establish such title in a Court of competent jurisdiction, by suit instituted within one year from the date of the decision.

Suit for illegal distress.

78. Any person whose property has been distrained for the recovery of a demand not justly due, or of a demand due or alleged to be due from some other person, and who is prevented by any sufficient cause from bringing a suit to contest the demand or try the right to the property, as the case may be, within the period allowed by sections 59 and 74, and whose property is in consequence brought to sale, may institute a suit to recover compensation for any injury which he has sustained from the distress or sale.

Suit for illegal act of distrainer.

79. If any person empowered to distrain property, or employed for the purpose under a written authority by a person so empowered, distrains or sells any property for the recovery of an arrear of rent alleged to be due otherwise than according to the provisions of this Act, or if any distrained property is lost, damaged or destroyed, by reason of the distrainer not having taken proper precaution for the due keeping and preservation thereof, or if the distress is not immediately withdrawn when any provision of this Act requires such withdrawal,

the owner of the property may institute a suit to recover compensation for any injury which he has thereby sustained.

Suit for distress or sale falsely purporting to be under this Act.

80. If any person not empowered by this Act to distrain or sell, nor duly authorized for that purpose by a person so empowered, purports to distrain or sell any property under this Act, the owner of such property may institute a suit to recover compensation from the person so distraining or selling for any injury which the plaintiff has sustained from the distress or sale.

Such suit shall not affect the defendant's liability to be prosecuted under any law for the time being in force.

Procedure in case of resistance to distress.

81. If any person resists a distress of property duly made under this Act, or forcibly or clandestinely removes any distrained property, the Court, upon complaint being made within ten days from the date of such resistance or removal, shall cause the person accused to be arrested and brought before the Court with all convenient speed, and the Court shall proceed forthwith to try the case.

If the case cannot be at once heard and determined, the Court may, if it think fit, require the party arrested to give security for his person, whenever the same may be required, and, in default of such security, may commit him to the civil jail until the case is tried.

Punishment of offender.

82. If such resistance or removal of property be proved, the Court may order the offender to pay a fine not exceeding one hundred rupees, together with all costs and expenses incurred in the case or in making the distress, and, in default of payment, may order him to be imprisoned in the civil jail until payment is made: Provided that no such imprisonment shall continue for more than six months.

CHAPTER VII.

JURISDICTION OF THE COURTS.

Suits cognizable.

Suits cognizable under this Act.

83. The Courts of Revenue in Oudh shall take cognizance of the following descriptions of suits, and such suits shall be heard and determined in the said Courts in the manner provided in this Act, and not otherwise:—

or on account of the refusal of receipts or acknowledgments for rent paid or tendered,

or on account of illegal ejectment,

or on account of the value of standing crops under section 46;

(10).—For the recovery of the occupancy of any land from which an under-proprietor or tenant has been illegally ejected by the landlord;

(11).—For contesting the exercise of the power of distraint conferred on landlords and others by this Act, or any acts purporting to be done in exercise of the said power, or for compensation for illegal distraint;

(12).—For abatement of rent in accordance with the provisions of section 19;

(13).—For the recovery of compensation for improvements in accordance with the provisions of section 22.

C.—Suits regarding the Division or Appraisement of Produce.

(14).—Suits under section 31, regarding the division, estimate, or appraisement of the produce of land.

D.—Suits by, and against, Lumberdárs, Co-sharers and Muáfidárs.

(15).—Suits by a sharer against a lumberdár or co-sharer for share of the profits of an estate, or any part thereof, or for the rendering and settlement of accounts in respect of such profits;

(16).—Suits by a lumberdár or pattidár who is entitled to collect the rents of the patti, for arrears of revenue or rent payable through him by the co-sharers whom he represents, and by a lumberdár for village-expénses and other dues for which the co-sharers may be responsible to him, or against a joint lumberdár for compensation for revenue or rent paid by such lumberdár on account of such joint lumberdár;

(17).—Suits by co-sharers against lumberdárs, or by proprietors or lessees against muáfídárs or assignees of revenue, for compensation on account of exaction in excess of revenue or rent, or on account of the refusal of receipts or acknowledgments for revenue or rent paid or tendered;

(18).—Suits by muáfídárs or assignees of revenue for arrears of revenue.

Grades of Courts.

Grades of Courts for the purposes of this Act.

84. For the purposes of this Act, the Courts of Revenue shall consist of six grades of Courts, namely—

(1).—The Court of the Assistant Collector of the second class;

(2).—The Court of the Assistant Collector of the first class;

(3).—The Court of the Deputy Collector;

(4).—The Court of the Collector;

(5).—The Court of the Commissioner;

(6).—The Court of the Financial Commissioner.

Chief Commissioner may declare grade of Tahsíldár or Assistant Commissioner.

85. Subject to any orders that may from time to time be issued by the Governor General in Council, the Chief Commissioner of Oudh shall have power to declare to which of the first three grades any Assistant Commissioner shall belong, and to invest any Tahsíldár with the powers of any of the same grades.

Deputy Commissioner to have Collector's powers.

86. The Deputy Commissioner shall exercise the powers of a Collector under this Act.

Settlement officers may be invested with powers of Collector, &c., under this Act.

87. Subject to any orders in this behalf that may from time to time be made by the Governor General of India in Council, the Chief Commissioner of Oudh may invest any officer employed in making or revising settlements of revenue with all or any of the powers of a Collector, or Deputy Collector, or Assistant Collector, under this Act.

Jurisdiction of Assistant Collector of the second class.

88. The Court of the Assistant Collector of the second class shall have power to try and determine suits of the descriptions mentioned in clauses 1, 2, 7, 12, 15, 16, 17 and 18 of section 83, of which the subject-matter does not exceed one hundred rupees in value or amount.

Jurisdiction of Assistant Collector of the first class.

89. The Court of the Assistant Collector of the first class shall have power to try and determine suits of the descriptions referred to in the last preceding section of which the subject-matter does not exceed five hundred rupees in value or amount.

Jurisdiction of Deputy Collector.

90. The Court of the Deputy Collector shall have power to try and determine suits of every description of which the subject-matter does not exceed five thousand rupees in value or amount.

Jurisdiction of Collector.

91. The Court of the Collector shall have power to try and determine suits of every description and of any amount, and to hear appeals from the decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the Code of Civil Procedure as applied by this Act) from the orders of the Assistant Collectors, and, in suits under clauses 2, 5, 9, 11, 14, 15, 16, 17, and 18 of section 83, from such decisions and orders of the Deputy Collectors.

Whenever the state of the public business requires it, the Chief Commissioner may invest any Deputy Collector with the powers of a Collector for the trial and determination of suits and appeals under this Act, other than appeals from the decisions of such Deputy Collector, and may, with the sanction of the Governor General of India in Council, invest any Collector with all or any of the powers of a Commissioner under this Act.

Jurisdiction of Commissioner.

92. The Court of the Commissioner shall have power to hear and determine appeals from decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the Code of Civil Procedure) from the orders of the Collectors and Deputy Collectors, except as otherwise provided in sections 91, 95 and 102.

Jurisdiction of Financial Commissioner.

93. The Court of the Financial Commissioner shall have power to hear and determine appeals from the decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the Code of Civil Procedure) from the orders, of the Commissioners, and also special appeals, as provided in the said Code, from the decisions passed in regular appeal by the Collectors and by the Commissioners.

Appeals.

Time for presenting appeals.

94. The memorandum of appeal prepared in the form and containing the particulars mentioned in the Code of Civil Procedure, shall be presented to the Court empowered to hear the appeal within the period hereinafter specified, unless the appellant shall show sufficient cause, to the satisfaction of such Court, for not having presented the memorandum within such period; that is to say, thirty days if the appeal lie to the Collector, six weeks if the appeal lie to the Commissioner, and ninety days if the appeal lie to the Financial Commissioner.

The period shall be reckoned from and exclusive of the day on which the decision or order appealed against was passed, and also exclusive of such time as may be requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree or order from which the appeal is made.

Applications for the admission of special appeals shall be presented in the Court of the Financial Commissioner within the period hereinbefore fixed for the presentation of a memorandum of appeal.

95. In suits under clauses 2, 5, 9, 11, 14, 15, 16, 17, and 18 of section 83, and in appeals from decisions in such suits tried and decided by a Commissioner or Collector, if the amount sued for does not exceed one hundred rupees, the judgment shall be final, except as hereinafter provided, unless in any such suit a question of right to enhance or otherwise vary the rent of a tenant, or any question relating to a title to land or to some interest in land as between parties having conflicting claims thereto, has been determined by the judgment.

No appeal, except in certain cases, from Collector's decree for money below one hundred rupees

In such case the judgment shall be open to appeal in the manner provided in this Act.

Distribution of Business.

96. The Deputy Commissioner may direct the business in the Courts subordinate to him, whether or not they hold their sittings in the same place, to be distributed among such Courts in such way as he shall think fit.

Deputy Commissioner may distribute business in subordinate Courts.

Transfer of Suits and Appeals.

97. The Commissioner or the Deputy Commissioner may withdraw any suit instituted in any Court subordinate to him, and try such suit himself, or refer it for trial to any other such Court competent to try the same.

Transfer of suits from subordinate Courts to Commissioner's or Collector's Court.

The Commissioner may also withdraw any appeal instituted in the Court of any Collector subordinate to him, and try the appeal himself, or refer it for trial to the Court of any other Collector in his division.

Withdrawal or reference of appeals.

98. The Financial Commissioner may order that any suit or appeal which shall be instituted in or presented to any Court subordinate to him, shall be transferred to any other such Court competent to try or hear the subject-matter of the same.

Financial Commissioner may transfer suits and appeals from one subordinate Court to another.

Miscellaneous.

99. In the performance of their duties under this Act, the Collectors shall be subject to the direction and control of the Commissioners and of the Financial Commissioner; and the Deputy Collectors and Assistant Collectors shall be subject to the direction and control of the Deputy Commissioners to whom they are respectively subordinate:

General subordination of Courts.

Provided that nothing in this section shall empower the Financial Commissioner or any Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner to interfere in any way not authorized by this Act with any decision or order in a suit.

Proviso.

100. All suits, which, under the provisions of this Act, may be brought by or against landlords, may be brought by or against managing agents or tahsildárs of khám estates held under khám management, whether such estates are the property of Government or not.

Suits by or against managing agents or tahsildárs of khám estates.

101. No sharer in a joint estate, under-proprietary or other tenure in which a division of land has not been made among the sharers, shall exercise any of the powers conferred by this Act in regard to the recovery of arrears of rent, enhancement of rent, ejectment of tenants or distress, otherwise than through a manager authorized to collect the rents on behalf of all the sharers.

Sharer to exercise certain powers only through manager or lumberdár.

In pattídárí estates or tenures such powers shall be exercised only through a lumberdár or through the pattídár who is entitled to collect the rents of the pattí.

102. If any landlord, under-proprietor, or tenant has, without his consent, been dispossessed of any land otherwise than by due course of law, such landlord, under-proprietor or tenant, or any person claiming through him, shall be entitled to recover possession thereof notwithstanding any other title has been set up, provided that he makes application to the Court to recover possession of the land within three months from the time of the dispossession.

Recovery of land of which applicant has been illegally dispossessed.

But nothing in this section shall bar the person from whom possession has been so recovered, or any other person, from instituting a suit to establish his title to such land and to recover possession thereof.

The application mentioned in the first clause of this section shall be heard by the Collector or Deputy Collector only, and no appeal shall lie from any order passed thereon, nor shall any review of such order be allowed.

103. The Courts may sit for the hearing and determining suits and appeals, and for disposing of other business under this Act, in any place within the local limits of their respective jurisdictions:

Courts may sit anywhere within limits of their jurisdiction.

Provided that every hearing and decision shall be in open Court, and that the parties to the suit or their authorized agents shall have had due notice to attend at such place.

CHAPTER VIII.

LIMITATION OF SUITS.

104. Except as herein otherwise provided, and subject to the provisions as to legal disability contained in any law for the limitation of suits for the time being in force in Oudh, all suits under this Act shall be instituted within one year from the date of the accruing of the cause of action.

General limitation.

105. Suits for the delivery of leases or the counterparts of leases may be instituted at any time during the tenancy.

Suits for delivery of leases or counterparts.

106. Suits for the recovery of arrears of rent of revenue, or of a share of profits, shall, except in the case mentioned in section 16, be instituted within three years from the date on which the arrear or share of profit claimed shall have become due.

Suits for arrears of rent, or revenue or share of profits.

Suits against agents for money, or delivery of accounts or papers.

107. Suits for the recovery of money in the hands of an agent, or for the settlement of accounts or delivery of papers by an agent, may be brought at any time during the continuance of the agency, or within one year after its determination, or, in the case of claims legally cognizable at the date of the passing of this Act, within one year after such date.

Suits regarding distress, division of produce, &c.

108. Suits regarding distress under section 74, 78, 79 or 80, and suits regarding the division, estimate, or appraisement of the produce of land, shall be commenced within three months from the date of the accruing of the cause of action.

CHAPTER IX.

PROCEDURE.

Civil Procedure Code to be the procedure under this Act

109. Subject to the exceptions and provisoes under which the Code of Civil Procedure was extended to Oudh, as contained in the Notification republished in Schedule D hereto annexed, the provisions of the said Code shall, so far as they are not inconsistent with the provisions herein contained, apply to all suits, appeals and proceedings under this Act:

Provided that the said Notification shall be read as if the words "Financial Commissioner" were substituted for the words "Judicial Commissioner," and that section 244 of the said Code shall be read as if for the word "Court," the word "Commissioner" were substituted:

Provided also that the words "ancestral property" in the said Notification shall be held to include the property in land of persons admitted to engagement for the land-revenue at the summary settlement of 1858-59.

Particulars to be added to plaint.

110. In addition to the particulars required by section 26 of the said Code to be specified in the plaint, the plaint shall contain the following particulars:—

1st.—The name of the village or estate, and of the pargana, in which the land to which the suit relates is situate;

2nd.—If the suit be for the recovery of an arrear of rent, or for the enhancement or abatement of rent, or for the ejectment of a tenant, or for contesting a notice of enhancement of rent, or for contesting a notice for the ejectment of a tenant, or for the recovery of the occupancy or possession of any land, the plaint shall specify the extent, situation and designation of the land to which the suit relates, and where fields have been marked in a Government survey, the number (if it be possible to give it) of each field;

3rd.—If the suit be for the recovery of an arrear of rent or revenue, the plaint shall specify the yearly rent or revenue of the land, the amount (if any) received on account of the year or years for which the claim is made, the amount in arrear, and the time in respect of which it is alleged to be due;

4th.—If the suit be for the delivery of a lease or the counterpart of a lease, the plaint shall specify all the particulars mentioned in section 7.

Third person claiming rent to be made a party.

111. When in any suit between a landlord and an under-proprietor or tenant, the right to receive the rent of the land is claimed by a third person, on the ground that he, or a person through whom he claims, has actually and in good faith received and enjoyed such rent up to the time of the commencement of the suit, such third person shall be made a party to the suit, and the question of the actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent by him or the person through whom he claims shall be enquired into, and the suit shall be decided according to the result of such inquiry:

Provided always that the decision of the Court shall not affect the right of any party having a legal right to the rent of such land to establish his title thereto in a Court of competent jurisdiction.

Summons to defendant to be for final disposal.

112. In all suits under this Act, the summons to the defendant shall be for the final disposal of the suit.

Set-off in suits for arrears of rent.

113. In a suit to recover an arrear of rent no set-off shall be allowed against the claim, except such amount as may be due to the defendant on an unexecuted decree under this Act against the plaintiff.

Defendant may pay money into Court.

114. In any suit under this Act involving a claim to money, the defendant may, at any stage of the suit, deposit in Court such sum of money as he considers a satisfaction in full of the plaintiff's claim, together with the costs incurred by the plaintiff up to the time of such deposit.

Notice of the deposit shall be given to the plaintiff, and the amount deposited shall be paid to him on his application.

No interest shall be allowed to a plaintiff on any sum paid by the defendant into Court from the date of such payment, whether such sum be in full of the plaintiff's claim or fall short thereof.

Procedure for balance where defendant pays less than amount claimed.

115. In any case in which the defendant deposits less than the amount claimed by the plaintiff, nothing in section 114 shall bar the plaintiff from proceeding in the suit for the recovery of the balance.

Dismissal of suit for lease or counterpart, in absence of written evidence of agreement.

116. If a tenant not having a right of occupancy institute a suit against a landlord for the delivery of a lease, or a landlord institute a suit against a tenant not having a right of occupancy for the delivery of the counterpart of a lease, and the parties do not agree in respect of the particulars which such lease or counterpart is to contain, the Court shall dismiss the suit, unless evidence in writing is produced which shall satisfy the Court that an agreement has been entered into between the parties in accordance with which such lease or counterpart ought to be delivered.

Collector may make local enquiry.

117. The local enquiry described in section 180 of the Code of Civil Procedure may also, if he think fit, be made by the Collector in person or other officer presiding in the Court, and the provisions of the said Code regarding local inquiries shall apply to such inquiries made by such Collector or other officer.

In such cases the Collector or other officer as aforesaid, after completing the inquiry, shall record on the proceedings such observations as he thinks fit, and the observations so recorded shall be received as evidence in the suit.

As to Decrees.

Time within which execution may be had.

118. No process of execution shall be issued on a decree under this Act after the lapse of three years from the date of such decree.

Immediate execution of decree.

119. When a decree for money is made in any suit under this Act, the Court may, on the oral application of the party in whose favour the decree is passed, direct immediate execution thereof in the manner described in section 13 of Act No. XXIII of 1861 (to amend Act VIII of 1859.)

Decree for enhancement to state date from which it is to take effect.

120. When a decree in favour of the plaintiff is made in a suit for an enhancement of rent, the Court shall declare the date from which such enhancement shall take effect.

Enforcement of decree for delivery of papers or accounts.

121. If the decree be for the delivery of papers or accounts, it may be enforced by the imprisonment in the civil jail of the party against whom it is made, or by the attachment of his property, or by both imprisonment and attachment.

The imprisonment and attachment may be continued until he complies with the terms of the decree:

Provided that no person shall be imprisoned under this section for a longer period than six months.

Decrees for lease or counterpart to specify particulars.

122. A decree for the delivery of a lease or of the counterpart of a lease shall specify all the particulars mentioned in section 7, and such other particulars as to the Court seem fit.

Court after decree may grant lease or counterpart, in case of defendant's refusal.

123. If the decree be for the delivery of a lease or the counterpart of a lease, and the party ordered to deliver such lease or counterpart neglects or refuses so to do, the Court may grant a lease or counterpart in conformity with the terms of the decree, and such lease or counterpart shall have the same effect as if delivered by the party against whom the decree was passed.

Execution to be first made against moveable property.

124. If the decree be for money, no process in execution shall issue against the immoveable property of the judgment-debtor, other than attachment of such property, unless satisfaction of the decree cannot be obtained against his moveable property.

Sale of under-proprietary right in execution of decree for arrears of rent.

125. If the decree be for an arrear of rent due in respect of an under-proprietary right, the interest of the judgment-debtor in such right may, subject to the provisions of this Act, be sold in execution of the decree:

Provided that no such sale shall be allowed unless it appear to the Deputy Commissioner that satisfaction of the decree cannot be made in the manner referred to in sections 243 and 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

If it appear to the Court that such satisfaction can be made, the Court may exercise the powers given to it by the said section 243, although no application has been made by the judgment-debtor.

Appointment of Deputy Commissioner as manager.

The Deputy Commissioner may be appointed manager under the same section. When he has been so appointed, he may exercise for the satisfaction of the decree against the judgment-debtor, all the powers which, under any law in force in Oudh, he might have exercised for the recovery of an arrear of revenue due by such judgment-debtor to the Government.

Registration of incumbrance created by under-proprietor.

126. No beneficial lease or other incumbrance hereafter created on his tenure by any under-proprietor shall be valid, in the event of the sale of his rights and interests in execution of a decree for arrears of rent, unless such incumbrance has been registered under any rules or law for the time being in force in Oudh, within four months after the creation thereof, and not less than thirty days before the date of attachment of such rights and interests.

Proprietor's lien for rent payable by under-proprietor.

127. When an under-proprietor creates any such incumbrance, and fails to pay to the proprietor all or any part of the rent subsequently accruing in respect of the land subject to the incumbrance, the incumbrancer shall be liable to pay to the proprietor the whole or such part as aforesaid of the said rent, unless the proprietor has agreed in writing to waive any claim which he might otherwise have made on the incumbrancer under this section.

Right of pre-emption at execution-sales.

128. When land is sold in execution of a decree under this Act, and the land or any lot thereof has been knocked down to a stranger, any co-sharer, other than the judgment-debtor, may, before sunset on the day of sale, claim to take the land or lot, as the case may be, at the sum at which it was so knocked down.

If the land be an under-proprietary tenure, a like claim may also be made by the proprietor.

Any claim made under this section shall be allowed: Provided that if a claim to the same land or lot be made by a proprietor as well as by a co-sharer, the claim of the co-sharer shall be preferred: Provided also that no claim shall be allowed unless the claimant fulfil all the conditions of the sale binding on a purchaser.

SCHEDULE D.

(See Section 109.)

Under the provisions of section 385 of Act No. VIII of 1859, and section 3 of Act No. IV of 1860, His Excellency the Governor General in Council is pleased to notify that, from 1st January 1862, Act VIII of 1859 is extended to the Province of Oudh, subject to the following exceptions and provisoes:—

1. Section 3 shall be subject to the following proviso:—

Provided that the Judicial Commissioner or any other Court exercising any appellate jurisdiction within the Province of Oudh, may, at any time within one year from the time of the passing or execution of any judgment or order by any Court subordinate to the said Appellate Court, call for such judgment or proceedings without any regular appeal or application for review having been preferred against the same, and may, if he or it shall see sufficient grounds, revise and alter, or reverse or confirm the same. But that in such case, before revising, altering or reversing any one judgment or order, the said Judicial Commissioner, or it, shall cause the same notice to be given to the party in whose favour the said judgment or order was pronounced, and the same opportunity to such party to be heard in support thereof, and the same proceedings to be taken as if a memorandum of appeal had been filed by the party aggrieved thereby.

2. Section 17 is excepted, and the term recognized agent is defined as follows, viz., a permanent servant, partner, relation, or friend, whom the Court may admit as a fit person to represent a party, and especially persons holding powers of attorney from absent parties, persons carrying on business on behalf of bankers and traders, managing agents of landholders, nearest male relations of women, and persons ex-officio authorized to act for Government, or for any Prince or Chief.

3. Section 111 shall be subject to the following limitation:—It shall not be obligatory on the Court to decide ex parte in the absence of defendant, but the Court may proceed to compel his attendance under the following rule, being the rule now in force in Oudh:—

Rule.—If the defendant does not appear, it shall be at the discretion of the Court to issue a warrant to arrest him and detain him till another day appointed for the hearing of the case, and to attach his property.

4. Section 172.—So much of this section as requires that the whole of the evidence shall be taken down in writing in the language in ordinary use is excepted, and the record made by the hand of the Judge, under the following rule, being the rule now in force in Oudh, shall be taken as a record of the evidence:—

* If this declaration is made by an agent, it must be altered accordingly.

† This is to be by endorsement on a copy of the declaration under Schedule A. made by the person paying the money into Court.

Rule.—An intelligible note of the essential points of the evidence of each witness is to be taken at the time and in the course of oral examination by the officer who tries the case, in his own language. The notes must be legible, complete, and properly arranged, must attest the presence of the witness at the time, and mark every postponement and change of time and scene, so that their bonâ fide character may be apparent. Every essential point must be noted, but mere surplusage may be omitted. These notes shall be filed, and shall form part of the record of the case: Provided that in cases tried by a European officer, who has not passed the examination in the native languages prescribed for Assistant Commissioners exercising special powers, the evidence of witnesses shall also be recorded at length in their own language.

Section 205.—So much of this section as renders land liable to sale in execution of a decree, will be subject to the restrictions on the sale of land prescribed by the following rule, being the local rule now in force in Oudh :—

Rule.—No ancestral property in land shall be sold in satisfaction of a decree, without the sanction of the Judicial Commissioner; and before acquired property in land shall be so sold, the permission of the Divisional Commissioner shall be obtained.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 22nd July 1868:—

No. 18 of 1868.

A Bill to enable Municipalities to provide for Lock-Hospitals.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to enable all Municipalities in British India to provide out of the municipal funds for the maintenance of Lock-Hospitals and generally for the prevention of contagious venereal disease; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Power to Municipal Committees to devote funds to maintaining Lock-Hospitals, &c.

1. Notwithstanding anything contained in any Act of the Governor General of India in Council, of the Governor of Madras in Council, of the Governor of Bombay in Council, of the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal in Council, or in any other law for the time being in force, it shall be lawful for every Municipal Corporation, Municipal Committee, or other Body of persons duly appointed to conduct the affairs of a municipality in British India to pay out of the funds at their disposal, towards the maintenance of the hospital provided under section twelve of Act No. XIV of 1868 (for the prevention of certain contagious diseases) within the limits of the place for which they are so appointed, and towards defraying the cost of the medical treatment, lodging, clothing and food of the women detained in such hospital, and of the allowance provided under section nineteen of the same Act for the subsistence of prostitutes residing within the limits aforesaid, such part as may from time to time be agreed on by and between the Corporation, Committee or Body and the Local Government of the total cost of the said maintenance, treatment, lodging, clothing, food and allowance as annually estimated by such Government.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill is to enable Municipalities to contribute towards the expenses attending the introduction of the Indian Contagious Diseases Act. Those expenses are so considerable that the Government of India may be unable, unless aided out of local resources, to introduce the Act into many places where its provisions are urgently required. The Bill is merely an enabling measure, and the amount of the contribution will from time to time be determined by agreement between the Local Government and the Municipality concerned.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 30th July 1868:—

No. 19 OF 1868.

A Bill to provide against European Vagrancy.

Preamble.

WHEREAS numerous persons of European extraction are at present wandering in a destitute condition throughout India, and whereas such conduct is prejudicial to public order, and it is expedient to prevent the same; it is hereby enacted as follows:—

I.—Preliminary.

Short title. Commencement of Act.

1. This Act may be called "The European Vagrancy Act, 1868," and shall come into operation on such day as the Governor General of India in Council shall by notification in the Gazette of India appoint in this behalf.

Interpretation clause. 'Vagrant.'

2. In this Act—"vagrant" means a person of European extraction found asking for alms or wandering about without any employment or visible means of subsistence:

"Magistrate." "Master of a ship."

"Magistrate" means, within the limits of the Presidency Towns, a Police Magistrate, and, outside those limits, any person exercising the powers of a Magistrate;

And "master of a ship" includes any person in charge of a decked vessel.

II.—Procedure.

Power to require apparent vagrant to go before Police Magistrate, Justice of the Peace or Superintendent of Police.

3. Any Police officer may require any person who is apparently a vagrant to go to and appear before the nearest Police Magistrate, Justice of the Peace or Superintendent of Police.

Where the distance from the place where the person apparently a vagrant is found to such Police Magistrate, Justice or Superintendent exceeds ten miles, the Police officer may require the person apparently a vagrant to go, in the first instance, to the nearest Police station, whence he shall be forwarded by the officer in charge of the station to the nearest Police Magistrate, Justice of the Peace or Superintendent of Police.

Summary inquiry into vagrant's circumstances.

4. The Police Magistrate, Justice or Superintendent shall make a summary inquiry into the circumstances and character of the alleged vagrant; and if he is satisfied that such person is a vagrant he shall record in his office a declaration to that effect. If he is further of opinion that the vagrant is not likely to obtain employment at once, he shall require him to go to a Government work-house, and shall draw out an order to that effect.

The vagrant shall then be placed in charge of the Police for the purpose of being forwarded to the work-house, and the said order shall be a sufficient authority to the Police for retaining him in their charge while he is on his way to the work-house, and to the Governor of the work-house for receiving and detaining such vagrant.

Forwarding vagrant to place of employment.

5. Where the officer making the inquiry mentioned in section four is of opinion that the vagrant is likely to obtain employment in any part of the territories subject to the Local Government to which he is desirous of proceeding, such officer may in his discretion forward the vagrant to such place in charge of the Police and draw up an order to that effect.

Such order shall be a sufficient authority to the Police for retaining him in their charge while he is on his way to such place of employment.

Assistance to obtain employment.

6. Upon his arrival at the place of employment, the vagrant shall be taken before the nearest Police Magistrate, Justice of the Peace or Superintendent of Police, to whom the order for transmission shall be delivered.

Such officer shall thereupon, to the best of his ability, assist the vagrant in seeking employment, and shall keep him under the observation, but not in the charge, of the Police, while he is seeking employment.

Should he fail to obtain employment within a reasonable time, such officer shall forward him to a Government work-house in the manner provided by section four.

Subsistence allowance.

7. Every person, while in charge of the Police, whether before inquiry as to his vagrancy, or while he is on his way to the work-house or, under section five, to a place of employment, shall be entitled to an allowance for his subsistence at the rate of eight annas per diem.

The Police Magistrate, Justice or Superintendent before whom any vagrant is taken under section six, may order him to receive a similar allowance for a reasonable time while he is seeking employment.

Such allowance shall be paid out of such funds and in such manner as the Local Government may from time to time direct.

III.—Government Work-houses.

Government work-houses.

8. The Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General of India in Council, may provide work-houses, with their necessary furniture and establishment, at such places as it may think proper, for the temporary reception of vagrants, or may by writing under the hand of a Secretary to such Government, certify any building or part of a building not provided as a work-house under the former part of this section, to be fit for a work-house for the purposes of this Act. Every such certificate shall be published in the local official Gazette, and thereupon such building or part of a building shall be deemed a Government work-house under this Act.

Scale of diet.

The Local Government shall allow the same scale of diet for the support of vagrants received in such work-houses as is from time to time allowed for Europeans confined in the local prisons or penitentiaries.

Superintendence of work-houses.

9. Every such work-house shall be under the immediate charge of a governor who shall be appointed and may be suspended or removed by the Local Government, and who shall, if the Local Government think fit, be subject to the orders of a Committee of Management appointed from time to time by such Government.

Search of vagrants.

10. Every such governor may order that any vagrant admitted to the work-house under his charge shall be searched, and that the vagrant's bundles, packages and other effects shall be inspected, and may direct that any money then found with or on the vagrant, shall be applied (subject to the orders of the Local Government) towards the expense of carrying this Act into execution, and may order that all or any of the said effects shall be sold, and that the produce of the sale be applied as aforesaid.

Discipline.

11. Vagrants admitted to work-houses under this Act shall be subject to such rules of management and discipline, and to such penalties for wilfully disobeying or neglecting them, as may from time to time be prescribed by the Local Government:

Provided that such rules shall not prescribe a term of imprisonment for any one offence greater than three months, and that they shall have received the previous sanction of the Governor General of India in Council.

Refusal to accept employment.

12. The governor and the Committee of Management (if any) of every such work-house shall use his and their best endeavours to obtain suitable employment for the vagrants in the work-house. When such employment is obtained, any such vagrant refusing or neglecting to avail himself thereof, shall, on conviction before a Magistrate, be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month.

IV.—Deportation.

Deportation of vagrants.

13. If after the lapse of a reasonable time no suitable employment is obtainable for any such vagrant, it shall be lawful for the Local Government to deport him to England or elsewhere as it shall in each case think fit.

The cost of such deportation shall be paid by Government.

Certificate.

14. When any vagrant is deported, he shall receive a certificate signed by the governor of the work-house to which he has last been admitted, which shall state the fact of his having been deported under the orders of Government, the character which he bore at such work-house, and the trade or calling to which he has previously belonged.

Subsistence on landing.

15. A sum of money sufficient for the vagrant's subsistence for one month shall also be paid to the master of the ship in which he is to be deported, and shall be given by the master to the vagrant when he is landed at the end of his voyage:

Provided that if the vagrant die during the voyage, the master shall pay such sum to the Secretary of State for India, or to such other authority as the Local Government shall from time to time appoint.

V.—Penalties.

Refusal to pay the subsistence allowance.

16. Any such master of a British ship refusing or neglecting to give or pay such sum of money, as hereinbefore required, shall for every such neglect or default be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, in addition to the payment of the sum aforesaid, to a fine not exceeding one hundred rupees.

Refusal to receive vagrants on board.

17. Every master of a British sailing ship, who, on being tendered or paid such sum as the Local Government shall from time to time appoint, refuses to receive on board his ship any vagrant whom the Local Government requires him to take on board for the purpose of being deported under the provisions hereinbefore contained:

or who fails to keep and detain such vagrant on board his ship for the voyage for which the vagrant is shipped,

or who fails to give a subsistence to such vagrant, or to provide him with a proper berth or sleeping-place effectually protected against sea and weather, shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, in addition to payment of the sum last aforesaid (if it has been paid to the master) to a fine not exceeding five hundred rupees.

Refusal to go before Magistrate.

18. Any person refusing to proceed before a Magistrate of Police, Justice of the Peace or Superintendent for the purpose of preliminary inquiry, when required so to do by a Police Officer under section three, shall be punishable, on conviction before a Magistrate, with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine, or with both.

For the purposes of this section the Magistrate shall have such jurisdiction as he would have if the person so refusing were an European not being a British subject.

Escaping from Police.

19. Any vagrant escaping from the Police while committed to their charge under the orders specified in sections three and four,

Quitting work-house without leave.

or leaving a work-house under this Act without permission from the governor,

Refusing to go on boardship.

or refusing to go on boardship for the purpose of deportation when duly ordered so to do under section eleven,

Escaping from ship.

or escaping from the ship in which he is being deported, shall be punishable, on conviction before a Magistrate, with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years.

Begging.

20. Any vagrant found begging when he has sufficient means of subsistence, or when he might obtain a suitable employment, or demanding alms in a threatening or insolent manner, or continuing to demand alms of any person after he has been required to desist, shall be punishable, on conviction before a Magistrate, with rigorous imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month for the first offence, two months for the second, and three months for any subsequent offence.

Procedure on close of imprisonment.

21. Every person imprisoned under section eighteen, nineteen or twenty shall, at the end of his term of imprisonment, be immediately placed before the nearest Magistrate of Police or Justice of the Peace, who shall, if he think fit, forthwith deal with him in the manner prescribed by sections four and five.

The order of transmission shall certify the fact of the previous conviction.

Such person may be at once deported in the manner provided by sections thirteen, fourteen and fifteen.

VI.—Miscellaneous.

Vagrants deprived of privileges of British subjects under Code of Criminal Procedure.

22. Any European British subject who, upon the summary enquiry mentioned in section four, has been determined to be a vagrant shall so long as he remains in India, be subject, beyond the limits of the Presidency Towns, to the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure (other than those contained in Chapter XIX of the same Code) applicable to an European not being a British subject:

A copy of the declaration recorded under section four purporting to be signed by the officer for the time being entrusted with the custody of such declaration shall be primâ facie evidence that the European British subject named therein has been, upon such enquiry, determined to be a vagrant.

If from any cause he is committed or held to bail by a Justice of the Peace to take his trial before a High Court, he shall not be at liberty to object to the jurisdiction of such Justice of the Peace or High Court on the ground of anything contained in the former part of this section.

And no proceeding under this Act shall be deemed invalid by reason only that the Police Magistrate, Justice of the Peace or Superintendent of Police to and before whom a person apparently a vagrant was required to go and appear was not the nearest or that the distance mentioned in section three did not exceed ten miles.

Liability of importers of Europeans becoming vagrants.

23. Where any person of European extraction is, after the passing of this Act, brought out to India under an engagement to serve any other person, or any Company, Association or Body of persons in any capacity, and becomes chargeable to the State as a vagrant within one year after his arrival in India, then the person, or Company, Association or Body to serve whom he was so brought out to India shall be liable to pay to the Government the cost of his deportation and all other charges incurred by the State in consequence of his becoming a vagrant.

Such costs and charges shall be recoverable by suit as if an express agreement to repay the same had been entered into with the Secretary of State for India in Council by the person, Company, Association or Body chargeable.

Penalty for bringing European convicts to India.

24. Every master of a ship bringing or landing in any part of India any person of European extraction who has been convicted in any other part of Her Majesty's dominions of an offence which, if committed in England, would be felony, and who has been released on a licence to be at large or on the expiration of the term for which he has been sentenced, shall, on conviction before a Magistrate, be liable for every such offence to pay a fine not exceeding four hundred rupees, and, in default of payment, to imprisonment for any term not exceeding two months.

Recovery and payment of fines.

25. All fines imposed under this Act may be recovered, if for offences committed outside the local limits of the towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay in the manner prescribed by the Code of Criminal Procedure, and if for offences committed within those limits, in the manner prescribed by any Act regulating the Police of such towns in force for the time being.

All fines recovered under this Act shall be paid to the credit of the Government of India, or as such Government shall from time to time direct.

Exercise in Native States of powers conferred by this Act.

26. The powers and duties conferred and imposed by this Act on Justices of the Peace, Superintendents of Police, and Police respectively may, in places beyond the limits of British India, be exercised and performed by such persons respectively as the Governor General of India in Council shall from time to time by notification in the Gazette of India appoint in this behalf.

Governor General in Council empowered to make rules.

27. The Governor General of India in Council may from time to time make rules consistent with this Act for the guidance of Officers in matters connected with its enforcement.

All such rules shall be published in the Gazette of India.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of the present Bill is to provide against the vagrancy in India of persons of European extraction. Representations concerning the magnitude of the evil have been received from all parts of the country, and these representations have recently become so urgent that, in spite of the undoubted difficulty of the subject, the Government of India feels itself no longer justified in postponing an attempt to deal with it.

It is abundantly clear from the numerous papers now in the hands of Government that European vagrants are greatly multiplying; that they cause intolerable annoyance both to the European and to the Native communities; that vagrancy, when once begun, tends almost certainly to the moral and physical destruction of the vagrant; and that it constitutes a grave political danger through the discredit which it casts on the entire British race.

Selections from the documents which establish these facts will from time to time be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India.

It cannot, moreover, be doubted, upon the evidence before the Government, that European crime must greatly increase in India, unless the multiplication of vagrants be checked. It is shown that many of them have actually belonged to the criminal classes in the colonies, and come to India because their reputation does not follow them to this country.

Two specific proposals for the repression of vagrancy have been received from Local Governments. The Government of Bombay has suggested that European vagrants should be brought under the provisions of Chapter XIX of the Code of Criminal Procedure, which permit the detention of persons of suspicious character who are unable to find security for their good conduct. The expedient has the unquestionable advantage of simplicity; but it seems to be open to the objection that this part of the Code has its justification exclusively in certain peculiarities of Native society. The assumption is made that if a man is the least respectable, there are always members of his caste, family, or village community, who will go bail for his behaviour. Such an assumption obviously does not hold in regard to the European vagrant, and to make it violently would give an air of unfairness to the law, since no law seems completely defensible which makes amenability to its provisions depend on the fulfilment of a condition which manifestly cannot be fulfilled.

The Government of Madras proposes, on the other hand, to deal with European vagrancy as a substantive evil to be treated in a special manner. The revised Bill sent up by that Government follows to some extent the analogies of the English Law of pauper removal. This principle has been adopted in the present measure, with which many of the provisions of the Madras Bill have been incorporated.

If the Bill becomes law, the first step in giving effect to its provisions is the establishment by the Government of work-houses for Europeans. These work-houses will be under the immediate charge of a Governor. Inasmuch, however, as several Houses of Industry of the same nature as the proposed work-houses already exist, power is given to the Government to license existing establishments so as to bring them within the Act. Having regard too to the probability that many charitable persons will be willing to co-operate in the reclamation of the vagrant, the Government is empowered to appoint a Committee of Management, if it shall think fit, and to place the Governor under the orders of the Committee.

As soon as work-houses have been established, the machinery of the Act can be brought into operation. When an officer of Police finds a person of European extraction asking for alms or wandering about apparently without employment, he may require such person to proceed to the nearest Police Magistrate, Justice of the Peace, or Superintendent of Police. This functionary will make a summary enquiry into the circumstances of the alleged vagrant, and if satisfied of his vagrancy, will make a declaration to that effect. If there is no prospect of procuring employment for the person thus declared to be a vagrant, he will be at once forwarded to a work-house. If there is a prospect of his obtaining employment at any particular place, he is to be forwarded to such place. But, judging from the evidence furnished by the papers, it is much to be feared that there will be seldom any chance of the vagrant finding employment, until he has been partially reclaimed by treatment in the work-house. The order of removal will probably nearly always be, in the first instance, an order to proceed to the work-house. But it has been thought right to make provision for the chance of employment being procurable at once.

The treatment of the vagrant in the work-house will be directed to his reclamation from habits which are unfortunately shown to be all but universal in the class. But it is imperatively necessary that stringent rules of labour and discipline should be prescribed, and that breach of these rules should be punishable. Provisions to that effect are contained in the Bill; at the same time it is required that the Governor and Committee shall use their best endeavours to obtain employment outside the work-house for such of the vagrants as are fitted for it.

It is to be hoped that the system just described will do something to ameliorate the moral and physical condition of the European vagrants now in India. It is, however, urgently necessary that the numbers of such persons in the country should be permanently diminished, and, in considering the best means of effecting this object, some questions of not inconsiderable difficulty present themselves. In front of these is the question, whether persons of European extraction, morally certain to become vagrants, can be prevented from landing in India.

Among the proposals originally submitted to the Government of Fort St. George by the Madras Committee of Vagrancy, was a provision that it should be punishable in a shipmaster to land, except with official sanction, "time-expired convicts, ticket-of-leave men, or destitute persons not being sailors, and having no engagements of service on shore." There is also an Act of the Indian Legislature, XLI of 1850, which imposes penalties on shipmasters landing "any diseased, maimed, blind, or decrepit person, not having the means of subsistence" in the Straits Settlement. It is further understood that there are Australian enactments prohibiting the importation of time-expired convicts from the Western Settlement into the other colonies. And the papers before the Government show that several zealous and benevolent persons, who have already done much for the vagrant, are of opinion that no cure for the evil will be complete, except a stringent system of preventing ingress into India.

The only plan of prohibition which promises to be effectual is that adopted in the measures above referred to, of making it punishable for a shipmaster to land in India persons of European extraction belonging to certain particular classes, such as, time-expired convicts or ticket-of-leave men, or falling under some general categories, such as, "persons not having the means of subsistence," or "the means or prospect of procuring employment." The penalties would have to be of general application, and the commanders of the Peninsular and Oriental ships, and of the large passenger sailing-vessels, would be liable to them as well as other ship-masters. The Indian Legislature cannot give commanders of ships a legal power of examining into the circumstances of their passengers, until they come into Indian waters; but they would of course in their own defence make enquiry at their port of departure. Such perquisitions would in themselves cause annoyance, and the refusals to convey particular persons, which would follow, might expose the Indian Government to a good deal of misconstruction. It is further some objection that certain classes whom nobody would wish to include in a technical definition, might get entangled in it. A respectable young man coming out in the hope of obtaining a clerkship in Calcutta or Bombay, or an appointment in the Uncovenanted Service, might be in some danger of being forbidden the country.

It is, however, very improbable that any system would be effectual, unless directed against a well-defined class. The Government of Madras seems to have omitted the prohibitory section from its revised Bill on account of the difficulty of bringing home to the captain knowledge of the position of his passengers. Another technical embarrassment arises from the fact that any prospect of employment or provision for subsistence possessed by the passenger, however inadequate, would prevent the shipmaster from being convicted; for the legislature cannot compel him to satisfy himself of the sufficiency of such provision or prospect. But what appears a fatal objection to a prohibitory system, other than that just indicated, is that much the greatest portion of European vagrants have, when they land in India, good prospect of employment and ample means of subsistence. They are brought out at the cost of private employers and companies, and become vagrants afterwards from unfitness to remain in the country, physical or moral.

The objections just stated do not apply with the same force to prohibitions directed against landing in India persons belonging to limited and tolerably well-defined classes. Of this description are the time-expired convicts and ticket-of-leave men from Australia, who are shown to be coming in yearly increasing numbers to Calcutta and Madras, chiefly in charge of horses. That such persons are easily identified in the Australian Colonies, appears to be indicated by the Australian laws referred to above; and, accordingly, the Bill contains a section providing for the fine and imprisonment of a shipmaster knowingly landing in India any person who, in any English dependency, has at any time been convicted of an offence which, if committed in England, would amount to felony. And, if the present Bill becomes law, it is intended by the Government of India to address the Governors of Australian Colonies, and request them to give all possible publicity to the provision just mentioned, and to the fact that unskilled European labourers of all classes have little or no prospect of employment in India, expose themselves in all probability to the utmost suffering by coming here, and are liable ultimately to be dealt with as vagrants.

Even if a system of prevention were not resorted to, it would be impossible to dispense with a system of deportation, since nothing can be more hopeless than the condition of a vagrant remaining in an Indian work-house unreclaimed or incapable of employment. The Bill, therefore, confers on the Government an ultimate power of deporting the vagrant, who is however to be provided, when he reaches his destination, with funds for a month's subsistence. Here, however, arises an important and much discussed question, the question whether the Government—or, in other words, the general Tax-paying Community—can fairly be charged with the passage and subsistence money of the deported vagrant, in cases where he has been brought to India for the purpose of serving a Company or private employer. In the papers submitted to the Government of India, is the record of an animated controversy on the subject between the present Commander-in-Chief in India on one side, and certain Bombay officials and the Bombay Chamber of Commerce on the other. Sir William Mansfield strongly maintained the liability of the employer, as against that of the Government. Much, no doubt, may be said against imposing an obligation not limited in point of time on the person who originally imported the vagrant. But the provision of the present Bill is not open to the objections which might be taken to an extreme view, and indeed is so manifestly fair as to preclude the necessity of going into the abstract question. It is proposed that if a person, brought to India by a Company or private employer, becomes chargeable to the Government as a vagrant within one year, the cost of deportation shall be recoverable from the importer. If an European engaged to serve in India breaks down within so short a time as twelve months from physical or moral causes, there must necessarily have been carelessness or error in selecting him, and the person who made the mistake may fairly be called upon to pay for its consequences. The period of one year has, it should be remarked, been selected, because the fitness of a European for India can scarcely be said to have been tested, until he has remained in the country during one hot season.

The Bill includes provisions intended to secure the good treatment of the vagrant during the voyage to his home, and the due payment to him on landing of a month's subsistence money. It is also made compulsory on masters of sailing vessels to receive as passengers persons deported by the Government, on proper payment being tendered to them. These provisions are to a great extent taken from analogous enactments of the British Parliament, relating to the removal to their native place of lascars found vagrant in England and of English seamen left destitute in colonial ports.

When the system of the Bill is in complete operation, several questions with regard to the relation of the vagrants to the criminal law, which are already serious, will acquire still further gravity. The exercise of criminal jurisdiction over European British subjects has been much facilitated of late years by the establishment of the High Court at Agra, the Chief Court at Lahore, and the Recorders' Courts in British Burmá; and still further provision for local trial will shortly be made in Bengal Proper. It is, however, not to be denied that jurisdiction over European British subjects is still in an eminently unsatisfactory condition, so far as regards the particular class to which the vagrants belong. The consequences of the defective state of the law will become much more serious as soon as any attempt is made to deal with European vagrancy on a great scale. Men of evil habits and violent character may be expected to be collected together in considerable numbers, not only at the work-houses, but at particular places at which suitable employment may be procurable for them, as, for example, on the Hill Roads, on which it has been suggested that they may be largely employed. The dangers which may arise from such collections of persons triable even for petty offences only at great distances, and therefore practically out of reach of the arm of the law, it is scarcely necessary to describe.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, though it does not apply to European British subjects beyond the Presidency towns (except so far as it regulates the procedure of the High Court at Agra and the Chief Court at Lahore), has a certain modified application to Europeans who are not British subjects and to Americans. It is, therefore, proposed by the Bill that when, after the enquiry mentioned in the fourth section, any person of European extraction has been found to be a vagrant and has been registered as such, he shall, during the remainder of his stay in India, be subject in the Mofussil to the Code of Criminal Procedure as if he were an European, not a British subject. But he will not of course be allowed to plead his vagrancy in bar of the jurisdiction of a High or Chief Court, if for any reason he has been committed to it. There will be a certain appropriateness in such legislation as has been just described, since it appears from the descriptive lists of vagrants furnished to the Government that a not inconsiderable number of them are not European British subjects, but belong to the German, French and other nationalities. The class is not one between whose sub-divisions it appears necessary or expedient to draw nice distinctions, in respect of their liability to punishment for breaches of the criminal law.

The present Bill does not deal with a very important subject closely connected with European vagrancy—the protection proper to be given to seamen brought in the course of their occupation to Indian ports. Such protection can only be given effectually by English statutory enactments. There is, however, reason to believe that the Board of Trade is addressing itself to this point in an amended Merchant Shipping Act which it is preparing, and the Government of India has requested the Secretary of State to keep the attention of the Board directed to the subject.

The Bill provides that the Governor General in Council shall declare what functionaries shall be invested with the powers given by the Bill in Native States, whither numerous European vagrants are shown to resort, causing propably more political evil than in any other part of India.

SIMLA;
The 15th July 1868.

WHITLEY STOKES,
Asst. Secy. to the Govt. of India,
Home Dept., (Legislative).

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 6th August 1868, and was referred to a Select Committee, with instructions to make their report thereon in one month:—

No. 20 OF 1868.

A Bill to define the jurisdiction of the Courts in Coorg.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to define the jurisdiction of the Civil and Criminal Courts in the Province of Coorg; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title. Commencement of Act.

1. This Act may be called "The Coorg Courts' Act, 1868," and shall come into operation on the day of Grades of Courts in Coorg.

2. There shall be seven grades of Courts in the province of Coorg which shall be in addition to any Courts of Small Causes and to any other Courts established under any Act hereafter passed by the Governor General of India in Council (that is to say),—

(1.) The Court of the Súbahdár of the second class.

(2.) The Court of the Súbahdár of the first class.

(3.) The Court of the Assistant Superintendent of the second class.

(4.) The Court of the Assistant Superintendent of the first class.

(5.) The Court of the Superintendent.

(6.) The Court of Sessions.

(7.) The Court of the Judicial Commissioner.

Civil Jurisdiction.

Commissioner may declare to which grade a Súbahdár or Assistant Superintendent shall belong.

3. Subject to any orders that may from time to time be issued by the Governor General of India in Council, the Commissioner of Coorg shall have power to declare to which of the said grades any Súbahdár and any Assistant Superintendent shall belong.

Commissioner may invest any Párbatiyagár or Náib Súbahdár with power to try and determine suits up to Rupees fifty.

4. The Commissioner may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General of India in Council, invest any Párbatiyagár or Náib Súbahdár with power to try and determine suits for money due whether on bond or other contract or for rent, or for moveable property, or for the value of such property, or for damages, when the debt, damage, or demand does not exceed in amount or value the sum of Rupees fifty, and to prescribe the local limits within which the Párbatiyagár or Náib Súbahdár so invested shall exercise such power.

Jurisdiction of Court of Súbahdár of the second class.

5. The Court of the Súbahdár of the second class shall have power to try and determine suits of every description in which the subject-matter does not exceed Rupees one hundred in value or amount.

Jurisdiction of Court of Súbahdár of the first class.

6. The Court of the Súbahdár of the first class shall have power to try and determine suits of every description in which the subject-matter does not exceed Rupees three hundred in value or amount.

Jurisdiction of Court of Assistant Superintendent of the second class.

7. The Court of the Assistant Superintendent of the second class shall have power to try and determine suits of every description in which the subject-matter does not exceed Rupees one thousand in value or amount, and, subject to the provisions and limitations hereinafter prescribed, to hear and determine appeals from the original decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the rules of procedure) from the orders of the Courts of the Súbahdárs of the first and second classes respectively, and of Párbatiyagárs or Náib Súbahdárs invested as aforesaid.

Jurisdiction of Court of Assistant Superintendent of the first class.

8. The Court of the Assistant Superintendent of the first class shall have power to try and determine suits of every description in which the subject-matter does not exceed Rupees three thousand in value or amount, and, subject to the provisions and limitations hereinafter prescribed, to hear and determine appeals from the original decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the rules of procedure for the time being in force in Coorg) from the orders of the Courts of the Súbahdárs of the first and second classes respectively, and of Párbatiyagárs or Náib Súbahdárs invested as aforesaid.

Jurisdiction of Superintendent.

9. The Court of the Superintendent shall have power to try and determine suits of every description and of any amount, and to hear and determine appeals from the original decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the said rules of procedure) from the orders of the Courts of Súbahdárs and Assistant Superintendents of both classes respectively, and of Párbatiyagárs or Náib Súbahdárs invested as aforesaid.

Jurisdiction of the Court of Judicial Commissioner.

10. The Court of the Judicial Commissioner shall have power to hear and determine appeals from the original decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the said rules of procedure) from the orders of the Superintendent, and also applications for a special appeal from the decisions passed in regular appeals by the Superintendent and Assistant Superintendents of both grades.

Time for presenting appeals.

11. The memorandum of appeal prepared in the form and containing the particulars mentioned in the Code of Civil Procedure shall be presented in the Court empowered to hear an appeal within the period hereinafter specified, unless the appellant shows sufficient cause to the satisfaction of such Court for not having presented the memorandum of appeal within such period, that is to say, thirty days if the appeal lie to the Assistant Superintendents or Superintendent, and ninety days if the appeal lie to the Judicial Commissioner.

The said period shall be reckoned from and exclusive of the day on which the decision or order appealed against was passed, and also exclusive of such time as may be requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree or order from which the appeal is made.

Applications for special appeal shall be presented in the Court of the Judicial Commissioner within the period hereinbefore fixed for appeals.

Extraordinary original jurisdiction of Judicial Commissioner's Court.

12. The Court of the Judicial Commissioner shall have power to remove and to try and determine as a Court of extraordinary original jurisdiction, any suit within the jurisdiction of any Court in the said province of Coorg, when the Judicial Commissioner thinks proper to do so, either on the agreement of the parties to that effect, or for purposes of justice, the reasons for so doing being recorded on the proceedings of his Court.

Judicial Commissioner to superintend and to frame rules of practice for subordinate Courts.

13. The Judicial Commissioner shall have superintendence over all Courts in the said province, and shall have power to call for returns and to make and issue general rules for regulating the practice and proceedings of such Courts, and also to prescribe forms for every proceeding in the said Courts for which he thinks necessary that a form be provided, and also for keeping all books, entries and accounts to be kept by the officers, and also to settle tables of fees to be allowed to the attorneys, vakeels, and all clerks and officers of such Courts, and from time to time to alter any such rule, form or table.

The rules so made, and the forms so framed, and the tables so settled, shall be used and observed in the said Courts: Provided that such rules, forms and tables be not inconsistent with the provisions of any law in force for the time being, and shall before they are issued have received the sanction of the Commissioner.

Governor General in Council may invest any one with the powers of a Superintendent or Assistant Superintendent.

14. Whenever the state of the public business requires it, the Governor General of India in Council may invest any person with the powers of a Superintendent or Assistant Superintendent in any part of the province of Coorg.

Court in which suit shall be instituted.

15. Every suit shall be instituted in the Court of the lowest grade competent to try it: Provided that no suit cognizable by a Court of Small Causes which may hereafter be established, shall be heard and determined in any other Court having any jurisdiction within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such Court of Small Causes.

Appeal to be from all decisions, except when expressly prohibited.

16. Except when otherwise provided in any law for the time being in force, an appeal shall lie from the decisions of the Courts of original jurisdiction to the Courts authorized by this Act to hear appeals from the decisions of those Courts.

Superintendent may distribute business among subordinate Courts.

17. The Superintendent may direct the business in the Courts subordinate to him whether or not they have their sittings in the same place, to be distributed among such Courts in such way as he thinks fit: Provided that no Court shall try any suit in which the amount or value of the claim shall exceed its proper jurisdiction.

Superintendent may prescribe to Appellate Courts the local limits within which to exercise their appellate jurisdiction.

18. The Superintendent may from time to time, with the concurrence and approval of the Commissioner, prescribe to each of the Appellate Courts subordinate to him such local limits within which they shall respectively exercise their appellate jurisdiction.

Transfer of suits from subordinate Court to that of the Superintendent or Assistant.

19. The Superintendent may, on the petition of either party, or in the absence of such petition, withdraw any suit instituted in any Court subordinate to him, and try such suit himself or refer it for trial to any other such subordinate Court, and competent in respect of the value or amount of the suit to try the same.

The Superintendent may also withdraw any appeal instituted in the Court of any Assistant Superintendent subordinate to him, and try the appeal himself or refer it for trial to the Court of any other Assistant Superintendent in his province.

Judicial Commissioner may order transfer of suits from one subordinate Court to another.

20. The Judicial Commissioner may order that the cognizance of any suit or appeal instituted in any Court subordinate to his Court, not being in a Court of Small Causes, shall be transferred to any other such subordinate Court competent in respect of the value or amount of the subject-matter of the suit or appeal to try the same.

Criminal Jurisdiction.

Criminal powers to be exercised by Súbahdárs and Assistant Superintendents.

21. The criminal powers to be exercised by the first four grades of Courts mentioned in section two respectively, shall be the powers with which the several officers presiding in those Courts are from time to time invested by the Governor General of India in Council under section 23 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

Governor General in Council may invest any Párbatiyagár or Náib Súbahdár with the powers of a subordinate Magistrate of the 2nd Class.

22. The Governor General of India in Council shall have power from time to time specially to invest any Párbatiyagár or Náib Súbahdár with the powers of a subordinate Magistrate of the second class as defined in the Code of Criminal Procedure within such limits as the said Governor General in Council may think proper.

Criminal powers to be exercised by the Superintendent.

23. The Superintendent, shall exercise the powers of a Magistrate as defined in the Code of Criminal Procedure, and shall hear appeals according to the provisions of the same Code relating to the hearing of appeals by Magistrates from the sentences and orders of Courts subordinate to the Magistrate of the district.

The Superintendent may also be invested by the said Governor General in Council with the powers described in Act No. XV of 1862 (to amend the Code of Criminal Procedure).

Sessional jurisdiction of the Superintendent of the Ashtagram Division to be exercised in Coorg.

24. When a commitment in a case triable under the Code of Criminal Procedure by a Court of Session is made by the said Superintendent or by any other officer in the said province competent to commit to the Court of Sessions, such commitment shall be made to the Superintendent and Session Judge of the Ashtagram Division in the Province of Mysore for the time being, and the case shall be heard and determined by him:

Provided that for the trial and determination of all cases so committed, the said Session Judge shall, from time to time, hold his sittings in Coorg:

Provided also that he shall not exercise any appellate jurisdiction under the said Code of Criminal Procedure.

Appeals from sentences and orders passed by Superintendent and other Officers vested with full powers to lie direct to the Judicial Commissioner.

25. Appeals from sentences and orders passed by the Superintendent or by any officer subordinate to him exercising full powers of a Magistrate, from which an appeal is allowed under the Code of Criminal Procedure, shall lie to the Judicial Commissioner and shall be heard and determined by him:

Provided that nothing herein contained shall be deemed to prevent the Judicial Commissioner from exercising under the said Code of Criminal Procedure all or any of the powers of the High Court vested in him.

Proceedings in Criminal cases to be regulated by Code of Criminal Procedure.

26. Save as in this Act otherwise provided, the proceedings in all criminal cases of any description brought in any Court in the Province of Coorg shall be regulated by the Code of Criminal Procedure.

Confirmation of sentences passed by Superintendent of Ashtagram.

27. All sentences and orders heretofore passed by the Superintendent of Ashtagram in his capacity of Session Judge of Coorg shall be deemed to be as valid as if this Act had then been passed.

The Judicial Commissioner may frame rules for the conduct of business in the Criminal Courts.

28. It shall be lawful for the Judicial Commissioner, with the approval of the Commissioner, to frame rules for the conduct of business transacted by the Courts aforesaid, and from time to time to alter and add to such rules: Provided that such rules, alterations and additions are consistent with this Act and with the Code of Criminal Procedure.

All such rules, alterations and additions shall be published in the local Gazette.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THIS Bill, which has been framed by Mr. Saunders, the late Judicial Commissioner of Coorg, embodies the details requisite to ensure the efficient working of the courts of that province, and is modelled on the Acts recently passed for the administration of civil and criminal justice in the Panjáb, the Central Provinces, and Aden.

The several grades of courts of civil and criminal jurisdiction in Coorg are enumerated in section 2. The Daryáft Kachahrí has not been included, as the Commissioner of Coorg thinks that it may be abolished. The functions of this court, both in its original and appellate sides, will, if the Bill becomes law, devolve upon the Assistant Superintendents. The Bill divides the courts of Súbahdárs and Assistant Superintendents into two classes, and limits their pecuniary jurisdiction in civil cases accordingly. All the Súbahdárs have jurisdiction at present up to rupees 200, and the Bill provides for the maintenance of two classes of courts for these officers, making the pecuniary limit in one class rupees 100, and in the other rupees 300. This will enable the Commissioner to restrict the jurisdiction of the less experienced and efficient Taluq Officers in the trial of civil cases, and afford an incentive to Súbahdárs generally to qualify themselves for the exercise of the higher jurisdiction allotted to those of the first class, which is identical with that of the Amildárs in Mysore. Assistant Superintendents are divided into first and second class Assistants, instead of preserving the present nomenclature of European and Native Assistants.

Sections 3 and 4 empower the Commissioner generally to declare to which grade of court any Súbahdár or Assistant may respectively belong, and to invest Párbatiyagárs or Náib Súbahdárs with a limited jurisdiction in civil cases. This will obviate the necessity for frequent references being made to the Government of India, and prevent the delay necessarily incurred thereby. A similar provision is contained in sections 5 and 6 of Act No. XIV of 1865 for the Central Provinces.

Sections 5 and 6 prescribe the pecuniary jurisdiction of Súbahdárs in civil cases.

Sections 7 and 8 define the jurisdiction, original and appellate, of the first and second class Assistant Superintendents. The original jurisdiction of the second class is limited to rupees 1,000, and that of the first class to rupees 3,000, the present limit of jurisdiction exercised by the Daryáft Kachahrí. As regards the appellate jurisdiction of these courts, the Bill gives them, equally with the Superintendent, the power of hearing appeals from decisions of Súbahdárs and Párbatiyagárs. This jurisdiction they will, under sections 7, 8, and 18, exercise within certain territorial limits, which may, from time to time, be assigned to them by the Superintendent with the concurrence of the Commissioner. The Superintendent will also be competent under section 17 to refer appeals to those courts for trial and determination.

In section 9, unlimited original jurisdiction is given to the Superintendent, and also appellate jurisdiction over all courts subordinate to him. As it is not desirable to allow more than one special appeal in civil cases, the Bill makes no provision for the Superintendent entertaining special appeals; but as he should be able to supervise effectually the working of the Súbahdárs' courts, provision has been made for his hearing regular appeals from the decisions of Súbahdárs and Párbatiyagárs, as well as from those of the Assistant Superintendents.

Section 10 gives appellate and special appellate jurisdiction in civil cases to the Judicial Commissioner. As a general rule, appeals from the decisions of Súbahdárs and Párbatiyagárs will lie to the Assistant Superintendent or Superintendent, and special appeals to this court. Likewise appeals from the decisions of Assistant Superintendents in civil cases will lie to the Superintendent, and special appeals to this court. In cases decided by the Superintendent, the appeals will lie directly to the Judicial Commissioner.

Section 11 prescribes the form in which memoranda of appeals are to be prepared, and the time within which such appeals are to be preferred. Although the Bill makes no special provision for the introduction of the Code of Civil Procedure into Coorg, it has, under the authority of the Government of India, been taken as an authoritative guide by the courts in Coorg, as well as in Mysore, in matters in which its provisions are not contrary to existing rules; and although, among a primitive race like the Coorgs, it is not desirable to enforce rigidly the technical provisions of the Code, it seems expedient to provide that appeals should be prepared in the form prescribed therein. In other sections the Bill simply refers to the rules of procedure in force. The "rules for the guidance of Amildárs in civil suits" have been made equally applicable to the Súbahdárs in Coorg; and having been found to work well, it seems inexpedient that the procedure of these courts should be rendered more difficult and precise by the extension of Act No. VIII of 1859 in its entirety.

By section 12 extraordinary original jurisdiction has been assigned to the Judicial Commissioner's court, in conformity with the precedent found in Act No. XVIII of 1867, to enable it to take up cases of large amounts in which the Superintendent may be personally interested, or where, for other sufficient reasons, such course may be necessary to promote the ends of justice.

Section 13 empowers the Judicial Commissioner to frame rules of practice for the guidance of the civil courts, and to exercise a general supervision over them.

In section 14, provision is made for the Local Government (which, in the case of Coorg, is the Governor General in Council) investing any person with the powers of Superintendent or Assistant Superintendent.

Sections 19 and 20 respectively empower the Superintendent and Judicial Commissioner to transfer suits from one court to another.

With regard to criminal jurisdiction, section 21 provides that Súbahdárs and Assistant Superintendents shall severally exercise such magisterial functions as may, from time to time, be conferred on them by the Local Government under section 23 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

The following section 22 provides for the Local Government investing any Párbatiyagárs or Náib Súbahdárs with powers of a subordinate magistrate of the second class.

Section 23 defines the criminal powers of the Superintendent, which are to be those of magistrate of the district. The concluding clause of this section renders it compulsory that the Superintendent should also be vested with the enhanced powers described in Act No. XV of 1862.

Section 24 provides for the Superintendent of Ashtagram exercising sessional jurisdiction with regard to cases committed to him by the magistrates in Coorg, and directs that such cases shall be tried by him in Coorg, in accordance with the practice hitherto observed. This and the following section have been modelled on sections 12 and 18 of Act No. X of 1863 (An Act to improve the administration of civil and criminal justice in the District of Darjeeling).

Section 26 prescribes that all criminal proceedings shall be regulated by the Code of Criminal Procedure.

Section 27 is an indemnity clause, legalizing all sentences and orders heretofore passed by the Superintendent of Ashtagram as Sessions Judge of Coorg.

The next section empowers the Judicial Commissioner to frame general rules for the guidance of the criminal courts in Coorg.

As Coorg is not sub-divided into districts, it is unnecessary to make any specific mention in the Bill as to the court of the Superintendent being deemed a District Court, or to insert the usual provisions in regard to the particular courts in which suits for immoveable property, situate in different districts, are to be instituted and tried.

SIMLA,
The 15th July 1868.

WHITLEY STOKES,
Asst. Secy. to the Govt. of India,
Home Dept. (Legislative).

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 6th August 1868:—

No. 21 OF 1868.

A Bill for the appointment of Justices of the Peace.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to the appointment of Justices of the Peace; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Repeal of enactments.

1. The enactments mentioned in the schedule hereto annexed are hereby repealed to the extent specified in the third column of the same schedule.

Issue of commissions to Justices of the Peace for the Mofussil.

2. The High Court of Judicature established at Fort William in Bengal shall, when so required by a warrant from the Governor General of India in Council, and the several High Courts established at Madras, Bombay, and in the North-Western Provinces of the Presidency of Bengal shall, when so required by a warrant from the Local Government, issue commissions to such and so many of the Covenanted Civil Servants of the Crown in India, or other British inhabitants as the said Governor General in Council or the Local Government (as the case may be) shall think properly qualified to act as Justices of the Peace within and for the territories (beyond the limits of the Presidency towns) in which such High Courts respectively exercise original criminal jurisdiction over European British subjects of Her Majesty under the Act of the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth years of Victoria, Chapter one hundred and four and the Letters Patent last issued pursuant thereto, the Act of the Twenty-eighth year of Victoria, Chapter fifteen, and the notifications for the time being issued pursuant thereto, the Act No. XXIII of 1866 (to correct two clerical errors in the Letters Patent of the High Court of Judicature for the Presidency of Bombay), and any other Act of Parliament or Act of the Governor General of India in Council for the time being in force.

Issue of commissions to Justices of the Peace for the Presidency Towns.

3. The High Court of Judicature established at Fort William in Bengal shall, when so required by a warrant from the Governor General of India in Council, and the several High Courts established at Madras and Bombay shall, when so required by a warrant from the Local Government, issue commissions to any persons resident within British India and not being the subjects of any foreign State whom the said Governor General in Council and Local Governments respectively shall think properly qualified to act within the limits of the towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay respectively as Justices of the Peace.

Issue of commissions to Justices of the Peace for the Panjáb.

4. The Chief Court of the Panjáb shall, when so required by the Lieutenant Governor of the Panjáb, issue commissions to such and so many of the said civil servants or other British inhabitants as he shall think properly qualified to act as Justices of the Peace within and for the territories in which the said Chief Court exercises original criminal jurisdiction over European British subjects of Her Majesty under the Panjáb Chief Court Act, 1866, and any other Act of the Governor General of India in Council for the time being in force.

Commissions to be sealed and tested.

5. All such commissions shall be issued under the seal of the Court issuing them in the name of Her Majesty, and shall be tested in the name of the Chief Justice or (in the case of the Chief Court of the Panjáb) the Senior Judge of such Court.

Justices to act according to tenor of commissions.

6. All persons nominated and appointed under section two, three or four, shall have full power and authority to act as Justices of the Peace, but according only to the tenor of the respective commissions wherein they are so nominated and appointed.

Declarations to be taken by Justices of the Peace.

7. Provided that no such person shall be capable of acting as a Justice of the Peace until he shall have made and subscribed before some other Justice of the Peace or the chief civil officer of any station within the province or place in and for which his commission shall have issued declarations to the following effect:—

"I declare that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty."

"I declare that I will truly and faithfully discharge the office of a Justice of the Peace."

Subscriptions to declarations to be kept.

8. The subscriptions of such persons to the said declarations shall be deposited and kept with the records in the Home Department of the Office of the Secretary to the Government in the province or place wherein such declarations shall have been made.

Supersession of commissions.

9. Every such Court shall, upon requisition in writing from the Governor General in Council in the case of the High Court established at Fort William, and from the Local Government in the cases of the High Courts established at Madras and Bombay, and in the North-Western Provinces and of the Chief Court of the Panjáb, from time to time supersede any commissions issued by such Courts respectively, and shall, upon like requisition, issue new commissions for the purposes aforesaid to such persons as are duly nominated in that behalf under section two, three or four.

Commissions to be filed and recorded.

10. All commissions issued under this Act shall be filed and recorded in the Courts by which they are issued.

General commission need not be renewed.

11. It shall not be necessary to issue a new general commission of the peace whenever any persons not named in the general commission last issued are nominated and appointed to act as Justices of the Peace. But such general commission shall remain in full force, and the commissions subsequently issued shall be filed as supplementary thereto.

Present Justices of the Peace to be deemed to be appointed under this Act.

12. Every person now acting as a Justice of the Peace according to the tenor of any commission issued by any of the said High Courts, shall be deemed to have been appointed under this Act, and shall make commitments to the Court prescribed in that behalf by the law in force for the time being.

Act No. VI of 1845.	An Act to amend the Law regarding the issue of Commissions of the Peace.	The whole.
Act No. XXVII of 1864.	An Act to substitute certain declarations for the Oaths of Qualification taken by Justices of the Peace.	The whole.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Mysore and Coorg being now under the jurisdiction of the High Court of Madras, as regards offences committed therein by European British subjects, doubts have been raised as to whether the High Court at Fort William can any longer exercise the power to issue Commissions of the Peace for those districts which was vested in it by Statute 33 Geo. III, c. 52. On the other hand, the Government of Madras has no power to issue such commissions, inasmuch as Coorg and Mysore are not subordinate to the Madras Presidency. Under these circumstances, it seems necessary for the Legislature to interpose; and the present Bill accordingly provides that commissions for Justices of the Peace shall in future be issued in all cases by the Court to which they commit.

The opportunity has been taken of consolidating the seven enactments which now contain the law relating to the issue and supersession of commissions to Justices of the Peace, and to the administration of their oaths of office.

READ the following despatch:—

FINANCIAL. INDIA OFFICE;

No. 290. London, 9th July 1868.

To His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Governor General of India in Council.

SIR,—I have considered in Council your Military letter, dated the 9th March last, No. 96, submitting a recommendation from the Bombay Government that Major Raitt, Superintendent of the House of Correction at Bombay, should be exempted from the operation of the rule which requires that Military pensions shall merge in Civil salaries, and you state that that Officer's case affords a striking illustration of the hardship of the rule, which you earnestly trust Her Majesty's Government may see fit to rescind.

2. In compliance with your recommendation and that of the Government of Bombay, I will not object to Major Raitt's drawing his pension of £241-12 per annum, in addition to the salary of Rs. 300 per mensem attached to the appointment he is now holding.

3. I am also willing, in accordance with your strong recommendation, to authorize the following modification of the rule. When an Officer who has retired on a pension obtained not on medical certificate, but after a prescribed period of service, is subsequently employed in any public capacity, he shall be permitted to draw the pension, in addition to the salary of the office to which he may be appointed; but in the event of a Military Officer resigning the service, after he has been appointed to a Civil office, he must at the same time vacate that office. He may, however, be re-appointed to the office, not as a matter of course, but only in the event of your considering it decidedly for the benefit of the public service.

I have, &c.,

(Sd.) STAFFORD H. NORTHCOTE.

ORDERED, that the above be communicated to the Foreign, Home, Military, and Public Works Departments; the several Local Governments and Administrations; the Comptroller General of Accounts, and the several Accountants General and Deputy Accountants General in independent charge.

Also, that it be published in the Gazette of India.

The 7th August 1868.

No. 1653.

The Governor General in Council is pleased to promulgate the following Rules regarding travelling allowances to Chaplains.

The Rules will take effect from the 1st day of August 1868:—

I.—Travelling allowances at the rate of 8 annas a mile per road, and 3 annas a mile per rail, will be allowed to a Chaplain who has already no charge for his joining a station to which he may be appointed either substantively or officiating, also to a Chaplain on his permanent transfer from one appointment to another under the orders of Government, and not at his own request. Provided that on return from furlough or any other leave, a Chaplain will join his station at his own expense. If his appointment has been changed during his absence, he will draw travelling allowance for the excess distance, if any, between his old and new station from the Presidency at the rates abovementioned.

II.—If, while absent on privilege leave, a Chaplain is required to perform duty for an absentee at a station other than his own, he will draw travelling allowance at the rates in Rule I. from his own station to that at which he is required to do duty.

III.—Travelling allowance at 12 annas a mile by road, and 3 annas a mile by rail, will be given to a Chaplain sent to officiate at other stations, or visiting out-stations, provided he proceeds farther than 5 miles if in receipt, at his own station, of conveyance allowance, or farther than 3 miles if not in receipt of that allowance. This rule is applicable to Chaplains of the Church of Scotland, Clergymen of the Additional Clergy Society, Missionaries of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, and the Church Missionary Society, and Roman Catholic Priests when visiting out-stations.

IV.—If any Chaplain or other person to whom Rule III. applies, obtains a free pass on any railway for visiting railway stations on the line, his travelling allowance by rail will be limited to 1½ anna per mile.

V.—A Chaplain officiating at a station to which a conveyance allowance is attached, will draw that allowance during his stay at the station.

VI.—A Chaplain may exchange the mileage admissible under Rule III. for an allowance of Rs. 6 a day for the period of absence from his principal station; but should he do so, he will not be entitled to any conveyance allowance under Rule V.

VII.—A Chaplain in receipt of conveyance allowance for a station will forfeit it when absent from his station on gazetted leave, but not when visiting another station and retaining substantive charge of his own.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

ABSTRACT OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNCIL OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA, ASSEMBLED FOR THE PURPOSE OF MAKING LAWS AND REGULATIONS UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE ACT OF PARLIAMENT, 24 & 25 VIC., CAP. 67.

The Council met at Simla on Thursday, the 6th August 1868.

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, presiding.
His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, G.C.S.I., K.C.B.
The Hon'ble G. N. Taylor.
The Hon'ble Major General Sir H. M. Durand, C.B., K.C.S.I.
The Hon'ble H. S. Maine.
The Hon'ble John Strachey.
The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple, K.C.S.I.
The Hon'ble F. R. Cockerell.

COORG COURTS' BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. TAYLOR introduced the Bill to define the jurisdiction of the Courts in Coorg, and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee, with instructions to report in one month. He said that it was unnecessary to take up the time of the Council with describing the Bill, as the Statement of Objects and Reasons which had for the last fortnight been in Hon'ble Members' hands, was in fact a running commentary on its provisions.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN DIVORCE BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. MAINE asked leave to postpone the presentation of the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill for conferring upon the High Courts of Judicature in India the jurisdiction and powers vested in the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial causes in England.

Leave was granted.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. Maine introduced the Bill for the appointment of Justices of the Peace. He said that his object in doing so was merely that it might appear in the Gazette, and be sent to the High Courts and the Chief Court of the Panjáb. He would not now ask the Council to refer it to a Select Committee.

The Hon'ble Mr. Cockerell observed that the Bill proposed to repeal certain sections of Statutes of George III and the whole of 2 & 3 William IV, c. 117, and expressed a doubt as to whether the Governor General in Council had power to repeal those enactments.

The Hon'ble Mr. Maine said that the power in question was expressly given to the Governor General in Council by the Indian Councils' Act, 24 & 25 Vic., c. 67, s. 22.

EMIGRATION OF COOLIES' BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. Strachey moved for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the law relating to the emigration of Native Labourers. He said that the Bill, which had been prepared at the desire of the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, was intended to make four small amendments in the law relating to the emigration of coolies, which had been found desirable since Act No. XIII of 1864 came into operation.

The probable length of the voyage from Madras to Mauritius between the months of November and March, is fixed at five weeks by section eight of that Act. This time had been found too short, and the Bill proposed to extend it to six weeks.

Section 47 of the Act required that the space to be provided for each adult emigrant shall be ten superficial feet on deck. The Bill proposed to increase this space to twelve superficial feet.

Section 64 of the Act empowered the Governor General in Council to prohibit, under certain specified circumstances, the emigration of coolies. With a view to greater promptitude of action in cases of emergency, the Bill proposed to extend this power to Local Governments, but provided that any notification by a Local Government prohibiting emigration, might be cancelled by the Governor General in Council.

Lastly, the Bill authorized the Governor General in Council to increase, within certain limits, the fees payable under Act XIII of 1864, for licensing depôts, recruiters, and emigrants.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The following Select Committee was named:—

On the Bill to define the jurisdiction of the Courts in Coorg,—the Hon'ble Messrs. Maine, Cockerell, and the Mover.

The Council adjourned till the 13th August 1868.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

OPERATIONS OF THE PAPER CURRENCY DEPARTMENT DURING THE YEAR 1867-68.

Simla, the 3rd August 1868.

No. 1541.

Read a report from the Head Commissioner of Paper Currency, Calcutta, No. 212, dated the 13th July 1868, on the Operations of the Paper Currency Department during the year 1867-68.

RESOLUTION.—The Governor General in Council observes that the circulation of the Notes in the several provinces of India generally shows a satisfactory result. It rose from eight to nine crores of Rupees during the year. The average circulation of the year under review was thirty lakhs more than that of the preceding year.

The Allahabad Circle shows a fair increase. The progress in the Bombay Circle was marked during a portion of the year, until about 1½ crores worth of Notes were presented for payment, because specie was wanted for the cotton districts where the Notes were not easily convertible. This latter circumstance was unfortunate, but the defect has been to some extent remedied by the establishment of an Office of Issue at Akola, in the cotton-producing province of Berar. It is to be hoped that hereby such facilities for encashment will be afforded that the sudden withdrawal of large quantities of Bombay Notes from circulation may not recur. The marked progress in the Nagpore Circle is the more satisfactory, because the result is partly attributed to the facilities for encashment afforded by the local authorities. The increase in the Kurrachee Circle also affords matter for congratulation.

On the other hand, the Lahore Circle and the Madras Circle show a falling off, and the Madras Branch Circles do not exhibit progress.

The extent to which the Notes are made use of for private remittances does not, under the explanation afforded in his report by the Head Commissioner, afford any ground for apprehension. On the other hand, the way in which the Notes returned to the Currency Department have been used by other public departments for Government remittances, is highly satisfactory.

The frequent loss of Notes or half Notes, during transmission by Post, continues to be a source of regret and discredit.

The general result is creditable to the Head Commissioner and to the Officers of the Currency Department. It also proves the interest taken in the circulation by the various Local Governments, upon whom indeed the promotion of this important affair must mainly depend.

ORDERED, that a copy of the above Resolution, and extracts of the report* of the Head Commissioner, with its enclosures,* be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India.

* To be returned

From Lieut. Colonel H. Hyde, R.E., Head Commissioner of Paper Currency, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Financial Department,—No. 212, dated 13th July 1868.

I have the honor to forward herewith the following statements, and to report on the operations of the Currency Department during the year 1867-68.

No. 1.—Statement of the value of Government Currency Notes in circulation throughout India during the year ending 31st March 1868.

No. 2.—Statement of the numbers of Currency Notes cancelled after circulation during the same period and of the percentage of the same.

2. Total Note Circulation.—The circulation at the Commencement of the year was... ...	Rs.	8,09,08,680

And at the close	„	9,06,95,690
Showing an increase of	Rs.	97,87,010
The maximum circulation was	Rs.	10,32,41,630
The minimum	„	7,83,54,890
And the average of the year	„	9,28,52,131
Being	„	29,58,952

more than the average of the previous year.

3. Calcutta Circle.—The circulation of Notes of the Calcutta Circle has fluctuated a little above or below the average of the year, namely, Rs. 2,93,12,665, and shows a favorable increase over the average circulation of the previous year of Rs. 9,21,227, or 3·245 per cent.

4. Allahabad Circle.—The average circulation of this circle has been	Rs.	32,48,512

or Rupees	„	6,55,329

more than that of the previous year, being equal to 25·271 per cent.

5. Lahore Circle.—The average here has been Rs. 24,05,651

And shows a falling off of	„	94,907

as compared with that of the previous year.

6. Madras Circle.—In Madras the average has been	Rs.	54,79,493

Or less than that of the previous year by	„	5,72,161

Here, however, the circulation shows a steady but small increase over that at the commencement of the year.

7. Madras Branch Circles.—These circles do not show any marked progress, the average circulation being Rs. 12,96,014 in all three circles.

8. Bombay Circle.—The average circulation here of the year has been Rs. 4,73,94,991, or Rs. 4,20,399 more than that of the previous year. The year commenced with a circulation of ...	Rs.	3,99,03,530

Steadily increased, until, by the end of December, it rose to	„	5,64,22,690
And within three months following fell to	„	4,18,19,210
Exhibiting a withdrawal of	„	1,46,03,480

of Notes, which is mainly owing to specie being needed to be remitted into the interior for the purchase of cotton, as the Notes, not being readily convertible, are not consequently in favor in the cotton districts. The determination of Government to open a Circle of Issue at Akola in the heart of these cotton districts, will no doubt be attended with beneficial results, for, by establishing their ready convertibility at Akola, it will prevent such large withdrawals of specie from Bombay, attended, as they must be, with expense for remittance.

8. Nagpore Circle.—This circle was removed from the Calcutta and subordinated to the Bombay Circle on 1st August 1867, and all Notes of the old or "Calcutta and Nagpore" issue were withdrawn on receipt at the Currency Office, which amounted in value at the time to Rs. 52,14,870, by which means the number of these Notes outstanding at the close of the year, and in the hands of the public, has been reduced to Rs. 1,48,120. The circulation of the Circle Notes has not, however, suffered by the change, but has considerably increased; the average of the year having been ... ... Rs. 21,23,967

Against an average of ... ... „ 10,67,342

of the previous year, showing an increase of Rs. 10,56,625 or 98·996 per cent—

a most marked and favorable result. This result is not, however, mainly owing to the removal of the circle as a branch of Bombay, but also to the measures taken by the Accountant General of the Central Provinces to give effect to the Government Resolution of 14th January 1867 for the free encashment of Notes at the Government Treasuries of the Central Provinces.

9. Kurrachee Circle.—This circle also shows a marked increase in the circulation. The average of the year was ... Rs. 15,90,835

Against that of ... ... „ 10,13,764 of the year preceding, or more by ... ... Rs. 5,77,071 equal to 56·923 per cent.

10. Transactions with the public.—The value of Notes issued to and received from the public for cash or other notes during the year is shown below:—

Circle.	Notes issued.	Notes received.
	Rs.	Rs.
Calcutta	20,54,18,180	21,63,07,390
Madras	88,79,560	69,65,870
Bombay	8,88,08,270	8,93,86,870
Allahabad	53,90,620	40,85,640
Lahore	45,18,850	24,34,260
Calicut	16,46,110	18,95,710
Trichinopoly	12,56,290	6,62,900
Vizagapatam	5,25,300	4,85,200
Nagpore	79,75,180	27,54,650
Kurrachee	33,22,740	14,45,570
Total	32,77,41,100	13,74,24,060

11. Remittances of Notes.—The use of Notes as remittances cannot be prevented. Once issued to the public, there can be no interference with them. The attempt to prevent the use of Notes for remittance purposes by restricting the issue of Notes of large value has failed, for the public used small Notes for that purpose, and the additional expense and labor connected with their issue had to be borne by Government. This restriction has been cancelled, and Notes are used freely for remittance from the Branch Office to the Head Office, where, by the provisions of the Currency Act, they must be cashed. During the year the value of Notes thus cashed has been—

At Calcutta	Rs.	1,00,15,410
„ Madras	„	16,90,560
„ Bombay	„	67,48,430
		1,84,54,400

The payment for them had to be made out of the coin reserve held at the Head Offices, and re-payment had to be adjusted—

1*st*.—By issue to the public.

2*nd*.—By the cashing of Head Circle Notes at the Branch Offices.

3*rd*.—By issue to Accountants General at the Presidencies for cash for remittance to the treasuries at the Branches.

4*th*.—By cancellation, payment being made by the Accountants General.

12. By the first of these modes, the accumulation of Notes of Branch Circles is reduced without any effort by this department. At Bombay Rs. 41,72,730 were re-issued to the public, of which Rs. 22,00,000 were taken up in the course of one week. Here Rs. 27,06,570 have been re-issued. The second course has a similar effect, and with a view to prevent the Branch Offices cashing more Notes than are held at the Head Office, or the Head Office issuing more Notes than represent the balance available for adjustment, returns are submitted by the Offices to each other for guidance. The Presidency Accountants General have taken up large amounts of Circle Notes for cash during the year, in order to remit their value to the treasuries where the Branch Offices are situated, and it has been a convenient and economical mode of replenishing those treasuries. The last course which might have inconvenienced the Presidency Treasuries has therefore not been resorted to. At Madras, a large portion, if not the whole, of the Circle Notes were taken up by the Accountant General for remittances, and here the following amounts were remitted by means of Circle Notes, viz. :—

To Allahabad	Rs.	17,09,430
„ Lahore	„	7,44,000
„ Nagpore	„	56,92,740

Of the latter, Rs. 34,35,520 were adjusted by remitting new Notes from Nagpore to Bombay, thus replenishing the Bombay Treasury to that extent at the time of the transfer of the Nagpore Circle as a branch of the Bombay Circle. Notwithstanding all these adjustments, there was a balance at the end of the year of other Circle Notes of Rs. 1,09,83,150 against a sum of Rs. 56,51,920 held at the same time last year; but there has been no embarrassment felt at the Head Offices owing to the encashment of Circle Notes in such large amounts.

13. New Pattern Notes.—During the course of the year, Notes of a new pattern were issued. The chief features in these new Notes are that they are printed in colors which make forgery more difficult, and that they exhibit their values in English and in some of the Native characters of the district in which they are intended to circulate, which make them readily understood by all, except those of the most illiterate class, and they are consequently preferred by the Natives to the old pattern Notes.

14. Forged Notes.—No cases of forged Notes are reported at any of the Branch Circles, nor have any turned up here. In Bombay and Madras a few solitary cases are reported, but they have readily been detected at the Currency Offices, and no loss has been sustained.

15. Lost Notes.—By far the greater number of Notes lost are reported to be thefts in transmission by Post, and these are, with few exceptions, half Notes. A large correspondence with the public and much trouble is experienced by all the Offices in regard to lost Notes. Very few of the lost Notes are even recovered by the owners after their presentation and payment at the Currency Offices, for, after tracing them from hand to hand, they are traced to some one who has received them bonâ fide in course of business, and therefore has a legal right to them, but who cannot say from whom he has received them. Only Rs. 15,000 in securities are held by me as investments made for the value of entire Notes merely lost, and not traced after the lapse of one or two years.

16. Cancelled Notes.—Owing to the issue of the new pattern Notes alluded to in paragraph 13, most of the old pattern Notes received for exchange were cancelled, and thus increased the number of Notes disposed of in this way during the year to 1,268,343 pieces, which, at 1·6432 per cent., has cost Rs. 20,841-6-7 against Rs. 8,37,457 cancelled in the previous year. The cancellations of large numbers during the first issue of new pattern Notes at the Calcutta and Bombay Circles necessarily brought about some arrears of work, which are now all worked up.

17. In conclusion I beg to state that the Currency Department has during the year worked steadily, and is gradually extending its usefulness. I hope to be able in the course of a few days to submit a report, taking a retrospective view of the working of this department since its commencement, when I will enter more fully on all the subjects connected with currency, and more particularly that of lost and stolen Notes.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

LEGISLATIVE.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 13th August 1868, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. XX OF 1868.

An Act to give validity to the levy of certain Duties in Lucknow.

Preamble.

WHEREAS under the authority given by Act No. XVIII of 1864 (to provide for the appointment of a Municipal Committee in the City of Lucknow), section thirteen, the Chief Commissioner of Oudh declared that duties on certain things and at certain rates should "for the year 1865-66" be levied in respect of such things when brought into Lucknow for consumption or use therein, and such declaration was, on the ninth day of May 1865, sanctioned by the Governor General of India in Council. And whereas doubts have arisen as to whether such declaration and sanction remained in force down to the twenty-seventh day of July 1868, and it is expedient to remove such doubts and to indemnify the officers and farmers who have acted under the said declaration and sanction and the said Chief Commissioner's rules from time to time in force as to the mode of levying and collecting the said duties; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Validation of declaration, sanction and rules from 9th May 1865 till 27th July 1868.

1. The said declaration and sanction shall be deemed to have been in force from the ninth day of May 1865 to the twenty-seventh day of July 1868, and the said rules from time to time in force shall be deemed to have been valid under the said section.

Indemnification of officers.

2. Every officer and farmer is hereby indemnified for anything done before the passing of this Act which might lawfully have been done if this Act had been in force; and no suit or other proceeding shall be maintained against any such officer or farmer in respect of anything so done.

WHITLEY STOKES,
Asst. Secy. to the Govt. of India,
Home Dept. (Legislative.)

The following Report of a Select Committee, together with the Bill as settled by them, was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations, on the 13th August 1868 :—

REPORT.

We, the Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill for conferring upon the High Courts of Judicature in India the jurisdiction and powers vested in the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes in England was referred, have the honour to report that we have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the Appendix.

The Bill, as introduced, extended to India the principal provisions of the English Divorce Act (20 & 21 Vic., c. 85) as amended by 22 & 23 Vic., c. 61, and 23 & 24 Vic., c. 144. We have added the provisions contained in the recent amending Act 29 Vic., cap. 32.

The Bill, as introduced, applied only to the High Courts. We have made it applicable also to the principal Civil Courts in the Mofussil, and the greater part of the additions which we have made to the Bill, have necessarily followed from this extension. Thus, we have authorized the High Court (which is defined so as to include the Chief Court of the Panjáb) to remove and try, as a Court of original jurisdiction, suits instituted in the District Courts, and to transfer such suits from one District Court to another. We have empowered the District Judges to refer questions to the High Court: we have provided that decrees for divorce and decrees of nullity of marriage, when made by a District Judge, shall, like sentences of [illegible], be subject to confirmation by the High Court; and we have added a schedule of forms of the petitions and statements likely to be of common occurrence under the proposed Act. In Burma the 'District Judge' will be one of the Recorders. In the other Non-Regulation Provinces he will be the Commissioner of a Division, and in places beyond the limits of British India (for Christian subjects in which the Governor General in Council has now power to legislate), he will be such officer as the Governor General in Council shall appoint. In such places and in the Non-Regulation Provinces other than Burma, 'High Court,' is defined as the High Court or Chief Court to whose original criminal jurisdiction the petitioner is subject, or would be subject if he were an European British subject. A reference to the notification for the time being issued under Act 28 Vic., c. 15, will thus at once indicate the High Court intended. In Burma, 'High Court' will of course be the High Court at Fort William.

Great doubts prevail as to the extent to which English Courts will recognize Indian divorces or decrees of nullity in cases where the parties have been married in England, or have not a permanent Indian domicile. We have, therefore, limited the operation of the Act in this respect to cases in which the husband is a Christian, whose marriage has been celebrated in this country, and who at the date of the marriage had his domicile in India, and has retained such domicile down to the institution of the suit. Such persons alone will be forbidden (sec. 61) to maintain suits for criminal conversation.

We have excluded Roman Catholics from petitioning for decrees of dissolution of marriage.

We have defined, in accordance with English decisions, 'bigamy with adultery' and 'desertion.' We have also provided that no adultery shall be deemed to have been 'condoned,' unless where conjugal cohabitation has actually been resumed or continued, and thus precluded the doubt which exists in England as to whether condonation can be constituted by words only.

We have provided (sec. 10) that a wife may obtain a divorce when, subsequently to the marriage, the husband has changed his religion and taken another wife, in which case, when the new religion permits a plurality of wives, the High Court of Madras has lately held that he does not commit bigamy within the meaning of the Penal Code.

We have specified (sec. 11), in accordance with recent English cases, the grounds on which a petitioner for a divorce on account of adultery may be excused from making the adulterer a co-respondent. We have struck out the clause empowering the Court to make an alleged adulteress a co-respondent. The corresponding clause in the English Act has, it is believed, been a dead letter.

We have also struck out the provisions which the Bill as introduced contained for the intervention of the Solicitor to Government in cases of suspected collusion. We have provided (sec. 17) that any person suspecting collusion during the progress of the suit in the District Court, may apply to the High Court to remove the suit and try it as a Court of original jurisdiction. The High Court will then, if it think fit, remove and try the case, or direct the District Judge to take the steps necessary to enable him to make a proper decree.

In section 19 we have specified the grounds on which a decree of nullity of marriage may be pronounced.

Under the Indian Succession Act, sec. 4, in the case of a marriage celebrated since the 1st January 1866, the husband acquires no interest in his wife's property. We have, therefore (sec. 27), confined the power of granting a protection-order to cases in which the fourth section of that Act does not apply to the wife.

In section 33 we have provided that nothing shall be pleaded in answer to a petition for restitution of conjugal rights which would not be ground for a suit for judicial separation.

In section 35 we have provided, in accordance with English decisions, that the co-respondent shall not be ordered to pay the petitioner's costs (1) if the respondent was at the time of the adultery living apart from her husband and leading the life of a prostitute, or (2) if the co-respondent had not at the time of the adultery reason to believe the respondent to be a married woman.

We have expressly empowered (sec. 36) the Courts to grant alimony pendente lite whether the wife has or has not obtained a protection-order, and we have provided that such alimony shall in case of a decree for divorce or of nullity, continue payable until the decree is made absolute or is confirmed.

We have limited the powers of making orders as to the custody of children of Native fathers to cases of boys under the age of sixteen, and girls under the age of thirteen years. These ages have been fixed with reference to the Indian Marriage Act (V of 1865), sec. 48. In other cases, the children must be under eighteen years and unmarried. Here the age has been fixed with reference to the definition of 'minor' contained in the Indian Succession Act.

We propose (sec. 47) that petitions under the Act (other than petitions for alimony, custody of children and protection-orders), shall bear a stamp of five rupees; that petitions for a dissolution, a decree of nullity, or a judicial separation, shall (like the verifying affidavits in England) state the absence of collusion, and that the statements contained in every petition shall be verified like plaints.

We have made provisions (secs. 48, 49), as to suits on behalf of lunatics and suits by minors, and required, in the latter case, the next friend to render himself liable to pay the respondent's costs. The Code of Civil Procedure, which will regulate generally the proceedings under the Act, has no provision in this respect.

We have empowered (sec. 53) the Court to close the doors during the whole or any part of the proceedings. The absence of a similar power in England has justly been regretted.

We have empowered (sec. 54) the Courts to adjourn, from time to time, the hearing of any petition under the Act. The Code of Civil Procedure (Act VIII of 1859, secs. 109, 113) appears to provide for adjournments only at the first hearing.

The Indian Legislature has no power to limit the term within which the Privy Council may receive appeals: we have therefore (sec. 57) added to the clause permitting remarriage six months after a decree for dissolution, a proviso that no appeal shall have gone to England.

We have struck out as likely to be useless the provision which the Bill contained as to jactitation of marriage.

We have empowered (sec. 62) the High Courts and the Chief Court of the Panjáb to make rules consistent with the proposed Act and the Code of Civil Procedure.

We have re-arranged the sections, altered the title and preamble, and made several verbal changes in the body of the Bill; and we recommend that the Bill thus altered be republished, with this report, in the Gazette of India; that copies thereof be submitted to the learned Judges of the four High Courts and the Chief Court of the Panjáb for such remarks as they may think fit to offer; that they should also be asked whether they would recommend the addition of a clause empowering the Courts to make declarations of legitimacy and of the validity or invalidity of marriages; and that the further consideration of the Bill be postponed until the Council re-assembles in Calcutta.

AMENDED BILL.

A Bill to amend the law relating to Divorce and Matrimonial Causes in India.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to the divorce of certain persons professing the Christian religion domiciled in India, and to confer upon certain Courts jurisdiction in matters matrimonial as between these and other Christians; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

I.—Preliminary.

Short title. Commencement of Act.

1. This Act may be called "The Indian Divorce Act," and shall come into operation on the first day of January 1869.

Extent of Act.

2. Nothing in this Act shall be taken to authorize any Court to make decrees of dissolution of marriage or nullity of marriage, except in cases where the husband is a person professing the Christian religion, whose marriage has been celebrated in India and who, at the date of the marriage, had his domicil in India and has retained such domicil down to the institution of the suit, or except in cases where the wife is a person professing the Christian religion, whose marriage has been celebrated in India, and whose husband at the date of the marriage had his domicil in India, and has retained such domicil down to the institution of the suit; but who has since the celebration of his marriage exchanged his profession of Christianity for the profession of some other form of religion.

Interpretation clause.

3. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context,—

(1.) "High Court" means, in any Regulation [illegible] Province, the Court established under the Act of the [illegible]rt," twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth of Victoria, Chapter one hundred and four, in the territories for the time being subject to the government of the Lieutenant Governor of the Panjáb, the Chief Court of the Panjáb, in British Burma, the High Court of Judicature [illegible] Fort William in Bengal, and in any other Non-Regulation Province and in any place in the dominions of the Princes and States of India in alliance with Her Majesty, the High Court or Chief Court to whose original criminal jurisdiction the petitioner is for the time being subject, or would be subject if he or she were an European British subject of Her Majesty:

In the case of any petition under this Act, 'High Court' is that one of the aforesaid Courts within the local limits of whose ordinary appellate jurisdiction, or of whose jurisdiction under this Act, the husband and wife reside or last resided together:

District Judge."

(2.) "District Judge" means, in the Regulation Provinces, a Judge of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction,

[illegible]e Non-Regulation Provinces, other t[illegible] Burma, a Commissioner of a Division,

[illegible]akan and Pegu, the Recorder of Range[illegible]

[illegible]e Tenasserim Provinces, the Recorder of [illegible]in,

[illegible]n any place in the dominions of the Princes [illegible]tes aforesaid, such officer as the Governor [illegible] of India in Council shall from time to time appoint in this behalf by notification in the Gazette of India and, in the absence of such officer, the High Court in the exercise of its original jurisdiction under this Act:

(3.) "District Court" means, in the case of any petition under this Act, the Court of the District Judge within the local limits of whose ordinary jurisdiction, or of whose jurisdiction under this Act, the husband and wife reside or last resided together:

"Court."

(4.) "Court" means the High Court or the District Court, as the case may be:

(5.) "Minor children" means in the case of sons of Native fathers, boys who have not completed the age of sixteen years and, in the case of daughters of Native fathers, girls who have not completed the age of thirteen years: In other cases it means unmarried children who have not completed the age of eighteen years.

"Incestuous adultery."

(6.) "Incestuous adultery" means adultery committed by a husband with a woman with whom, if his wife were dead, he could not lawfully contract marriage by reason of her being within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity (whether natural or legal) or affinity:

(7.) "Bigamy with adultery" means adultery with the same woman with whom the bigamy was committed:

"Marriage with another woman."

(8.) "Marriage with another woman" means marriage of any person being married to any other person, during the life of the former wife, whether the second marriage shall have taken place within the dominions of Her Majesty or elsewhere:

(9.) "Desertion" implies an abandonment against the wish of the person charging it;

(10.) and "property" includes in the case of a wife any property to which she is entitled for an estate in remainder or reversion or as a trustee, executrix or administratrix; and the date of the death of the testator or intestate shall be deemed to be the time at which any such wife becomes entitled as executrix or administratrix.

II.—Jurisdiction.

Jurisdiction of High Courts regarding divorce to be exercised subject to this Act.

4. The jurisdiction now exercised by the High Courts in respect of divorce a mensâ et toro, and in all other causes, suits and matters matrimonial, shall be exercised by such Courts and by the District Courts subject to the provisions in this Act contained, and not otherwise: except so far as relates to the granting of marriage-licenses, which may be granted as if this Act had not been passed.

Exception.

Enforcement of decrees or orders made heretofore by any Supreme or High Court.

5. Any decree or order of the late Supreme Courts of Judicature at Calcutta, Madras, or Bombay sitting on the ecclesiastical side, or of any of the said High Courts sitting in the exercise of their matrimonial jurisdiction, respectively, in any cause or matter matrimonial, may be enforced and dealt with by the said High Courts, respectively, as hereinafter mentioned, in like manner as if such decree or order had been originally made under this Act by the Court so enforcing or dealing with the same.

Pending suits.

6. All suits and proceedings in causes and matters matrimonial, which when this Act comes into operation are pending in any High Court, shall be dealt with and decided by such Court, so far as may be, as if they had been originally instituted therein under this Act.

Court to act on principles of English Divorce Court.

7. Subject to the provisions contained in this Act, the High Courts and District Courts shall, in all suits and proceedings hereunder, act and give relief on principles and rules which, in the opinion of the said Courts, are as nearly as may be conformable to the principles and rules on which the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes in England for the time being acts and gives relief.

Extraordinary jurisdiction of High Court.

8. The High Court may whenever it thinks fit remove and try and determine as a Court of original jurisdiction any suit or proceeding instituted under this Act in the Court of any District Judge within the limits of its jurisdiction under this Act.

Power to transfer suits.

The High Court may also withdraw any such suit or proceeding, and transfer it for trial or disposal to the Court of any other such District Judge.

References to High Courts.

9. When any question of law or usage having the force of law arises at any point in the proceedings previous to the hearing of any suit under this Act by a District Court, or at any subsequent stage of such suit, or in the execution of the decree therein or order thereon, the Court may, either of its own motion or on the application of any of the parties, draw up a statement of the case and refer it, with the Court's own opinion thereon, to the decision of the High Court.

If the question has arisen previous to or in the hearing, the District Court may either stay such proceedings, or proceed in the case pending such reference, and pass a decree contingent upon the opinion of the High Court upon it.

If a decree or order has been made, its execution shall be stayed until the receipt of the order of the High Court upon such reference.

III.—Dissolution of Marriage.

When husband may petition for dissolution.

10. Subject to the provisions of section two, any husband not a Roman Catholic may present a petition to the District Court or to the High Court, praying that his marriage may be dissolved on the ground that his wife has, since the celebration thereof, been guilty of adultery.

When wife may petition for a dissolution.

Subject as aforesaid, any wife not a Roman Catholic may present a petition to the District Court or to the High Court, praying that her marriage may be dissolved on the ground that since the celebration thereof her husband has exchanged his profession of Christianity for the profession of some other religion, and gone through a form of marriage with another woman;

or has been guilty of incestuous adultery,

or of marriage with another woman with adultery,

or of rape, sodomy or bestiality, or of adultery coupled with such cruelty as without adultery would have entitled her to a divorce a mensâ et toro, or of adultery coupled with desertion, without reasonable excuse, for two years or upwards.

Contents of petition.

Every such petition shall state, as distinctly as the nature of the case permits, the facts on which the claim to have such marriage dissolved is founded.

Adulterer to be a co-respondent.

11. Upon any such petition presented by a husband, the petitioner shall make the alleged adulterer a co-respondent to the said petition, unless he is excused from so doing on one of the following grounds, to be allowed by the Court:—

(1.) That the respondent is leading the life of a prostitute, and that the petitioner knows of no person with whom the adultery has been committed.

(2.) That the name of the alleged adulterer is unknown to the petitioner, although he has made due efforts to discover it.

(3.) That the alleged adulterer is dead.

Court to be satisfied of absence of collusion.

12. Upon any such petition for the dissolution of a marriage, the Court shall satisfy itself, so far as it reasonably can, not only as to the facts alleged, but also whether or not the petitioner has been in any manner accessory to, or conniving at, the going through of the said form of marriage, or the adultery, or has condoned the same, and shall also inquire into any countercharge which may be made against the petitioner.

Dismissal of petition.

13. In case the Court, on the evidence in relation to any such petition, is satisfied that the petitioner's case has not been proved, or is not satisfied that the alleged adultery has been committed, or finds that the petitioner has, during the marriage, been accessory to, or conniving at, the going through of the said form of marriage, or the adultery of the other party to the marriage, or has condoned the adultery complained of,

or that the petition is presented or prosecuted in collusion with either of the respondents, then and in any of the said cases the Court shall dismiss the petition.

Power to Court to pronounce decree for dissolving marriage.

14. In case the Court is satisfied on the evidence that the case of the petitioner has been proved, and does not find that the petitioner has been in any manner accessory to, or conniving at, the going through of the said form of marriage, or the adultery of the other party to the marriage, or has condoned the adultery complained of,

or that the petition is presented or prosecuted in collusion with either of the respondents, the Court shall pronounce a decree declaring such marriage to be dissolved in the manner and subject to all the provisions and limitations in sections sixteen and seventeen made and declared:

Provided that the Court shall not be bound to pronounce such decree if it finds that the petitioner has, during the marriage, been guilty of adultery, or if the petitioner has, in the opinion of the Court, been guilty of unreasonable delay in presenting or prosecuting such petition, or of cruelty towards the other party to the marriage, or of having deserted or wilfully separated himself or herself from the other party before the adultery complained of, and without reasonable excuse, or of such wilful neglect or misconduct of or towards the other party as has conduced to the adultery.

Condonation.

No adultery shall be deemed to have been condoned within the meaning of this Act unless where conjugal cohabitation has been resumed or continued.

Relief in case of opposition on certain grounds.

15. In any suit instituted for dissolution of marriage, if the respondent opposes the relief sought on the ground, in case of such a suit instituted by a husband, of his adultery, cruelty, or desertion without reasonable excuse, or, in case of such a suit instituted by a wife, on the ground of her adultery and cruelty, the Court may in such suit give to the respondent, on his or her application, the same relief to which he or she would have been entitled in case he or she had presented a petition seeking such relief.

Decrees for divorce to be nisi.

16. Every decree for a dissolution of marriage made by a High Court not being a confirmation of a decree of a District Court shall, in the first instance, be a decree nisi, not to be made absolute till after the expiration of such time, not less than six months from the pronouncing thereof, as the High Court, by general or special order from time to time directs.

Collusion.

During that period any person shall be at liberty, in such manner as the High Court by general or special order from time to time directs, to show cause why the said decree should not be made absolute by reason of the same having been obtained by collusion or by reason of material facts not being brought before the Court.

On cause being so shown, the Court shall deal with the case by making the decree absolute, or by reversing the decree nisi, or by requiring further inquiry, or otherwise as justice may demand.

The High Court may order the costs of Counsel and witnesses and otherwise arising from such cause being shown to be paid by the parties or such one or more of them as it thinks fit, including a wife, if she have separate property.

Confirmation of decree for divorce by District Judge.

17. Every decree for a dissolution of marriage made by a District Judge shall be subject to confirmation by the High Court.

Cases for confirmation of a decree for a dissolution of marriage shall be heard by a Court constituted by two or more Judges of the High Court.

The High Court, if it think further enquiry or additional evidence to be necessary, may direct such enquiry to be made, or such evidence to be taken.

The result of such enquiry and the additional evidence shall be certified to the High Court by the District Judge, and the High Court shall thereupon make a decree for divorce or such other order as to the Court seems fit.

Provided that no decree shall be confirmed under this section till after the expiration of such time, not less than six months from the pronouncing thereof, as the High Court by general or special order from time to time directs.

During the progress of the suit in the Court of the District Judge, any person suspectnig that any parties to the suit are or have been acting in collusion for the purpose of obtaining a divorce, shall be at liberty, in such manner as the High Court by general or special order from time to time directs, to apply to the High Court to remove the suit under section eight, and the High Court shall thereupon, if it think fit, remove such suit and try and determine the same as a Court of original jurisdiction, and the provisions contained in section sixteen shall apply to every suit so removed; or it may direct the District Judge to take such steps in respect of the alleged collusion as may be necessary to enable him to make a decree in accordance with the justice of the case.

IV.—Nullity of Marriage.

Petition for decree of nullity.

18. Subject to the provisions of section two, any husband or wife may present a petition to the District Court or to the High Court, praying that his or her marriage may be declared null and void.

Grounds of decree.

19. Such decree may be made on any of the following grounds:—

(1.) That the respondent was impotent at the time of the marriage and at the time of the institution of the suit;

(2.) That the parties are within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity (whether natural or legal) or affinity;

(3.) That either party was a lunatic or idiot at the time of the marriage;

(4.) That either party was married to some third person at the time of the marriage.

Confirmation of District Judge's decree.

20. Every decree of nullity of marriage made by a District Judge shall be subject to confirmation by the High Court, and the provisions of section seventeen, clauses one, two, three and four, shall mutatis mutandis apply to such decrees.

V.—Judicial Separation.

No decree for divorce a mensâ et toro to be made.

21. No decree shall hereafter be made for a divorce a mensâ et toro, but in all cases in which a decree for a divorce a mensâ et toro might now be pronounced, the District Court or High Court may pronounce a decree for a judicial separation.

Decree for judicial separation obtainable by husband or wife.

22. A decree of judicial separation may be obtained either by the husband or the wife, on the ground of adultery, or cruelty, or desertion without reasonable excuse, for two years or upwards, and shall have the effect of a divorce a mensâ et toro under the existing law and such other legal effect as herein mentioned.

Application for separation made by petition.

23. Application for judicial separation on any one of the grounds aforesaid, may be made by either husband or wife by petition to the District Court or the High Court; and the Court on being satisfied of the truth of the statements made in such petition, and that there is no legal ground why the application should not be granted, may decree judicial separation accordingly.

Separated wife to be deemed a spinster with respect to after-acquired property.

24. In every case of a judicial separation under this Act, the wife shall, from the date of the sentence, and whilst the separation continues, be considered as unmarried with respect to property of every description which she may acquire, or which may come to or devolve upon her.

Such property may be disposed of by her in all respects as an unmarried woman, and on her decease the same shall, in case she dies intestate, go as the same would have gone if her husband had been then dead:

Provided that, if any such wife again cohabits with her husband, all such property as she may be entitled to when such cohabitation takes place shall be held to her separate use, subject, however, to any agreement in writing made between herself and her husband whilst separate.

Separated wife to be deemed a spinster for purposes of contract and suing.

25. In every case of a judicial separation under this Act, the wife shall, whilst so separated, be considered as an unmarried woman for the purposes of contract, and wrongs and injuries, and suing and being sued in any civil proceeding; and her husband shall not be liable in respect of any engagement or contract she may have entered into, or for any wrongful act or omission by her, or for any costs she may incur as plaintiff or defendant:

Provided that where, upon any such judicial separation, alimony has been decreed or ordered to be paid to the wife, and the same is not duly paid by the husband, he shall be liable for necessaries supplied for her use:

Provided also that nothing shall prevent the wife from joining, at any time during such separation, in the exercise of any joint power given to herself and her husband.

Reversal of Decree of Separation.

Decree of separation obtained during the absence of husband or wife may be reversed.

26. Any husband or wife, upon the application of whose wife or husband, as the case may be, a decree of judicial separation has been pronounced, may, at any time thereafter, present a petition to the Court by which the decree was pronounced praying for a reversal of such decree on the ground that it was obtained in his or her absence, and that there was reasonable excuse for the alleged desertion, where desertion was the ground of such decree.

The Court may on being satisfied of the truth of the allegations of such petition, reverse the decree accordingly; but such reversal shall not prejudice or affect the rights or remedies which any other person would have had in case it had not been decreed, in respect of any debts, contracts, or acts of the wife incurred, entered into, or done between the times of the sentence of separation and of the reversal thereof.

VI.—Protection Orders.

Deserted wife may apply to Court for protection.

27. Any wife to whom the fourth section of of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, does not apply, may, when deserted by her husband, present a petition to the District Court or the High Court, at any time after such desertion, for an order to protect any property which she may have acquired or may acquire, and any property of which she may have become possessed or may become possessed after such desertion, against her husband or his creditors, or any person claiming under him.

Court may grant protection-order.

28. The Court, if satisfied of the fact of such desertion, and that the same was without reasonable excuse, and that the wife is maintaining herself by her own industry or property, may make and give to the wife an order protecting her earnings and other property from her husband and all creditors and persons claiming under him. Every such order shall state the time at which the desertion commenced, and shall, as regards all persons dealing with the wife in reliance thereon, be conclusive as to such time.

Discharge or variation of orders.

29. The husband or any creditor of, or person claiming under, him may apply to the Court by which such order was made for the discharge or variation thereof, and the Court, if the desertion has ceased, or if for any other reason it think fit so to do, may discharge or vary the order accordingly.

Liability of husband seizing his wife's property after notice of order.

30. If the husband or any creditor of, or person claiming under, the husband seizes or continues to hold any property of the wife after notice of any such order, he shall be liable, at the suit of the wife (which she is hereby empowered to bring) to return or deliver to her the specific property, and also to pay her a sum equal to double its value.

Wife's legal position during continuance of order.

31. So long as any such order of protection remains in force, the wife shall be and be deemed to have been, during such desertion of her, in the like position in all respects, with regard to property and contracts and suing and being sued, as she would be under this Act if she obtained a decree of judicial separation.

VII.—Restitution of Conjugal Rights.

Petition for restitution of conjugal rights.

32. When either the husband or the wife has, without reasonable excuse, withdrawn from the society of the other, either wife or husband may apply, by petition to the District Court or the High Court, for restitution of conjugal rights, and the Court on being satisfied of the truth of the statements made in such petition, and that there is no legal ground why the application should not be granted, may decree restitution of conjugal rights accordingly.

Answer to petition.

33. Nothing shall be pleaded in answer to a petition for restitution of conjugal rights which would not be ground for a suit for judicial separation.

VIII.—Damages and Costs.

Husband may claim damages from adulterer.

34. Any husband may, either in a petition for dissolution of marriage, or for judicial separation, or in a petition to the District Court or the High Court limited to such object only, claim damages from any person on the ground of his having committed adultery with the wife of such petitioner.

Such petition shall be served on the alleged adulterer and the wife, unless the Court dispenses with such service, or directs some other service to be substituted.

The damages to be recovered on any such petition shall be ascertained by the said Court, although the respondents or either of them may not appear.

After the decision has been given, the Court may direct in what manner such damages shall be paid or applied.

Power to order adulterer to pay costs.

35. Whenever in any petition presented by a husband the alleged adulterer has been made a co-respondent, and the adultery has been established, the Court may order the co-respondent to pay the whole or any part of the costs of the proceedings:

Provided that the co-respondent shall not be ordered to pay the petitioner's costs,

(1) if the respondent was at the time of the adultery living apart from her husband and leading the life of a prostitute, or

(2) if the co-respondent had not at the time of the adultery reason to believe the respondent to be a married woman.

IX.—Alimony.

Alimony pendente lite.

36. In any suit under this Act, whether it be instituted by a husband or a wife and whether or not she has obtained an order of protection, the wife may present a petition for alimony pending the suit.

Such petition shall be served on the husband and the Court, on being satisfied of the truth of the statements therein contained, may make to such order on the husband for payment to the wife of alimony pending the suit as it may deem just, taking into consideration his average net income for the three years last preceding the date of the order.

Alimony pending the suit shall continue, in case of a decree for dissolution of marriage or of nullity of marriage, until the decree is made absolute or is confirmed, as the case may be.

Power to order permanent alimony

37. The High Court may, if it think fit, on any decree absolute declaring a marriage to be dissolved, and the District Judge may, if he thinks fit, on the confirmation of any decree of his declaring a marriage to be dissolved, order that the husband shall, to the satisfaction of the Court, secure to the wife such gross sum of money, or such annual sum of money for any term not exceeding her own life, as having regard to her fortune (if any), to the ability of the husband, and to the conduct of the parties, it thinks reasonable, and for that purpose may cause a proper instrument to be executed by all necessary parties.

The High Court may in such case, if it sees fit, suspend the pronouncing of its decree or the confirmation of the decree of the District Judge until the instrument has been duly executed.

Power to order monthly or weekly payments.

In every such case the Court may make an order on the husband for payment to the wife of such monthly or weekly sums for her maintenance and support as the Court may think reasonable:

Provided that if the husband afterwards from any cause becomes unable to make such payments, it shall be lawful for the Court to discharge or modify the order, or temporarily to suspend the same as to the whole or any part of the money so ordered to be paid, and again to revive the same order wholly or in part as to the Court seems fit.

Court may direct payment of alimony to wife or to her trustee.

38. In all cases in which the Court makes any decree or order for alimony, it may direct the same to be paid either to the wife herself, or to any trustee on her behalf to be approved by the Court, and may impose any terms or restrictions which to the Court seem expedient, and may from time to time appoint a new trustee, if it appears to the Court expedient so to do.

X.—Settlements.

Power to order settlement of wife's property for benefit of husband and children.

39. Whenever the Court pronounces a decree of dissolution of marriage or judicial separation for adultery of the wife, if it is made to appear to the Court that the wife is entitled to any property, the Court may, if it think fit, order such settlement as it thinks reasonable to be made of such property or any part thereof, for the benefit of the husband, or of the children of the marriage, or of both.

Any instrument executed pursuant to any order of the Court at the time of or after the pronouncing of a decree of dissolution of marriage or judicial separation, shall be deemed valid notwithstanding the existence of the disability of coverture at the time of the execution thereof.

Settlement of damages.

The Court may direct that the whole or any part of the damages recovered under section thirty-four shall be settled for the benefit of the children of the marriage, or as a provision for the maintenance of the wife.

Inquiry into existence of ante-nuptial or post-nuptial settlements.

40. The High Court, after a decree absolute for dissolution of marriage, or a decree of nullity of marriage, and the District Court after its decree for dissolution of marriage or of nullity of marriage has been confirmed, may inquire into the existence for ante-nuptial or post-nuptial settlements made on the parties whose marriage is the subject of the decree, and may make such orders with reference to the application of the whole or a portion of the property settled, whether for the benefit of the children of the marriage or of their respective parents, or of both children and parents, as to the Court seem fit:

Provided that the Court shall not make any order for the benefit of the parents or either of them at the expense of the children.

XI.—Custody of Children.

Power to make orders as to custody of children in suit for separation.

41. In any suit for obtaining a judicial separation the Court may from time to time, before making its decree, make such interim orders, and may make such provision in the decree, as it deems proper with respect to the custody, maintenance and education of the minor children, the marriage of whose parents is the subject of such suit, and may, if it think fit, direct proceedings to be taken for placing such children under the protection of the said Court.

Power to make such orders after decree.

42. The Court, after a decree of judicial separation, may upon application (by petition) for this purpose make, from time to time, all such orders and provision with respect to the custody, maintenance and education of the minor children, the marriage of whose parents is the subject of the decree, or for placing such children under the protection of the said Court as might have been made by such decree, or by interim orders in case the proceedings for obtaining such decree were still pending.

Power to make orders as to custody of children in suits for dissolution or nullity.

43. In any suit for obtaining a dissolution of marriage or a decree of nullity of marriage instituted in, or removed to, a High Court, the Court may from time to time, before making its decree absolute, or its decree (as the case may be) make such interim orders, and may make such provision in the decree absolute or decree, and in any such suit instituted in a District Court, the Court may from time to time before its decree is confirmed make such interim orders and may make such provision on such confirmation, as the High Court or District Court (as the case may be) deems proper with respect to the custody, maintenance and education of the minor children, the marriage of whose parents is the subject of the suit;

and may, if it think fit, direct proceedings to be taken for placing such children under the protection of the Court.

Power to make such orders after decree or confirmation.

44. The High Court after a decree absolute for dissolution of marriage or a decree of nullity of marriage, and the District Court after a decree for dissolution of marriage or of nullity of marriage has been confirmed, may upon application by petition for the purpose make from time to time all such orders and provision with respect to the custody, maintenance and education of the minor children, the marriage of whose parents was the subject of the decree, or for placing such children under the protection of the said Court as might have been made by such decree absolute or decree (as the case may be), or by such interim orders as aforesaid.

XII.—Procedure.

Code of Civil Procedure to apply.

45. Subject to the provisions herein contained, all proceedings under this Act between party and party shall be regulated by the Code of Civil Procedure.

Forms of petitions and statements.

46. The forms set forth in the schedule to this Act, with such variation as the circumstances of each case require, may be used for the respective purposes mentioned in such schedule.

Stamp on petition.

47. Every petition under this Act for a decree of dissolution of marriage, or of nullity of marriage, or of judicial separation, or of reversal of judicial separation, or for restitution of conjugal rights, or for damages, shall bear a stamp of five rupees, and shall, in the first, second and third cases mentioned in this section, state that there is not any collusion or connivance between the petitioner and the other party to the marriage.

Petitions to state absence of collusion.

Statements to be verified.

The statements contained in every petition under this Act shall be verified by the petitioner or some other competent person in manner required by law for the verification of plaints, and may at the hearing be referred to as evidence.

Suits on behalf of lunatics.

48. When the husband or wife is a lunatic or idiot, any suit under this Act (other than a suit for restitution of conjugal rights) may be brought on his or her behalf by the committee or other person entitled to his or her custody.

Suits by minors.

49. Where the petitioner is a minor, he or she shall sue by his or her next friend to be approved by the Court; and no petition presented by a minor under this Act shall be filed until the next friend has undertaken in writing to be answerable for costs.

Such undertaking shall bear a stamp of eight annas and shall be filed in Court, and the next friend shall thereupon be liable in the same manner and to the same extent as if he were a plaintiff in an ordinary suit.

Service of petition.

50. Every petition under this Act shall be served on the party to be affected thereby, either within or without British India, in such manner as the High Court by general or special order from time to time directs:

Provided that the Court may dispense with such service altogether in case it seems necessary or expedient so to do.

Mode of taking evidence.

51. The witnesses in all proceedings before the Court, where their attendance can be had, shall be examined orally:

Provided that the parties shall be at liberty to verify their respective cases in whole or in part by affidavit, but so that the deponent in every such affidavit shall, on the application of the opposite party, or by direction of the Court, be subject to be cross-examined by or on behalf of the opposite party orally, and after such cross-examination may be re-examined orally as aforesaid by or on behalf of the party by whom such affidavit was filed.

Competence of husband and wife to give evidence as to cruelty or desertion.

52. On any petition presented by a wife, praying that her marriage may be dissolved by reason of her husband having been guilty of adultery coupled with cruelty, or of adultery coupled with desertion without reasonable excuse, the husband and wife respectively shall be competent and compellable to give evidence of or relating to such cruelty or desertion.

Power to close doors.

53. The whole or any part of any proceeding under this Act may be heard, if the Court thinks fit, with closed doors.

Power to adjourn.

54. The Court may from time to time adjourn the hearing of any petition under this Act, and may require further evidence thereon if it sees fit so to do.

Enforcement of and appeals from orders and decrees.

55. All decrees and orders made by the Court in any suit or proceeding under this Act shall be enforced, and may be appealed from in the like manner as the decrees and orders of the Court made in the exercise of its original civil jurisdiction are enforced and may be appealed from under the laws, rules and orders for the time being in force:

Provided that there shall be no appeal from a decree of a District Judge for dissolution of marriage or nullity of marriage:

No appeal as to costs.

Provided also that there shall be no appeal on the subject of costs only.

Appeal to Privy Council.

56. Any person may appeal to Her Majesty in Council from any decree (other than a decree nisi) or order under this Act of a High Court made on appeal or otherwise, and from any decree (other than a decree nisi) or order made in the exercise of original jurisdiction by Judges of a High Court or of any Division Court from which an appeal shall not lie to the High Court, when the High Court declares that the case is a fit one for appeal to Her Majesty in Council.

XIII.—Re-marriage.

Liberty to parties to marry again.

57. When six months after the date of any decree of a High Court dissolving a marriage, have expired, and no appeal has been presented against such decree, or when any such appeal has been dismissed, or when in the result of any such appeal any marriage is declared to be dissolved, but not sooner, it shall be lawful for the respective parties to the marriage to marry again, as if the prior marriage had been dissolved by death:

Provided that no appeal to Her Majesty in Council has been presented against any such decree or order.

When such appeal has been dismissed, or when in the result thereof, the marriage is declared to be dissolved, but not sooner, it shall be lawful for the respective parties to the marriage to marry again as if the prior marriage had been dissolved by death.

English clergyman not compelled to solemnize marriages of person divorced for adultery.

58. No clergyman in Holy Orders of the United Church of England and Ireland shall be compelled to solemnize the marriage of any person whose former marriage has been dissolved on the ground of his or her adultery, or shall be liable to any suit, penalty, or censure for solemnizing or refusing to solemnize the marriage of any such person.

English Minister refusing to perform ceremony to permit use of his church.

59. When any Minister of any Church or Chapel of the said United Church refuses to perform such marriage-service between any person who but for such refusal would be entitled to have the same service performed in such Church or Chapel, such Minister shall permit any other Minister in Holy Orders of the said Church, entitled to officiate within the diocese in which such Church or Chapel is situate, to perform such marriage-service in such Church or Chapel.

XIV.—Miscellaneous.

Decree for separation or protection order to be valid as to persons dealing with wife before reversal.

60. Every decree for judicial separation or order to protect property obtained by a wife under this Act shall, until reversed or discharged, be deemed valid, so far as necessary for the protection of any person dealing with the wife.

No reversal, discharge or variation of such decree or order shall affect any rights or remedies which any person would otherwise have had in respect of any contracts or acts of the wife entered into or done between the dates of such decree or order, and of the reversal, discharge or variation thereof.

Indemnity of persons making payment to wife without notice of reversal of decree or protection order.

All persons who in reliance on any such decree or order make any payment to, or permit any transfer, or act to be made or done by, the wife who has obtained the same shall, notwithstanding such decree or order may then have been reversed, discharged or varied, or the separation of the wife from her husband may have ceased, or at some time since the making of the decree or order been discontinued, be protected and indemnified as if at the time of such payment, transfer or other act such decree or order were valid and still subsisting without variation, and the separation had not ceased or been discontinued, unless, at the time of the payment, transfer or other act, such persons had notice of the reversal, discharge or variation of the decree or order or of the cessation or discontinuance of the separation.

No action for criminal conversation.

61. After this Act comes into operation, no suit shall be maintainable by any person excepted in the first clause of section two for criminal conversation with his wife.

Power to make rules.

No. 13.—Statement in answer to No. 11.

In the (High) Court of

B. against B.

A. B., of , the above-named respondent, in answer to the petition for alimony pending the suit of C. B., says,—

1. In answer to the first paragraph of the said petition, I say that I have for the last three years carried on the business of , at and that from such business, I have derived a net annual income of Rs. 900, but less than Rs. 1,000.

2. In answer to the 2nd paragraph of the said petition, I say that I am possessed of plate, furniture, linen, and other chattels and effects at my said house, aforesaid, of the value of Rs. 7,000, but as I verily believe of no larger value. And I say that a portion of the said plate, furniture, and other chattels and effects of the value of Rs. 1,500, belonged to my said wife before our marriage, but the remaining portions thereof I have since purchased with my own monies. And I say that, save as hereinbefore set forth, I am not possessed of the plate and other effects as alleged in the said paragraph in the said petition, and that I did not acquire the same as in the said petition also mentioned. * *

3. I admit that I am entitled under the will of my father, subject to the life interest of my mother therein, to property of the value of Rs. 5,000, that is to say, I shall be entitled under my said father's will, upon the death of my mother, to a legacy of Rs. 7,000, out of which I shall have to pay to my father's executors the sum of Rs. 2,000, the amount of a debt owing by me to his estate, and upon which debt I am now paying interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum.

4. And, in further answer to the said petition, I say that I have no income whatever except that derived from my aforesaid business, and which income, since my said wife left me, which she did on the day of last, has been considerably diminished, and that such diminution is likely to continue. And I say that out of my said income, I have to pay the annual sum of Rs. 100 for such interest as aforesaid to my late father's executors, and also to support myself and my two eldest children.

5. And, in further answer to the said petition, I say that when my wife left my dwelling-house on the day of last, she took with her, and has ever since withheld and still withholds from me, plate, watches, and other effects in the 2nd paragraph of this my answer mentioned, of the value of, as I verily believe, Rs. 800 at the least; and I also say that within five days of her departure from my house as aforesaid, my said wife received bills due to me from certain lodgers of mine, amounting in the aggregate to Rs. , and that she has ever since withheld and still withholds from me the same sum.

(Signed) A. B.

(e.)—The petitioner should state her husband's income as accurately as possible.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 30th July 1868 :—

No. 19 OF 1868.

A Bill to provide against European Vagrancy.

Preamble.

WHEREAS numerous persons of European extraction are at present wandering in a destitute condition throughout India, and whereas such conduct is prejudicial to public order, and it is expedient to prevent the same; it is hereby enacted as follows :—

I.—Preliminary.

Short title. Commencement of Act.

1. This Act may be called "The European Vagrancy Act, 1868," and shall come into operation on such day as the Governor General of India in Council shall by notification in the Gazette of India appoint in this behalf.

Present Justices of the Peace to be deemed to be appointed under this Act.

12. Every person now acting as a Justice of the Peace according to the tenor of any commission issued by any of the said High Courts, shall be deemed to have been appointed under this Act, and shall make commitments to the Court prescribed in that behalf by the law in force for the time being.

SCHEDULE.

Number of Statute or Act.	Title of Statute or Act.	Extent of Repeal.
33 Geo. III, Cap. 52.	An Act for continuing in the East India Company, for a further term, the Possession of the British Territories in India, together with their exclusive Trade, under certain limitations; for establishing further Regulations for the Government of the said Territories, and the better Administration of Justice within the same; for appropriating, to certain uses, the Revenues and Profits of the said Company; and for making provision for the good Order and Government of the Towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay.	Sections 151 and 152.
74 Geo. III, Sess. 2, Cap. 68.	An Act for the better Government of the Settlements of Fort St. George and Bombay; for the Regulation of Public Banks; and for amending so much of an Act passed in the thirty-third year of his present Majesty as relates to the Periods at which the Civil Servants of the East India Company may be employed in their service abroad.	Sections 4, 5 and 6.
53 Geo. III, Cap. 155.	An Act for continuing in the East India Company, for a further Term, the Possession of the British Territories in India, together with certain exclusive Privileges; for establishing further Regulations for the Government of the said Territories, and the better Administration of Justice within the same; and for regulating the Trade to and from the Places within the Limits of the said Company.	Section 112.
2 & 3 Wm. IV, Cap. 117.	An Act to amend the Law relating to the Appointment of Justices of the Peace, and of Juries in the East Indies.	The whole.
Act No. XVI of 1841.	An Act concerning the taking of Oaths of Qualification by Justices of the Peace.	So much as has not been repealed.
Act No. VI of 1845.	An Act to amend the Law regarding the issue of Commissions of the Peace.	The whole.
Act No. XXVII of 1864.	An Act to substitute certain declarations for the Oaths of Qualification taken by Justices of the Peace.	The whole.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Mysore and Coorg being now under the jurisdiction of the High Court of Madras, as regards offences committed therein by European British subjects, doubts have been raised as to whether the High Court at Fort William can any longer exercise the power to issue Commissions of the Peace for those districts which was vested in it by Statute 33 Geo. III, c. 52. On the other hand, the High Court of Madras has no power to issue such commissions, inasmuch as Coorg and Mysore are not subordinate to the Madras Presidency. Under these circumstances, it seems necessary for the Legislature to interpose; and the present Bill accordingly provides that commissions for Justices of the Peace shall in future be issued in all cases by the Court to which they commit.

The opportunity has been taken of consolidating the seven enactments which now contain the law relating to the issue and supersession of commissions to Justices of the Peace, and in the administration of their oaths of office.

Simla, the 10th August 1868.

No. 3318.

The following Regulations for the examination of candidates for the Civil Service of India, to be held in London in March 1869, are published for general information :—

REGULATIONS FOR THE OPEN COMPETITION OF 1869.

N.B.—The Regulations are liable to be altered in future years.

1. On Tuesday, March 16th, 1869, and following days, an examination of candidates will be held in London. At this examination not fewer than candidates will be selected, if so many shall be found duly qualified. Of these will be selected for the Presidency of Bengal, [for the Upper Provinces, and for the Lower Provinces,] for that of Madras, and for that of Bombay.* Notice will hereafter be given of the days and place of examination.

2. Any natural-born subject of Her Majesty, who shall be desirous of entering the Civil Service of India, will be entitled to be examined at such examination, provided he shall, on or before the 1st of February 1869, have transmitted to the Civil Service Commissioners, London, S.W :—

(a).—A certificate of his birth, showing that his age on the 1st March 1869 will be above seventeen years and under twenty-one years;

(b).—A certificate, signed by a physician or surgeon of his having no disease, constitutional affection or bodily infirmity unfitting him for the Civil Service of India;

* The number of appointments to be made and the number in each Presidency, &c., will be announced hereafter.

(c).—Satisfactory proof of good moral character;

(d).—A statement of those of the branches of knowledge hereinafter enumerated in which he desires to be examined.*

3. In any case in which a doubt may arise as to the eligibility of a candidate in respect of age, health, or character, such enquiries as may be necessary will be instituted by the Civil Service Commissioners.

4. The examination will take place only in the following branches of knowledge† :—

	Marks.
English Composition	500
History of England—including that of the Laws and Constitution	500
English Language and Literature	500
Language, Literature, and History of Greece	750
" " " Rome	750
" " " France	375
" " " Germany	375
" " " Italy	375
Mathematics (pure and mixed)	1,250
Natural Science, that is (1) Chemistry, including Heat, (2) Electricity and Magnetism, (3) Geology and Mineralogy, (4) Zoology, (5) Botany	1,000
 The total (1,000 marks) may be obtained by adequate proficiency in any two or more of the five branches of knowledge included under this head.
Moral Sciences, that is Logic, Mental and Moral Philosophy	500
Sanskrit Language and Literature	500
Arabic Language and Literature	500

5. The merit of the persons examined will be estimated by marks, and the number set opposite to each branch in the proceding regulation denotes the greatest number of marks that can be obtained in respect of it.

6. No candidate will be allowed any marks in respect of any subject of examination, unless he shall be considered to possess a competent knowledge of that subject.‡

7. The examination will be conducted by means of printed questions and written answers, and by vivâ voce examination, as may be deemed necessary.

8. The marks obtained by each candidate in respect of each of the subjects in which he shall have been examined, will be added up, and the names of the candidates who shall have obtained a greater aggregate number of marks than any of the remaining candidates will be set forth in order of merit, and such candidates shall be deemed to be selected candidates for the Civil Service of India, provided they are in other respects duly qualified: and shall be permitted to choose,§ according to the order in which they stand, as long as a choice remains, the Presidency (and in Bengal, the division of the Presidency) to which they shall be appointed.

* Evidence of health and character must bear dated not earlier than the 1st January 1869

† It should be understood that candidates are at liberty to name, at their pleasure, any or all of these branches of knowledge, and that no subjects are obligatory.

‡ "Nothing can be further from our wish than to hold out premiums for knowledge of wide surface and of small depth We are of opinion that a candidate ought to be allowed no credit at all for taking up a subject in which he is a mere smatterer."—Report of Committee of 1854.

§ This right must be exercised immediately after the result of the examination is announced on such day as may be fixed by the Civil Service Commissioners.

9. Selected candidates before proceeding to India will be on probation for two years, during which time they will be examined periodically with the view of testing their progress in the following subjects* :—

	Marks.
1. Oriental Languages:
Sanskrit	500
Vernacular† Languages of India (each)	400
2. The History and Geography of India...	350
3. Law	1,250
4. Political Economy	350

In these examinations, as in the open competition, the merit of the candidates examined will be estimated by marks, and the number set opposite to each subject denotes the greatest number of marks that can be obtained in respect of it at any one examination. The examination will be conducted by means of printed questions and written answers, and by vivâ voce examination, as may be deemed necessary. The last of these examinations will be held at the close of the second year of probation, and will be called the "Final Examination," at which it will be decided whether a selected candidate is qualified for the Civil Service of India.

10. Any candidate who, at any of the periodical examinations, shall appear to have wilfully neglected his duties, or to be physically incapacitated for pursuing the prescribed course of training, will be liable to have his name removed from the list of selected candidates.

11. No candidate will be permitted to proceed to India before he shall have passed the Final Examination, and received a certificate of qualification from the Civil Service Commissioners, or after he shall have attained the age of twenty-four years.

12. The selected candidates who at the Final Examination shall be found to have a competent knowledge of the subjects specified in Regulation 9, shall be adjudged to have passed, and to be entitled to be appointed to the Civil Service of India, provided they shall comply with the regulations in force at the time for the Civil Service of India, and shall be of sound bodily health and good moral character. The Civil Service Commissioners will require such further evidence on these points as they may deem necessary before granting their certificate of qualification.

13. The seniority in the Civil Service of India of the selected candidates shall be determined according to the order in which they stand on the list resulting from the Final Examination.

14. Applications from persons desirous to be admitted as candidates are to be addressed to the Secretary to the Civil Service Commissioners, London, S. W.

20*th June* 1868.

NOTE (1).—The Secretary of State for India in Council has authorised the Civil Service Commissioners to state that it is his intention to allow the sum of 100*l. after the first year of probation, and*

* Full instructions as to the course of study to be pursued will be issued to the successful candidates as soon as possible after the result of the open competition is declared.

† Including, besides the languages prescribed for the several Presidencies, such other languages as may, with the approval of the Commissioners, be taken up as subjects of examination.

200*l.* after the second year to each selected candidate who shall have passed the required examinations to the satisfaction of the Commissioners, and shall have complied with such rules as may be laid down for the guidance of selected candidates.

(2).—All selected candidates will be required, after having passed the second periodical examination, to attend at the India Office for the purpose of entering into an agreement binding themselves, amongst other things, to refund in certain cases the amount of their allowance in the event of their failing to proceed to India. For a candidate under age, a surety will be required.

(3).—After passing the Final Examination, each candidate will be required to attend again at the India Office, with the view of entering into covenants and giving a bond for 1,000*l.*, jointly with two sureties for the due fulfilment of the same. The stamps payable by civilians on these documents amount to 3*l.* 10*s.*

(4).—Candidates rejected at the Final Examination of 1871 will in no case be allowed to present themselves for re-examination.

The 12*th August* 1868.

No. 884.

In modification of the terms of the notification issued from this Office, under date the 3rd June last, No. 572, His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India in Council is pleased to appoint Captain E. B. Sladen, Madras Staff Corps, to be Political Agent in the territory of His Majesty the King of Burmah, under Article V. of the Treaty with His Majesty concluded on the 25th October 1867.

In accordance with the provisions of the said Treaty, His Excellency in Council is further pleased to invest Captain Sladen, Political Agent in Burmese territory, with full and final jurisdiction in all Civil suits between registered British subjects (vide form annexd), if the cause of action shall have arisen, or the defendant at the time of the commencement of the suit shall dwell, or carry on business, or personally work for gain within the limits of the territories of His Majesty the King of Burmah, provided that the Court of the Political Agent shall not take cognizance of any suit of the same nature as those suits the cognizance of which by the ordinary Civil Courts in British India, not established by Royal Charter, is barred by any Act of Parliament, or by any Regulation or Act of the Governor General of India in Council.

The Political Agent will hold his Court at the capital of His Majesty the King of Burmah.

The seal shall be made under the direction of the Governor General in Council for the said Court, to be engraved in Burmese and English characters, "The seal of the Court of the British Political Agent in Burmese Territory," and the same shall remain in the custody of the Political Agent.

The procedure in all Civil suits between British subjects in Burmen territory in the Court of the Political Agent, shall follow the rules laid down in the Code of Civil Procedure.

The Governor General in Council further empowers the Political Agent to make rules to regulate the service and execution of processes issuing from his Court; also to settle a table of fees to be charged to suitors for persons employed in serving the said processes.

All questions of law and fact arising in cases in the Court of the Political Agent to be dealt with and determined according to the law as administered in the Commission Courts of British Burmah under Act I. of 1863.

It shall be lawful for the Political Agent to submit any question arising in any cause pending before him to the Chief Court of British Burmah for decision, and in all cases where such decision has been given, the Political Agent will be bound to act accordingly. There shall be no appeal for any order or judgment passed by the Court of the Political Agent.

The Political Agent shall keep such registers, books, and accounts, and submit to the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah and Agent to the Governor General of India such Statements and Returns of the work done in his Court on the Civil side as may be prescribed by the said Chief Commissioner.

The Political Agent shall also comply with such requisitions as may be made by the Chief Commissioner and Governor General's Agent for records.

Duties of the same amount as the Stamp Duties prescribed by Act X. of 1862 and other Acts amending, or which may hereafter amend, the said Act, shall be enforced in the Court of the Political Agent.

The Political Agent may license advocates to appear in his Court for parties to suits, and allow a reasonable sum for professional services rendered in the cause, provided the aggregate amount of costs of all kinds in each suit does not exceed five per centum on the amount at which the suit is laid. No sum for professional services shall be recoverable by a licensed advocate, unless the same shall have been sanctioned on the records in the case in which the services were rendered.

The Political Agent may withdraw any license, either general or special, granted by him to any person to act as an advocate in his Court.

Form of entries to be made in Register of British subjects residing within the territory of His Majesty the King of Burmah, and to be kept by the Political Agent entered up in his own hand-writing only.

MILITARY. INDIA OFFICE;

No. 254. London, 16th July 1868.

To His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Governor General of India in Council.

SIR,—I have submitted, for the opinion of His Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, your letter No. 113 of 23rd March last, and its enclosures, relative to a representation from

of the Madras Staff Corps, against the post-dating of his commission as Colonel, and those of Officers similarly situated, with reference to Despatch No. 115 of 31st May 1866, which declared that the period during which an Officer not a substantive Lieutenant Colonel is absent from his command on any account whatever, can only be allowed to reckon as qualifying for the rank of Colonel under the eight years' rule.

2. I have been informed by His Royal Highness in reply, with reference to the provision of the Royal Warrant upon that point, that, in the case of a Major and Brevet Lieutenant Colonel holding a qualifying staff appointment, it has been ruled that temporary leave of absence shall reckon toward his Colonelcy under the five years' rule, but that, in the case of an Officer of the rank of Major and Brevet Lieutenant Colonel whilst absent from a regimental command, such period of absence is not allowed to reckon under the five years' rule.

I have, &c.,

(Sd.) STAFFORD H. NORTHCOTE.

BENGAL CIVIL FUND.

Notice.

At an adjourned Half-yearly Meeting of subscribers to the Bengal Civil Fund, held at the Town Hall, on Saturday, the 8th August 1868.

PRESENT:

H. D. SANDEMAN, ESQ.,
E. F. HARRISON, ESQ.,
R. B. CHAPMAN, ESQ.,
S. C. BAYLEY, ESQ.
L. R. TOTTENHAM, ESQ.,
J. MONRO, ESQ.,
P. D. DICKENS, ESQ.,
A. MACKENZIE, ESQ.,
W. M. SOUTTAR, ESQ.,
AND
W. H. VERNER, ESQ.

R. B. CHAPMAN, ESQ., in the Chair.

Read the following Report submitted by the Managers :—

"The Managers submit their proceedings for the past half-year for the consideration and sanction of the meeting.

"Subject to the approval of the subscribers, they have admitted to the benefits of the Fund under the new Rules the following families :—

Mrs. Dirom	... £ 300	"The widow of the late Mr. W. M. Dirom (annuitant of 1855), who died in England on the 9th February last.
Mrs. Roberts	... £ 300	"The widow and seven children (three sons and four daughters) of the late Mr. A. A. Roberts, who died at Hyderabad on the 10th May last.
Seven children	... „ 590
£	... 890

"Mr. A. C. Barnard has incurred the penalty under Rule 6 of exclusion of his wife and children from the benefits of the Fund on account of his not having reported his marriage and the births of his children within the prescribed six months.

"Mr. Barnard was married on the 19th December 1865, and two children were born to him, one on the 30th January 1867, and the other on the 25th March 1868 (the younger child has since died).

"Mr. Barnard urges 'that his intention always was to report his marriage from England, but he put it off and forgot it, and did not do so; he was very ill shortly after his marriage and unable to write, and that is how it was not reported at first.'"

"The above case is submitted for the decision of the meeting."

"Lieutenant Hodgson has applied on behalf of Mrs. Hodgson, the wife of Mr. R. F. Hodgson, an annuitant of 1858, that she may be allowed to make up by instalments the arrears of subscription due to the Fund by her husband, and pay his quarterly subscription regularly, and asks if this were allowed whether, in case of her husband's death before the arrears were liquidated, she could be allowed the benefits of the Fund on paying up the balance."

"Mr. Hodgson at retirement made up his subscription balance to the prescribed sum of Rs. 25,000 to entitle his family to the benefits of the Fund, but he has not kept up his interest in the Fund by the payment of periodical subscriptions from his annuity. The arrears from 1st May 1858 up to 30th October next with interest amount to Rs. 5,571-2-2."

"The Managers have informed Lieutenant Hodgson that, as the case appears to them to be one not distinctly provided for under the Rules, they will refer it for decision to the General Meeting of subscribers to be held in January next, giving due notice of the same under Article 18 of the Rules."

"The valuation of the assets and liabilities of the Fund for the quinquennial period ending 1867-68 is fast approaching completion, and the Managers hope to be able to lay before the General Meeting in January proposals for the reduction of the subscriptions to, or increase of, the benefits of the Fund as may appear most advisable."

1. Moved by Mr. Tottenham, seconded by Mr. Souttar, and carried, that the proceedings of the Managers in admitting the families of the late Messrs. Dirom and Roberts to the benefits of the Fund be confirmed.

2. Moved by Mr. S. C. Bayley, seconded by Mr. Monro, and carried, that the wife and family of Mr. A. C. Barnard be admitted to the benefits of the Fund on his paying the minimum fines imposed by the Rules, and arrear subscriptions, with interest to date of realization.

3. Moved by Mr. Tottenham, seconded by Mr. Dickens, and carried, that Mr. S. C. Bayley (in place of Mr. V. H. Schalch) and Mr. W. M. Souttar (in place of Mr. J. A. Crawford) be elected Managers for the current half-year.

A vote of thanks was passed to the Chairman.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

EUROPEAN VAGRANCY.

From Sir G. U. YULE, C.B., K.C.S.I., Resident at Hyderabad, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department,—No. 3, dated 2nd February 1867.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 309, dated the 12th January 1867, calling for further information on the subject of the deportation of European vagrants from Hyderabad.

2. In reply I beg in the first instance to state, in the most explicit way, that European vagrants are not deported hence,—if by deportation is meant compulsory removal by any authority. No such deportation has occurred since I have been here; but in consequence of the numbers both of vagrants whose only object was to get food and drink without working for them, and of respectable men who came here with some vague idea that employment was to be had, or as the shortest route between Madras and Bombay, I directed the Cantonment Magistrate of Secunderabad and the Superintendent of Residency Bazars to arrange for the carriage and subsistence on the road to Sholapore (Bombay) or Kurnool (Madras) of such vagrants as desired to go to either place, but had not the means of doing so, charging the expenses to the Local Funds. During the past year, then, 37 vagrants have been so removed by the Cantonment Magistrate at a cost of Rs. 238-13-2, and 14 by the Superintendent, Residency Bazars, at Rs. 226-1-7; the difference being caused by the former Officer being able to procure carriage free of charge from the Transit Contractor on the Sholapore Road, where the traffic is enormous; while on the Kurnool Road there is so little traffic that carriage had to be paid for.

3. But these returns by no means show the total number of Europeans assisted to leave this place. A Strangers' Home in Secunderabad helps some, and private charity many more; but the means of the former are limited, and besides the vagrants have much less scruple in cheating a Clergyman than a Magistrate, though the latter even is sometimes set at defiance; and private charity is getting tired of being imposed upon either by real vagrants who only want money to drink, or by the British soldier got up as a vagrant for the occasion.

4. It is difficult to imagine the amount of shame brought on us by the real habitual vagrants, or the trouble they sometimes give, and I certainly hope that some means may be devised to check this great evil. Had Magistrates or Justices of the Peace power to sentence the drunk and disorderly to imprisonment for a short period on bread and milk, and to deport to the next Magistrate's station, under penalty of a second period of imprisonment to the deported if he returns, the evil would soon cease. It is the habitual vagrant only whom I propose to restrain, and not the poor respectable man looking out for a means of livelihood, whose circumstances often demand the deepest sympathy, and to whom private charity is never grudged. But I trust His Excellency will not compel us to pay the whole cost of deportation to Bombay. The fact of this place being about half-way between Bombay and Madras, and affording attractions to vagabonds, is surely no reason for saddling us with the whole charge of deportation; if the Sholapore and Kurnool and other people did not help vagrants on to us, we should not have to help them back again. If some measure is taken such as I recommend, of course the rule would be to deport to the Presidency town, and then few vagrants indeed would ever be able to get as far as this.

I beg to enclose copy of a letter No. 191, dated the 28th January 1867, on this subject from the Officiating Cantonment Magistrate, Secunderabad.

From the Officiating Cantonment Magistrate, Secunderabad, to the 1st Assistant Resident at Hyderabad,—No. 191, dated 28th January 1867.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your docket No. 175 of the 22nd instant, with its enclosures, on the subject of European vagrants.

2. In transmitting, as called for, a return of the British and East Indian vagrants who were passed on from Secunderabad during the year 1866, I would remark that none of those can be said to have been deported or removed, inasmuch as the action of the authorities towards them, so far as I am aware, was simply that of charitably assisting them at their own solicitation to proceed hence.

3. Many of them were men who had come to His Highness' dominions in quest of work of various kinds which had no existence except in their own imaginations. Such men would first exhaust the private charity of this extensive Cantonment and its environs, and then, with starvation staring them in the face, beg the Resident or the Cantonment Magistrate to help them on to some other place. Others were bonâ fide travellers proceeding from places still farther inland than this to the coast. Such generally came direct to the Cantonment Magistrate, stated their destination, and obtained the needed help in proceeding towards it.

4. I am not aware that the Cantonment Magistrate of Secunderabad possesses the power of causing the authoritative deportation of vagrants, of the class alluded to, from his jurisdiction. Hitherto the comparatively small number of them who have appeared in Cantonment has had the effect of making each become very soon a marked man at the houses of the charitably disposed. Whenever he has become so, he has found his supplies cut off; and he has then, as has been stated, been only too glad to be passed on to another scene. But their numbers may be expected largely to increase with the opening out of His Highness' dominions, now in such rapid progress; and I have the honor to recommend, for the Resident's consideration, that provision should be made for their authoritative deportation whenever such shall seem necessary. The recent instance of an able-bodied vagrant, who, having obtained from the Cantonment Magistrate a transit cart to convey him to Kurnool, together with a supply of provisions for the journey, thought proper to return from the end of his first stage to this Cantonment, which he still infests, will occur to Sir George Yule as a case strongly illustrating the necessity of such provision being made.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

LEGISLATIVE.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 13th August 1868, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. XX OF 1868.

An Act to [illegible] validity to the levy of certain Duties in Lucknow.

Preamble.

WHEREAS under the authority given by Act No. XVIII of 1864 (to provide for the appointment of a Municipal Committee in the City of Lucknow), section thirteen, the Chief Commissioner of Oudh declared that duties on certain things and at certain rates should "for the year 1865-66" be levied in respect of such things when brought into Lucknow for consumption or use therein, and such declaration was, on the ninth day of May 1865, sanctioned by the Governor General of India in Council. And whereas doubts have arisen as to whether such declaration and sanction remained in force down to the twenty-seventh day of July 1868, and it is expedient to remove such doubts and to indemnify the officers and farmers who have acted under the said declaration and sanction and the said Chief Commissioner's rules from time to time in force as to the mode of levying and collecting the said duties; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Validation of declaration, sanction and rules from 9th May 1865 till 27th July 1868.

1. The said declaration and sanction shall be deemed to have been in force from the ninth day of May 1865 to the twenty-seventh day of July 1868, and the said rules from time to time in force shall be deemed to have been valid under the said section.

Indemnification of officers.

2. Every officer and farmer is hereby indemnified for anything done before the passing of this Act which might lawfully have been done if this Act had been in force; and no suit or other proceeding shall be maintained against any such officer or farmer in respect of anything so done.

WHITLEY STOKES,
Asst. Secy. to the Govt. of India,
Home Dept. (Legislative.)

The following Report of a Select Committee, together with the Bill as settled by them, was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations, on the 13th August 1868 :—

REPORT.

We, the Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill for conferring upon the High Courts of Judicature in India the jurisdiction and powers vested in the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes in England was referred, have the honour to report that we have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the Appendix.

The Bill, as introduced, extended to India the principal provisions of the English Divorce Act (20 & 21 Vic., c. 85) as amended by 22 & 23 Vic., c. 61, and 23 & 24 Vic., c. 144. We have added the provisions contained in the recent amending Act 29 Vic., cap. 32.

The Bill, as introduced, applied only to the High Courts. We have made it applicable also to the principal Civil Courts in the Mofussil, and the greater part of the additions which we have made to the Bill, have necessarily followed from this extension. Thus, we have authorized the High Court (which is defined so as to include the Chief Court of the Panjáb) to remove and try, as a Court of original jurisdiction, suits instituted in the District Courts, and to transfer such suits from one District Court to another. We have empowered the District Judges to refer questions to the High Court: we have provided that decrees for divorce and decrees of nullity of marriage, when made by a District Judge, shall, like sentences of death, be subject to confirmation by the High Court; and we have added a schedule of forms of the petitions and statements likely to be of common occurrence under the proposed Act. In Burma the 'District Judge' will be one of the Recorders. In the other Non-Regulation Provinces he will be the Commissioner of a Division, and in places beyond the limits of British India (for Christian subjects in which the Governor General in Council has now power to legislate), he will be such officer as the Governor General in Council shall appoint. In such places and in the Non-Regulation Provinces other than Burma, 'High Court,' is defined as the High Court or Chief Court to whose original criminal jurisdiction the petitioner is subject, or would be subject if he were an European British subject. A reference to the notification for the time being issued under Act 28 Vic., c. 15, will thus at once indicate the High Court intended. In Burma, 'High Court' will of course be the High Court at Fort William.

Great doubts prevail as to the extent to which English Courts will recognize Indian divorces or decrees of nullity in cases where the parties have been married in England, or have not a permanent Indian domicile. We have, therefore, limited the operation of the Act in this respect to cases in which the husband is a Christian, whose marriage has been solemnized in this country, and who at the date of the marriage had his domicile in India, and has retained such domicile down to the institution of the suit. Such persons alone will be forbidden (sec. 61) to maintain suits for criminal conversation.

We have excluded Roman Catholics from petitioning for decrees of dissolution of marriage.

We have defined, in accordance with English decisions, 'bigamy with adultery' and 'desertion.' We have also provided that no adultery shall be deemed to have been 'condoned,' unless where conjugal cohabitation has actually been resumed or continued, and thus precluded the doubt which exists in England as to whether condonation can be constituted by words only.

We have provided (sec. 10) that a wife may obtain a divorce when, subsequently to the marriage, the husband has changed his religion and taken another wife, in which case, when the new religion permits a plurality of wives, the High Court at Madras has lately held that he does not commit bigamy within the meaning of the Penal Code.

We have specified (sec. 11), in accordance with recent English cases, the grounds on which a petitioner for a divorce on account of adultery may be excused from making the adulterer a co-respondent. We have struck out the clause empowering the Court to make an alleged adulteress a co-respondent. The corresponding clause in the English Act has, it is believed, been a dead letter.

We have also struck out the provisions which the Bill as introduced contained for the intervention of the Solicitor to Government in cases of suspected collusion. We have provided (sec. 17) that any person suspecting collusion during the progress of the suit in the District Court, may apply to the High Court to remove the suit and try it as a Court of original jurisdiction. The High Court will then, if it think fit, remove and try the case, or direct the District Judge to take the steps necessary to enable him to make a proper decree.

In section 19 we have specified the grounds on which a decree of nullity of marriage may be pronounced.

Under the Indian Succession Act, sec. 4, in the case of a marriage celebrated since the 1st January 1866, the husband acquires no interest in his wife's property. We have, therefore (sec. 27), confined the power of granting a protection-order to cases in which the fourth section of that Act does not apply to the wife.

In section 33 we have provided that nothing shall be pleaded in answer to a petition for restitution of conjugal rights which would not be ground for a suit for judicial separation.

In section 35 we have provided, in accordance with English decisions, that the co-respondent in a suit for divorce on account of adultery shall not be ordered to pay the petitioner's costs (1) if the respondent was at the time of the adultery living apart from her husband and leading the life of a prostitute, or (2) if the co-respondent had not at the time of the adultery reason to believe the respondent to be a married woman.

We have expressly empowered (sec. 36) the Courts to grant alimony pendente lite whether the wife has or has not obtained a protection-order, and we have provided that such alimony shall in case of a decree for divorce or of nullity, continue payable until the decree is made absolute or is confirmed.

We have limited the powers of making orders as to the custody of children of Native fathers to cases of boys under the age of sixteen, and girls under the age of thirteen years. These ages have been fixed with reference to the Indian Marriage Act (V of 1865), sec. 48. In other cases, the children must be under eighteen years and unmarried. Here the age has been fixed with reference to the definition of 'minor' contained in the Indian Succession Act.

We propose (sec. 47) that petitions under the Act (other than petitions for alimony, custody of children and protection-orders), shall bear a stamp of five rupees; that petitions for a dissolution, a decree of nullity, or a judicial separation, shall (like the verifying affidavits in England) state the absence of collusion, and that the statements contained in every petition shall be verified like plaints.

We have made provisions (secs. 48, 49), as to suits on behalf of lunatics and suits by minors, and required, in the latter case, the next friend to render himself liable to pay the respondent's costs. The Code of Civil Procedure, which will regulate generally the proceedings under the Act, has no provision in this respect.

We have empowered (sec. 53) the Court to close the doors during the whole or any part of the proceedings. The absence of a similar power in England has justly been regretted.

We have empowered (sec. 54) the Courts to adjourn, from time to time, the hearing of any petition under the Act. The Code of Civil Procedure (Act VIII of 1859, secs. 109, 113) appears to provide for adjournments only at the first hearing.

The Indian Legislature has no power to limit the term within which the Privy Council may receive appeals: we have therefore (sec. 57) added to the clause permitting remarriage six months after a decree for dissolution, a proviso that no appeal shall have gone to England.

We have struck out as likely to be useless the provision which the Bill contained as to jactitation of marriage.

We have empowered (sec. 62) the High Courts and the Chief Court of the Panjáb to make rules consistent with the proposed Act and the Code of Civil Procedure.

We have re-arranged the sections, altered the title and preamble, and made several verbal changes in the body of the Bill; and we recommend that the Bill thus altered be republished, with this report; in the Gazette of India; that copies thereof be submitted to the learned Judges of the four High Courts and the Chief Court of the Panjáb for such remarks as they may think fit to offer; that they should also be asked whether they would recommend the addition of a clause empowering the Courts to make declarations of legitimacy and of the validity or invalidity of marriages; and that the further consideration of the Bill be postponed until the Council re-assembles in Calcutta.

AMENDED BILL.

A Bill to amend the law relating to Divorce and Matrimonial Causes in India.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to the divorce of certain persons professing the Christian religion domiciled in India, and to confer upon certain Courts jurisdiction in matters matrimonial as between these and other Christians; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

I.—Preliminary.

Short title. Commencement of Act.

1. This Act may be called "The Indian Divorce Act," and shall come into operation on the first day of January 1869.

Extent of Act.

2. Nothing in this Act shall be taken to authorize any Court to make decrees of dissolution of marriage or nullity of marriage, except in cases where the husband is a person professing the Christian religion, whose marriage has been solemnized in India and who, at the date of the marriage, had his domicil in India and has retained such domicil down to the institution of the suit, or except in cases where the wife is a person professing the Christian religion, whose marriage has been solemnized in India, and whose husband at the date of the marriage had his domicil in India, and has retained such domicil down to the institution of the suit; but who has since the solemnization of his marriage exchanged his profession of Christianity for the profession of some other form of religion.

Interpretation clause.

3. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context,—

"High Court."

(1.) "High Court" means, in any Regulation Province, the Court there established under the Act of the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth of Victoria, Chapter one hundred and four,

in the territories for the time being subject to the government of the Lieutenant Governor of the Panjáb, the Chief Court of the Panjáb, in British Burma, the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, and in any other Non-Regulation Province and in any place in the dominions of the Princes and States of India in alliance with Her Majesty, the High Court or Chief Court to whose original criminal jurisdiction the petitioner is for the time being subject, or would be subject if he or she were an European British subject of Her Majesty:

In the case of any petition under this Act, 'High Court' is that one of the aforesaid Courts within the local limits of whose ordinary appellate jurisdiction, or of whose jurisdiction under this Act, the husband and wife reside or last resided together:

"District Judge."

(2.) "District Judge" means, in the Regulation Provinces, a Judge of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction, in the Non-Regulation Provinces, other than British Burma, a Commissioner of a Division, in Pegu, the Recorder at Rangoon, in Arakan, the Recorder at Rangoon until a Recorder's Court is established at Akyab, and thenceforward the Recorder at Akyab, in the Tenasserim Provinces, the Recorder at Maulmain, and in any place in the dominions of the Princes and States aforesaid, such officer as the Governor General of India in Council shall from time to time appoint in this behalf by notification in the Gazette of India and, in the absence of such officer, the High Court in the exercise of its original jurisdiction under this Act:

(3.) "District Court" means, in the case of any petition under this Act, the Court of the District Judge within the local limits of whose ordinary jurisdiction, or of whose jurisdiction under this Act, the husband and wife reside or last resided together:

"Court."

(4.) "Court" means the High Court or the District Court, as the case may be:

(5.) "Minor children" means in the case of sons of Native fathers, boys who have not completed the age of sixteen years and, in the case of daughters of Native fathers, girls who have not completed the age of thirteen years: In other cases it means unmarried children who have not completed the age of eighteen years.

"Incestuous adultery."

(6.) "Incestuous adultery" means adultery committed by a husband with a woman with whom, if his wife were dead, he could not lawfully contract marriage by reason of her being within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity (whether natural or legal) or affinity:

(7.) "Bigamy with adultery" means adultery with the same woman with whom the bigamy was committed:

"Marriage with another woman."

(8.) "Marriage with another woman" means marriage of any person being married to any other person, during the life of the former wife, whether the second marriage shall have taken place within the dominions of Her Majesty or elsewhere:

(9.) "Desertion" implies an abandonment against the wish of the person charging it;

(10.) and "property" includes in the case of a wife any property to which she is entitled for an estate in remainder or reversion or as a trustee, executrix or administratrix; and the date of the death of the testator or intestate shall be deemed to be the time at which any such wife becomes entitled as executrix or administratrix.

II.—Jurisdiction.

Matrimonial jurisdiction of High Courts to be exercised subject to this Act.

4. The jurisdiction now exercised by the High Courts in respect of divorce a mensâ et toro, and in all other causes, suits and matters matrimonial, shall be exercised by such Courts and by the District Courts subject to the provisions in this Act contained, and not otherwise: except so far as relates to the granting of marriage-licenses, which may be granted as if this Act had not been passed.

Exception.

Enforcement of decrees or orders made heretofore by any Supreme or High Court.

5. Any decree or order of the late Supreme Courts of Judicature at Calcutta, Madras, or Bombay sitting on the ecclesiastical side, or of any of the said High Courts sitting in the exercise of their matrimonial jurisdiction, respectively, in any cause or matter matrimonial, may be enforced and dealt with by the said High Courts, respectively, as hereinafter mentioned, in like manner as if such decree or order had been originally made under this Act by the Court so enforcing or dealing with the same.

Pending suits.

6. All suits and proceedings in causes and matters matrimonial, which when this Act comes into operation are pending in any High Court, shall be dealt with and decided by such Court, so far as may be, as if they had been originally instituted therein under this Act.

Court to act on principles of English Divorce Court.

7. Subject to the provisions contained in this Act, the High Courts and District Courts shall, in all suits and proceedings hereunder, act and give relief on principles and rules which, in the opinion of the said Courts, are as nearly as may be conformable to the principles and rules on which the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes in England for the time being acts and gives relief.

Extraordinary jurisdiction of High Court.

8. The High Court may whenever it thinks fit remove and try and determine as a Court of original jurisdiction any suit or proceeding instituted under this Act in the Court of any District Judge within the limits of its jurisdiction under this Act.

Power to transfer suits.

The High Court may also withdraw any such suit or proceeding, and transfer it for trial or disposal to the Court of any other such District Judge.

References to High Courts.

9. When any question of law or usage having the force of law arises at any point in the proceedings previous to the hearing of any suit under this Act by a District Court, or at any subsequent stage of such suit, or in the execution of the decree therein or order thereon, the Court may, either of its own motion or on the application of any of the parties, draw up a statement of the case and refer it, with the Court's own opinion thereon, to the decision of the High Court.

If the question has arisen previous to or in the hearing, the District Court may either stay such proceedings, or proceed in the case pending such reference, and pass a decree contingent upon the opinion of the High Court upon it.

If a decree or order has been made, its execution shall be stayed until the receipt of the order of the High Court upon such reference.

III.—Dissolution of Marriage.

When husband may petition for dissolution.

10. Subject to the provisions of section two, any husband not a Roman Catholic may present a petition to the District Court or to the High Court, praying that his marriage may be dissolved on the ground that his wife has, since the solemnization thereof, been guilty of adultery.

When wife may petition for a dissolution.

Subject as aforesaid, any wife not a Roman Catholic may present a petition to the District Court or to the High Court, praying that her marriage may be dissolved on the ground that since the solemnization thereof her husband has exchanged his profession of Christianity for the profession of some other religion, and gone through a form of marriage with another woman;

or has been guilty of incestuous adultery,

or of bigamy with adultery,

or of marriage with another woman with adultery,

or of rape, sodomy or bestiality, or of adultery coupled with such cruelty as would have entitled her to a divorce a mensâ et toro, without adultery or of adultery coupled with desertion, without reasonable excuse, for two years or upwards.

Contents of petition.

Every such petition shall state, as distinctly as the nature of the case permits, the facts on which the claim to have such marriage dissolved is founded.

Adulterer to be a co-respondent.

11. Upon any such petition presented by a husband, the petitioner shall make the alleged adulterer a co-respondent to the said petition, unless he is excused from so doing on one of the following grounds, to be allowed by the Court:—

(1.) That the respondent is leading the life of a prostitute, and that the petitioner knows of no person with whom the adultery has been committed.

(2.) That the name of the alleged adulterer is unknown to the petitioner, although he has made due efforts to discover it.

(3.) That the alleged adulterer is dead.

Court to be satisfied of absence of collusion.

12. Upon any such petition for the dissolution of a marriage, the Court shall satisfy itself, so far as it reasonably can, not only as to the facts alleged, but also whether or not the petitioner has been in any manner accessory to, or conniving at, the going through of the said form of marriage, or the adultery, or has condoned the same, and shall also inquire into any countercharge which may be made against the petitioner.

Dismissal of petition.

13. In case the Court, on the evidence in relation to any such petition, is satisfied that the petitioner's case has not been proved, or is not satisfied that the alleged adultery has been committed, or finds that the petitioner has, during the marriage, been accessory to, or conniving at, the going through of the said form of marriage, or the adultery of the other party to the marriage, or has condoned the adultery complained of,

or that the petition is presented or prosecuted in collusion with either of the respondents, then and in any of the said cases the Court shall dismiss the petition.

Power to Court to pronounce decree for dissolving marriage.

14. In case the Court is satisfied on the evidence that the case of the petitioner has been proved, and does not find that the petitioner has been in any manner accessory to, or conniving at, the going through of the said form of marriage, or the adultery of the other party to the marriage, or has condoned the adultery complained of,

or that the petition is presented or prosecuted in collusion with either of the respondents, the Court shall pronounce a decree declaring such marriage to be dissolved in the manner and subject to all the provisions and limitations in sections sixteen and seventeen made and declared:

Provided that the Court shall not be bound to pronounce such decree if it finds that the petitioner has, during the marriage, been guilty of adultery, or if the petitioner has, in the opinion of the Court, been guilty of unreasonable delay in presenting or prosecuting such petition,

or of cruelty towards the other party to the marriage,

or of having deserted or wilfully separated himself or herself from the other party before the adultery complained of, and without reasonable excuse, or of such wilful neglect or misconduct of or towards the other party as has conduced to the adultery.

Condonation.

No adultery shall be deemed to have been condoned within the meaning of this Act unless where conjugal cohabitation has been resumed or continued.

Relief in case of opposition on certain grounds.

15. In any suit instituted for dissolution of marriage, if the respondent opposes the relief sought on the ground, in case of such a suit instituted by a husband, of his adultery, cruelty, or desertion without reasonable excuse, or, in case of such a suit instituted by a wife, on the ground of her adultery and cruelty, the Court may in such suit give to the respondent, on his or her application, the same relief to which he or she would have been entitled in case he or she had presented a petition seeking such relief.

Decrees for dissolution to be nisi.

16. Every decree for a dissolution of marriage made by a High Court not being a confirmation of a decree of a District Court, shall, in the first instance, be a decree nisi, not to be made absolute till after the expiration of such time, not less than six months from the pronouncing thereof, as the High Court, by general or special order from time to time directs.

Collusion.

During that period any person shall be at liberty, in such manner as the High Court by general or special order from time to time directs, to show cause why the said decree should not be made absolute by reason of the same having been obtained by collusion or by reason of material facts not being brought before the Court.

On cause being so shown, the Court shall deal with the case by making the decree absolute, or by reversing the decree nisi, or by requiring further inquiry, or otherwise as justice may demand.

The High Court may order the costs of Counsel and witnesses and otherwise arising from such cause being shown to be paid by the parties or such one or more of them as it thinks fit, including a wife, if she have separate property.

Confirmation of decree for dissolution by District Judge.

17. Every decree for a dissolution of marriage made by a District Judge shall be subject to confirmation by the High Court.

Cases for confirmation of a decree for a dissolution of marriage shall be heard by a Court constituted by two or more Judges of the High Court.

The High Court, if it think further enquiry or additional evidence to be necessary, may direct such enquiry to be made, or such evidence to be taken.

The result of such enquiry and the additional evidence shall be certified to the High Court by the District Judge, and the High Court shall thereupon make a decree for dissolution of marriage, or such other order as to the Court seems fit.

Provided that no decree shall be confirmed under this section till after the expiration of such time, not less than six months from the pronouncing thereof as the High Court by general or special order from time to time directs.

During the progress of the suit in the Court of the District Judge, any person suspecting that any parties to the suit are or have been acting in collusion for the purpose of obtaining a divorce, shall be at liberty, in such manner as the High Court by general or special order from time to time directs, to apply to the High Court to remove the suit under section eight, and the High Court shall thereupon, if it think fit, remove such suit and try and determine the same as a Court of original jurisdiction, and the provisions contained in section sixteen shall apply to every suit so removed; or it may direct the District Judge to take such steps in respect of the alleged collusion as may be necessary to enable him to make a decree in accordance with the justice of the case.

IV.—Nullity of Marriage.

Petition for decree of nullity.

18. Subject to the provisions of section two, any husband or wife may present a petition to the District Court or to the High Court, praying that his or her marriage may be declared null and void.

Grounds of decree.

19. Such decree may be made on any of the following grounds:—

(1.) That the respondent was impotent at the time of the marriage and at the time of the institution of the suit;

(2.) That the parties are within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity (whether natural or legal) or affinity;

(3.) That either party was a lunatic or idiot at the time of the marriage;

(4.) That either party was married to some third person at the time of the marriage.

Confirmation of District Judge's decree.

20. Every decree of nullity of marriage made by a District Judge shall be subject to confirmation by the High Court, and the provisions of section seventeen, clauses one, two, three and four, shall mutatis mutandis apply to such decrees.

V.—Judicial Separation.

No decree for divorce a mensâ et toro to be made.

21. No decree shall hereafter be made for a divorce a mensâ et toro, but in all cases in which a decree for a divorce a mensâ et toro might now be pronounced, the District Court or High Court may pronounce a decree for a judicial separation.

Decree of judicial separation obtainable by husband or wife.

22. A decree of judicial separation may be obtained either by the husband or the wife, on the ground of adultery, or cruelty, or desertion without reasonable excuse, for two years or upwards, and shall have the effect of a divorce a mensâ et toro under the existing law and such other legal effect as herein mentioned.

Application for separation made by petition.

23. Application for judicial separation on any one of the grounds aforesaid, may be made by either husband or wife by petition to the District Court or the High Court; and the Court on being satisfied of the truth of the statements made in such petition, and that there is no legal ground why the application should not be granted, may decree judicial separation accordingly.

Separated wife to be deemed a spinster with respect to after-acquired property.

24. In every case of a judicial separation under this Act, the wife shall, from the date of the sentence, and whilst the separation continues, be considered as unmarried with respect to property of every description which she may acquire, or which may come to or devolve upon her.

Such property may be disposed of by her in all respects as an unmarried woman, and on her decease the same shall, in case she dies intestate, go as the same would have gone if her husband had been then dead:

Provided that, if any such wife again cohabits with her husband, all such property as she may be entitled to when such cohabitation takes place shall be held to her separate use, subject, however, to any agreement in writing made between herself and her husband whilst separate.

Separated wife to be deemed a spinster for purposes of contract and suing.

25. In every case of a judicial separation under this Act, the wife shall, whilst so separated, be considered as an unmarried woman for the purposes of contract, and wrongs and injuries, and suing and being sued in any civil proceeding; and her husband shall not be liable in respect of any engagement or contract she may have entered into, or for any wrongful act or omission by her, or for any costs she may incur as plaintiff or defendant:

Provided that where, upon any such judicial separation, alimony has been decreed or ordered to be paid to the wife, and the same is not duly paid by the husband, he shall be liable for necessaries supplied for her use:

Provided also that nothing shall prevent the wife from joining, at any time during such separation, in the exercise of any joint power given to herself and her husband.

Reversal of Decree of Separation.

Decree of separation obtained during the absence of husband or wife may be reversed.

26. Any husband or wife, upon the application of whose wife or husband, as the case may be, a decree of judicial separation has been pronounced, may, at any time thereafter, present a petition to the Court by which the decree was pronounced praying for a reversal of such decree on the ground that it was obtained in his or her absence, and that there was reasonable excuse for the alleged desertion, where desertion was the ground of such decree.

The Court may on being satisfied of the truth of the allegations of such petition, reverse the decree accordingly; but such reversal shall not prejudice or affect the rights or remedies which any other person would have had in case it had not been decreed, in respect of any debts, contracts, or acts of the wife incurred, entered into, or done between the times of the sentence of separation and of the reversal thereof.

VI.—Protection Orders.

Deserted wife may apply to Court for protection.

27. Any wife to whom the fourth section of of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, does not apply, may, when deserted by her husband, present a petition to the District Court or the High Court, at any time after such desertion, for an order to protect any property which she may have acquired or may acquire, and any property of which she may have become possessed or may become possessed after such desertion, against her husband or his creditors, or any person claiming under him.

Court may grant protection-order.

28. The Court, if satisfied of the fact of such desertion, and that the same was without reasonable excuse, and that the wife is maintaining herself by her own industry or property, may make and give to the wife an order protecting her earnings and other property from her husband and all creditors and persons claiming under him. Every such order shall state the time at which the desertion commenced, and shall, as regards all persons dealing with the wife in reliance thereon, be conclusive as to such time.

Discharge or variation of orders.

29. The husband or any creditor of, or person claiming under, him may apply to the Court by which such order was made for the discharge or variation thereof, and the Court, if the desertion has ceased, or if for any other reason it think fit so to do, may discharge or vary the order accordingly.

Liability of husband seizing his wife's property after notice of order.

30. If the husband or any creditor of, or person claiming under, the husband seizes or continues to hold any property of the wife after notice of any such order, he shall be liable, at the suit of the wife (which she is hereby empowered to bring) to return or deliver to her the specific property, and also to pay her a sum equal to double its value.

Wife's legal position during continuance of order.

31. So long as any such order of protection remains in force, the wife shall be and be deemed to have been, during such desertion of her, in the like position in all respects, with regard to property and contracts and suing and being sued, as she would be under this Act if she obtained a decree of judicial separation.

VII.—Restitution of Conjugal Rights.

Petition for restitution of conjugal rights.

32. When either the husband or the wife has, without reasonable excuse, withdrawn from the society of the other, either wife or husband may apply, by petition to the District Court or the High Court, for restitution of conjugal rights, and the Court on being satisfied of the truth of the statements made in such petition, and that there is no legal ground why the application should not be granted, may decree restitution of conjugal rights accordingly.

Answer to petition.

33. Nothing shall be pleaded in answer to a petition for restitution of conjugal rights which would not be ground for a suit for judicial separation.

VIII.—Damages and Costs.

Husband may claim damages from adulterer.

34. Any husband may, either in a petition for dissolution of marriage or for judicial separation, or in a petition to the District Court or the High Court limited to such object only, claim damages from any person on the ground of his having committed adultery with the wife of such petitioner.

Such petition shall be served on the alleged adulterer and the wife, unless the Court dispenses with such service, or directs some other service to be substituted.

The damages to be recovered on any such petition shall be ascertained by the said Court, although the respondents or either of them may not appear.

After the decision has been given, the Court may direct in what manner such damages shall be paid or applied.

Power to order adulterer to pay costs.

35. Whenever in any petition presented by a husband the alleged adulterer has been made a co-respondent, and the adultery has been established, the Court may order the co-respondent to pay the whole or any part of the costs of the proceedings:

Provided that the co-respondent shall not be ordered to pay the petitioner's costs,

(1) if the respondent was at the time of the adultery living apart from her husband and leading the life of a prostitute, or

(2) if the co-respondent had not at the time of the adultery reason to believe the respondent to be a married woman.

IX.—Alimony.

Alimony pendente lite.

36. In any suit under this Act, whether it be instituted by a husband or a wife and whether or not she has obtained an order of protection, the wife may present a petition for alimony pending the suit.

Such petition shall be served on the husband; and the Court, on being satisfied of the truth of the statements therein contained, may make such order on the husband for payment to the wife of alimony pending the suit as it may deem just, taking into consideration his average net income for the three years last preceding the date of the order.

Alimony pending the suit shall continue, in case of a decree for dissolution of marriage or of nullity of marriage, until the decree is made absolute or is confirmed, as the case may be.

Power to order permanent alimony.

37. The High Court may, if it think fit, on any decree absolute declaring a marriage to be dissolved, and the District Judge may, if he thinks fit, on the confirmation of any decree of his declaring a marriage to be dissolved, order that the husband shall, to the satisfaction of the Court, secure to the wife such gross sum of money, or such annual sum of money for any term not exceeding her own life, as having regard to her fortune (if any), to the ability of the husband, and to the conduct of the parties, it thinks reasonable, and for that purpose may cause a proper instrument to be executed by all necessary parties.

The High Court may in such case, if it sees fit, suspend the pronouncing of its decree or the confirmation of the decree of the District Judge until the instrument has been duly executed.

Power to order monthly or weekly payments.

In every such case the Court may make an order on the husband for payment to the wife of such monthly or weekly sums for her maintenance and support as the Court may think reasonable:

Provided that if the husband afterwards from any cause becomes unable to make such payments, it shall be lawful for the Court to discharge or modify the order, or temporarily to suspend the same as to the whole or any part of the money so ordered to be paid, and again to revive the same order wholly or in part as to the Court seems fit.

Court may direct payment of alimony to wife or to her trustee.

38. In all cases in which the Court makes any decree or order for alimony, it may direct the same to be paid either to the wife herself, or to any trustee on her behalf to be approved by the Court, and may impose any terms or restrictions which to the Court seem expedient, and may from time to time appoint a new trustee, if it appears to the Court expedient so to do.

X.—Settlements.

Power to order settlement of wife's property for benefit of husband and children.

39. Whenever the Court pronounces a decree of dissolution of marriage or judicial separation for adultery of the wife, if it is made to appear to the Court that the wife is entitled to any property, the Court may, if it think fit, order such settlement as it thinks reasonable to be made of such property or any part thereof, for the benefit of the husband, or of the children of the marriage, or of both.

Any instrument executed pursuant to any order of the Court at the time of or after the pronouncing of a decree of dissolution of marriage or judicial separation, shall be deemed valid notwithstanding the existence of the disability of coverture at the time of the execution thereof.

Settlement of damages.

The Court may direct that the whole or any part of the damages recovered under section thirty-four shall be settled for the benefit of the children of the marriage, or as a provision for the maintenance of the wife.

Inquiry into existence of ante-nuptial or post-nuptial settlements.

40. The High Court, after a decree absolute for dissolution of marriage, or a decree of nullity of marriage, and the District Court after its decree for dissolution of marriage or of nullity of marriage has been confirmed, may inquire into the existence for ante-nuptial or post-nuptial settlements made on the parties whose marriage is the subject of the decree, and may make such orders with reference to the application of the whole or a portion of the property settled, whether for the benefit of the children of the marriage or of their respective parents, or of both children and parents, as to the Court seem fit:

Provided that the Court shall not make any order for the benefit of the parents or either of them at the expense of the children.

XI.—Custody of Children.

Power to make orders as to custody of children in suit for separation.

41. In any suit for obtaining a judicial separation the Court may from time to time, before making its decree, make such interim orders, and may make such provision in the decree, as it deems proper with respect to the custody, maintenance and education of the minor children, the marriage of whose parents is the subject of such suit, and may, if it think fit, direct proceedings to be taken for placing such children under the protection of the said Court.

Power to make such orders after decree.

42. The Court, after a decree of judicial separation, may upon application (by petition) for this purpose make, from time to time, all such orders and provision with respect to the custody, maintenance and education of the minor children, the marriage of whose parents is the subject of the decree, or for placing such children under the protection of the said Court as might have been made by such decree, or by interim orders in case the proceedings for obtaining such decree were still pending.

Power to make orders as to custody of children in suits for dissolution or nullity.

43. In any suit for obtaining a dissolution of marriage or a decree of nullity of marriage instituted in, or removed to, a High Court, the Court may from time to time, before making its decree absolute or its decree (as the case may be), make such interim orders, and may make such provision in the decree absolute or decree, and in any such suit instituted in a District Court, the Court may from time to time before its decree is confirmed make such interim orders and may make such provision on such confirmation, as the High Court or District Court (as the case may be) deems proper with respect to the custody, maintenance and education of the minor children, the marriage of whose parents is the subject of the suit;

and may, if it think fit, direct proceedings to be taken for placing such children under the protection of the Court.

Power to make such orders after decree or confirmation.

44. The High Court after a decree absolute for dissolution of marriage or a decree of nullity of marriage, and the District Court after a decree for dissolution of marriage or of nullity of marriage has been confirmed, may upon application by petition for the purpose make from time to time all such orders and provision with respect to the custody, maintenance and education of the minor children, the marriage of whose parents was the subject of the decree, or for placing such children under the protection of the said Court as might have been made by such decree absolute or decree (as the case may be), or by such interim orders as aforesaid.

XII.—Procedure.

Code of Civil Procedure to apply.

45. Subject to the provisions herein contained, all proceedings under this Act between party and party shall be regulated by the Code of Civil Procedure.

Forms of petitions and statements.

46. The forms set forth in the schedule to this Act, with such variation as the circumstances of each case require, may be used for the respective purposes mentioned in such schedule.

Stamp on petition.

47. Every petition under this Act for a decree of dissolution of marriage, or of nullity of marriage, or of judicial separation, or of reversal of judicial separation, or for restitution of conjugal rights, or for damages, shall bear a stamp of five rupees, and shall, in the first, second and third cases mentioned in this section, state that there is not any collusion or connivance between the petitioner and the other party to the marriage.

Petitions to state absence of collusion.

Statements to be verified.

The statements contained in every petition under this Act shall be verified by the petitioner or some other competent person in manner required by law for the verification of plaints, and may at the hearing be referred to as evidence.

Suits on behalf of lunatics.

48. When the husband or wife is a lunatic or idiot, any suit under this Act (other than a suit for restitution of conjugal rights) may be brought on his or her behalf by the committee or other person entitled to his or her custody.

Suits by minors

49. Where the petitioner is a minor, he or she shall sue by his or her next friend to be approved by the Court; and no petition presented by a minor under this Act shall be filed until the next friend has undertaken in writing to be answerable for costs.

Such undertaking shall bear a stamp of eight annas and shall be filed in Court, and the next friend shall thereupon be liable in the same manner and to the same extent as if he were a plaintiff in an ordinary suit.

Service of petition.

50. Every petition under this Act shall be served on the party to be affected thereby, either within or without British India, in such manner as the High Court by general or special order from time to time directs:

Provided that the Court may dispense with such service altogether in case it seems necessary or expedient so to do.

Mode of taking evidence.

51. The witnesses in all proceedings before the Court, where their attendance can be had, shall be examined orally:

Provided that the parties shall be at liberty to verify their respective cases in whole or in part by affidavit, but so that the deponent in every such affidavit shall, on the application of the opposite party, or by direction of the Court, be subject to be cross-examined by or on behalf of the opposite party orally, and after such cross-examination may be re-examined orally as aforesaid by or on behalf of the party by whom such affidavit was filed.

Competence of husband and wife to give evidence as to cruelty or desertion.

52. On any petition presented by a wife, praying that her marriage may be dissolved by reason of her husband having been guilty of adultery coupled with cruelty, or of adultery coupled with desertion without reasonable excuse, the husband and wife respectively shall be competent and compellable to give evidence of or relating to such cruelty or desertion.

Power to close doors.

53. The whole or any part of any proceeding under this Act may be heard, if the Court thinks fit, with closed doors.

Power to adjourn.

54. The Court may from time to time adjourn the hearing of any petition under this Act, and may require further evidence thereon if it sees fit so to do.

Enforcement of and appeals from orders and decrees.

55. All decrees and orders made by the Court in any suit or proceeding under this Act shall be enforced and may be appealed from in the like manner as the decrees and orders of the Court made in the exercise of its original civil jurisdiction are enforced and may be appealed from under the laws, rules and orders for the time being in force:

Provided that there shall be no appeal from a decree of a District Judge for dissolution of marriage or of nullity of marriage:

No appeal as to costs.

Provided also that there shall be no appeal on the subject of costs only.

Appeal to Queen in Council.

56. Any person may appeal to Her Majesty in Council from any decree (other than a decree nisi) or order under this Act of a High Court made on appeal or otherwise, and from any decree (other than a decree nisi) or order made in the exercise of original jurisdiction by Judges of a High Court or of any Division Court from which an appeal shall not lie to the High Court, when the High Court declares that the case is a fit one for appeal to Her Majesty in Council.

XIII.—Re-marriage.

Liberty to parties to marry again.

57. When six months after the date of any decree of a High Court dissolving a marriage, have expired, and no appeal has been presented against such decree, or when any such appeal has been dismissed,

or when in the result of any such appeal any marriage is declared to be dissolved,

but not sooner, it shall be lawful for the respective parties to the marriage to marry again, as if the prior marriage had been dissolved by death:

Provided that no appeal to Her Majesty in Council has been presented against any such decree or order.

When such appeal has been dismissed, or when in the result thereof, the marriage is declared to be dissolved, but not sooner, it shall be lawful for the respective parties to the marriage to marry again as if the prior marriage had been dissolved by death.

English clergyman not compelled to solemnize marriages of person divorced for adultery.

58. No clergyman in Holy Orders of the United Church of England and Ireland shall be compelled to solemnize the marriage of any person whose former marriage has been dissolved on the ground of his or her adultery, or shall be liable to any suit, penalty, or censure for solemnizing or refusing to solemnize the marriage of any such person.

English Minister refusing to perform ceremony to permit use of his church.

59. When any Minister of any Church or Chapel of the said United Church refuses to perform such marriage-service between any person who but for such refusal would be entitled to have the same service performed in such Church or Chapel, such Minister shall permit any other Minister in Holy Orders of the said Church, entitled to officiate within the diocese in which such Church or Chapel is situate, to perform such marriage-service in such Church or Chapel.

XIV.—Miscellaneous.

Decree for separation or protection order to be valid as to persons dealing with wife before reversal.

60. Every decree for judicial separation or order to protect property obtained by a wife under this Act shall, until reversed or discharged, be deemed valid, so far as necessary for the protection of any person dealing with the wife.

No reversal, discharge or variation of such decree or order shall affect any rights or remedies which any person would otherwise have had in respect of any contracts or acts of the wife entered into or done between the dates of such decree or order, and of the reversal, discharge or variation thereof.

Indemnity of persons making payment to wife without notice of reversal of decree or protection order.

All persons who in reliance on any such decree or order make any payment to, or permit any transfer, or act to be made or done by, the wife who has obtained the same shall, notwithstanding such decree or order may then have been reversed, discharged or varied, or the separation of the wife from her husband may have ceased, or at some time since the making of the decree or order been discontinued, be protected and indemnified as if at the time of such payment, transfer or other act such decree or order were valid and still subsisting without variation, and the separation had not ceased or been discontinued, unless, at the time of the payment, transfer or other act, such persons had notice of the reversal, discharge or variation of the decree or order or of the cessation or discontinuance of the separation.

No action for criminal conversation.

61. After this Act comes into operation, no suit shall be maintainable by any person excepted in the first clause of section two for criminal conversation with his wife.

Power to make rules.

62. The High Court shall make such rules under this Act as it may from time to time consider expedient, and may from time to time alter and add to the same:

Provided that such rules, alterations and additions are consistent with the provisions of this Act and the Code of Civil Procedure.

All such rules, alterations and additions shall be published in the local Official Gazette.

No. 13.—Statement in answer to No. 11.

In the (High) Court of

B. against B.

A. B., of , the above-named respondent, in answer to the petition for alimony pending the suit of C. B., says,—

1. In answer to the first paragraph of the said petition, I say that I have for the last three years carried on the business of , at and that from such business, I have derived a net annual income of Rs. 900, but less than Rs. 1,000.

2. In answer to the 2nd paragraph of the said petition, I say that I am possessed of plate, furniture, linen, and other chattels and effects at my said house, aforesaid, of the value of Rs. 7,000, but as I verily believe of no larger value. And I say that a portion of the said plate, furniture, and other chattels and effects of the value of Rs. 1,500, belonged to my said wife before our marriage, but the remaining portions thereof I have since purchased with my own monies. And I say that, save as hereinbefore set forth, I am not possessed of the plate and other effects as alleged in the said paragraph in the said petition, and that I did not acquire the same as in the said petition also mentioned.

3. I admit that I am entitled under the will of my father, subject to the life interest of my mother therein, to property of the value of Rs. 5,000, that is to say, I shall be entitled under my said father's will, upon the death of my mother, to a legacy of Rs. 7,000, out of which I shall have to pay to my father's executors the sum of Rs. 2,000, the amount of a debt owing by me to his estate, and upon which debt I am now paying interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum.

4. And, in further answer to the said petition, I say that I have no income whatever except that derived from my aforesaid business, and which income, since my said wife left me, which she did on the day of last, has been considerably diminished, and that such diminution is likely to continue. And I say that out of my said income, I have to pay the annual sum of Rs. 100 for such interest as aforesaid to my late father's executors, and also to support myself and my two eldest children.

5. And, in further answer to the said petition, I say that when my wife left my dwelling-house on the day of last, she took with her, and has ever since withheld and still withholds from me, plate, watches, and other effects in the 2nd paragraph of this my answer mentioned, of the value of, as I verily believe, Rs. 800 at the least; and I also say that within five days of her departure from my house as aforesaid, my said wife received bills due to me from certain lodgers of mine, amounting in the aggregate to Rs. , and that she has ever since withheld and still withholds from me the same sum.

(Signed) A. B.

(e.)—The petitioner should state her husband's income as accurately as possible.

WHITLEY STOKES,

Asst. Secy. to the Govt. of India,
Home Dept. (Legislative.)

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 27th August 1868:—

No. 22 OF 1868.

A Bill to amend the Law relating to the Emigration of Native Labourers.

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Probable length of winter voyage from Madras to Mauritius.

1. The probable length of the voyage from Madras to Mauritius and Seychelles shall, notwithstanding anything contained in Act No. XIII of 1864 (to consolidate and amend the law relating to the emigration of Native Labourers), section eight, be deemed to be, between the months of November and March inclusive, six weeks.

Increase of space allowed to adult emigrants.

2. Notwithstanding anything contained in the same Act, section forty-seven, no compartment in an emigrant ship shall take more than one adult emigrant for every twelve superficial feet on deck, and for every cubic space of seventy-two feet.

Power to prohibit emigration.

3. For section sixty-four of the same Act, the following shall be substituted :—

"64. Whenever the Governor General of India in Council or the Local Government has reason to believe that in any place to which emigration is lawful under this Act, the plague or other infectious disease dangerous to human life has broken out, or that proper measures have not been taken for the protection of emigrants immediately upon their arrival in such place or during their residence therein,

or for their safe return to India,

or to provide a return-passage to India for any such emigrants at or about the time at which they are entitled to such return-passage, it shall be lawful for the said Governor General in Council or for the Local Government, by notification published in the Gazette of India or the local Gazette (as the case may be), to declare that emigration from British India or from the territories subject to the Local Government (as the case may be) to such place shall cease and be prohibited from a certain day to be specified in the notification.

Any notification issued by the Local Government under this section may be cancelled by order of the said Governor General in Council."

Power to increase fees.

4. The Governor General of India in Council may, from time to time by notification in the Gazette of India, increase any fee payable under sections nineteen, twenty-seven or thirty-four of the said Act, and may also in like manner reduce to its present amount any fee so increased: Provided that no fee shall be increased under this section by more than double such amount.

This Act to be read with Act XIII of 1864.

5. This Act shall be read with and taken as part of the said Act No. XIII of 1864.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill, which has been prepared at the desire of the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, is to make in the law relating to the emigration of coolies four small amendments, which have been found desirable since Act No. XIII of 1864 came into operation.

The probable length of the voyage from Madras to Mauritius between the months of November and March, is fixed at five weeks by section eight of that Act. This time has been found too short, and the Bill proposes to extend it to six weeks.

Section 47 of the Act requires that the space to be provided for each adult emigrant shall be ten superficial feet on deck. The Bill proposes to increase this space to twelve superficial feet.

Section 64 of the Act empowers the Governor General in Council to prohibit, in certain specified cases, the emigration of coolies. To these cases the Bill proposes to add that of a dangerous outbreak of infectious disease in the place to which emigration is permitted. And with a view to greater promptitude of action in emergency, the Bill proposes to extend the power of prohibition to Local Governments; but provides that any notification by a Local Government prohibiting emigration, may be cancelled by the Governor General in Council.

Lastly, the Bill authorizes the Governor General in Council to increase, within certain limits, the fees payable under Act XIII of 1864, for licensing depôts, recruiters, and emigrants.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 27th August 1868 :—

No. 23 of 1868.

A Bill to appoint a Receiver of the property of the late Nawáb of the Carnatic.

Preamble.

WHEREAS certain property belonging to the estate of the late Nawáb of the Carnatic has lately been discovered both in the District of Madras and in the territories of His Highness the Nizám, and it is expedient to appoint a Receiver to collect and administer such property and any other property belonging to the said estate which may hereafter be discovered; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Appointment of Receiver of Carnatic property.

1. The Governor of Fort St. George in Council shall appoint such person as he may think fit to act under the orders of the High Court of Judicature at Madras in the administration of the property left by the late Nawáb of the Carnatic and not hitherto collected or administered.

The person so appointed shall have power to collect and take possession of all such property: he shall deal with the same according to the provisions herein contained: he shall give such security (if any) for the due execution of his office as the said Governor in Council may require; and he shall be called "the Receiver of the Carnatic property."

Remuneration of Receiver

2. The Receiver of the Carnatic property shall be entitled to such commission not exceeding five per centum upon the amount or value of the property collected and distributed under the provisions of this Act as the said Governor in Council shall prescribe. Such commission shall be charged to the estate of the said Nawáb.

3. The said Governor in Council may suspend or remove any person appointed such Receiver as aforesaid, and may also from time to time fill up any vacancy in such office occasioned by death, resignation, suspension or removal.

Suspension or removal of Receiver.

4. The Receiver shall represent the estate of the said Nawáb in all proceedings relating thereto: he shall do all acts in performance of his duties by his name of office; and in all legal proceedings he shall be designated by such name.

Receiver to represent Nawáb's estate in all proceedings.

No proceedings to which the Receiver may be a party shall abate by reason of the death, resignation, suspension or removal from office of any such Receiver, but the same shall be continued by his successor as if no such death, resignation, suspension or removal had occurred.

5. The Receiver shall have power to collect and take possession of all property, moveable or immoveable, and whether of the nature of State or public property or not, to which the said Nawáb at the time of his death was entitled, and if necessary to sue for and recover the same property, and to realize its value by sale or otherwise.

Receiver to collect Nawáb's property.

6. Whenever the said Receiver by the order or with the sanction of the said High Court sells any of the said immoveable property, he shall execute a conveyance thereof to the purchaser.

Conveyance on sale by Receiver of immoveable property.

Every such conveyance shall be valid as against the heirs of the said Nawáb, and all persons claiming under them, and also against all persons claiming under the said Nawáb by virtue of any conveyance or instrument declared by the said Court or by the late Supreme Court of Judicature at Madras to be void as against the creditors of the said Nawáb, or by virtue of any security the benefit of which was barred under the provisions of Act No. XXX of 1858 (to provide for the administration of the estate and for the payment of the debts of the late Nawáb of the Carnatic).

7. Upon any suit being instituted for the administration of the said estate, the said Receiver shall be deemed subject to the orders of the said High Court, and, so far as such orders shall not extend, to the general practice of such Court in the same manner as any other Receiver specially appointed thereby, except that the Court shall not require him to give security.

In case of suit for administration, Receiver to be subject to orders of High Court.

8. This Act shall be deemed to have come into operation on the second day of April 1868, and any person holding the office of Receiver of the Carnatic property immediately before that day shall be deemed to have been appointed under this Act.

Commencement of Act.

WHITLEY STOKES,
Asst. Secy. to the Govt. of India,
Home Dept. (Legislative).

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 27th August 1868:—

No. 24 of 1868.

A Bill to bring the Mauza Kheria, in the District of Agra, under the operation of the general Regulations.

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. The Mauza Kheria shall be deemed to be annexed to the District of Agra, and the laws and regulations established for the internal administration of the said District, shall have full force and effect in the said Mauza; and the administration of civil and criminal justice, and the superintendence of the settlement and realization of the public revenue, and of all matters relating to rent in the said Mauza, are hereby vested in the officers for the time being appointed by the Lieutenant Governor of the North-Western Provinces for the said District of Agra.

Extension to Manzah Kherlah of Acts and Regulations in force in District of Agra.

2. This Act shall be deemed to have come into operation on the twenty-sixth day of July 1866.

Commencement of Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

In July 1866, the Ráná of Dholpúr transferred to the Agra District the Mauza Kheria. The Board of Revenue, North-Western Provinces, having represented that the Mauza in question is not subject to the general Regulations, the present Bill, which has been prepared at the request of the Local Government, provides for the annexation of the Mauza to the Agra District, and the extension to it of all Acts and Regulations now in force in that District. The Bill, if it becomes law, will take effect retrospectively from the date of the transfer of the Mauza to the British Government.

FINANCE.

ROYAL WARRANT GRANTING PRIZES FOR GOOD SWORDSMANSHIP AND LANCE PRACTICE.

VICTORIA R.

Clause 36.

WHEREAS WE deem it expedient to revise the regulations under which prizes for good swordsmanship and lance practice are granted to the Non-Commissioned Officers and Men of Our Army.

OUR WILL AND PLEASURE is that Articles 810 to 812 of Our Royal Warrant of 3rd February 1866, be cancelled, and that this Our present Warrant be from and after the date hereof the sole authority regulating the grant of the said rewards.

1.—Prizes for Good Swordsmanship in Cavalry Regiments carrying Carbines.

1st PRIZE.—To the best swordsman of each Regiment in which all the troops shall have competed with an average of at least 20 men a troop in the Household Cavalry, or 30 men in other Regiments.	2*d* a-day (which may be held in addition to 3rd prize), and a badge of cross swords and crown worked in gold.
2nd PRIZE.—To the best swordsman of each troop in which at least 20 men in the Household Cavalry or 30 men in other Regiments shall have competed.	1*d*. a day (which may be held in addition to 3rd prize), and a badge of cross swords worked in gold.
3rd PRIZE.—To swordsmen in each troop, in the proportion of one prize for every 17 men competing.	1*d*. a-day, and a badge of cross swords worked in worsted.

2.—Prizes for Good Lance and Sword Practice in Lancer Regiments.

1st PRIZE.—To the best lancer in each Regiment of Lancers in which all the troops shall have competed with an average of at least 30 men a troop.	2*d*. a-day (which may be held in addition to 3rd prize), and a badge of cross lances and crown worked in gold.
2nd PRIZE.—To the best lancer in each troop in which at least 30 men shall have competed.	1*d*. a-day (which may be held in addition to 3rd prize), and a badge of cross lances worked in gold.
3rd PRIZE.—To lancers in each troop in the proportion of one prize for every 17 men competing.	1*d*. a-day, and a badge of cross lances worked in worsted.
4th PRIZE.—To swordsmen in each troop in the proportion of one prize for every 25 men competing.	1*d*. a-day, and a badge of cross swords worked in worsted.

3. In regiments carrying carbines, the second best swordsman of the troop which furnishes the best swordsman of the regiment shall be granted the 2nd or Troop Prize. Similarly in Lancer Regiments the second best lancer of the troop which furnishes the best lancer of the regiment shall receive the Troop Prize.

4. As the number competing in each troop will not always be an exact multiple of 17 or 25, the surplus numbers in the troops may be added together, and an additional prize granted for every such 17 or 25 competitors, provided that the total number of prizes granted, exclusive of the regimental and troop prizes, do not exceed six or four per cent. respectively of the numbers competing in the whole regiment. These additional prizes shall be allotted in such manner as may be directed by Our Commander-in-Chief.

5. The pay for good sword or lance practice may be drawn and the badges worn for one year, commencing on the first day of the quarter succeeding that in which the authority for the issue thereof shall be received.

6. A soldier transferred for the public convenience (but not at his own request) from one troop to another, or to or from the service and Depôt Troops, shall carry with him his pay for good sword or lance practice, but such transfers shall not cause vacancies among the men receiving such pay.

7. If a vacancy occurs in the post of "best swordsman" or "best lancer" of a regiment or troop, it shall not be filled up until the next annual competition, but a vacancy amongst the paid "swordsmen" or "lancers" shall be filled up from the date thereof by the next in order of merit.

8. Pay for good sword or lance practice is subject to forfeiture under the Mutiny Act and Articles of War as ordinary pay.

9. The qualifications which shall enable soldiers to compete for prizes for good swordsmanship and lance practice, and the rules under which such competition shall take place, shall be laid down by Our Commander-in-Chief from time to time.

Given at Our Court of St. James's this 7th day of March 1868, in the 32nd Year of Our Reign.

CARNATIC RECEIVER'S BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. MAINE moved for leave to introduce a Bill to appoint a Receiver of the property of the late Nawáb of the Carnatic. He said that the object of the Bill was to revive certain powers in the Receiver, whose office had been created by a repealed Act (No. XXX of 1858). That Act had two objects,—one to appoint a Receiver of the Carnatic property, the other, to provide for the investigation of claims against the late Nawáb's estate. The latter object had been attained, all boná fide claimants having been satisfied; and it was believed also, both in Madras and Calcutta, that all the outstanding estate had long since been got in by the Receiver. Quite recently, however, valuable assets had been discovered, both in the district of Madras and in the Nizâm's territories; and hence it became necessary to revive certain powers in the Receiver to enable him to recover those assets.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned till the 27th August 1868.

ABSTRACT OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNCIL OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA, ASSEMBLED FOR THE PURPOSE OF MAKING LAWS AND REGULATIONS UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE ACT OF PARLIAMENT, 24 & 25 VIC., CAP. 67

The Council met at Simla on Thursday, the 27th August 1868.

EMIGRATION OF COOLIES' BILL.

The Honble MR. STRACHEY introduced the Bill to amend the law relating to the emigration of Native labourers, and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee with instructions to report in three weeks. He said that the Bill had been prepared at the request of the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, and that its object was to make four small amendments of the law which had been found desirable. He need not repeat his remarks when he had obtained leave to introduce the Bill. He would, however, supply one omission which he had then made. The Governor General in Council was empowered to prohibit in certain specified cases the emigration of coolies. To these cases, the Bill proposed to add that of a dangerous outbreak of infectious disease in the place to which emigration was permitted. The necessity for this addition had lately been shown—a deadly epidemic of fever having broken out at Mauritius, and the Madras Government having accordingly assumed the responsibility of stopping emigration to that colony. The course which that Government had taken in the matter was subsequently approved both by the Government of India and the Secretary of State. But its action was ultra vires, and the present Bill, if it became law, would expressly authorize the Local Governments to stop emigration in any such case of emergency.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

CARNATIC RECEIVER'S BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. MAINE applied to His Excellency the President to suspend the Rules for the Conduct of Business. The Bill was urgently required in Madras, and the suspension was necessary, as the Bill had not been in Hon'ble Members' hands for the period prescribed by the Rules.

The President declared the Rules suspended.

The Hon'ble MR. MAINE then introduced the Bill to appoint a Receiver of the property of the late Nawáb of the Carnatic, and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee with instructions to report in one week. He had already described the nature of the Bill, and explained the need of enacting it. The Bill was in substance a revival of some sections of an old Act, and if it had been in form a revival, he would have asked the Council to pass it at once. But in the sections 1 to 7 of Act XXX of 1858, the substance of which was incorporated in the present Bill, reference was made to the abolished Supreme Court at Madras as existing, to the distinction, obsolete in India, between law and equity, and to the institution of suits as mentioned in a part of that Act which was wholly obsolete and had been repealed. Under these circumstances, he proposed to take the usual course of referring the Bill to a Select Committee.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

EXTENSION OF REGULATIONS (MAUZA KHERIA) BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. STRACHEY introduced the Bill to bring the Mauza Kheria, in the District of Agra, under the operation of the general regulations, and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee with instructions to report in one week. He said that the object of the Bill, which had been prepared at the request of the Local Government, was simply to annex the Mauza Kheria to the Agra District, and to extend to the Mauza all Acts and Regulations now in force in that District. The proposed Act would take effect retrospectively from the 26th of July 1866, when the Mauza was transferred to the British Government.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The following Select Committees were named:—

On the Bill to amend the law relating to the emigration of Native labourers—the Hon'ble Messrs. Maine, Cockerell, and the Mover.

On the Bill to appoint a Receiver of the property of the late Nawáb of Carnatic—the Hon'ble Mr. Cockerell and the Mover.

On the Bill to bring the Mauza Kheria, in the District of Agra, under the operation of the general regulations—the Hon'ble Mr. Maine and the Mover.

The Council adjourned till the 3rd September 1868.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

CIRCULATION OF CURRENCY NOTES IN THE MADRAS PRESIDENCY.

From the Hon'ble R. S. ELLIS, C.B., Chief Secretary to the Government of Fort St. George, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Financial Department,—No. 327, dated 14th July 1868.

Adverting to a letter from this office, dated the 5th November 1867, No. 491, I am directed by the Governor in Council to transmit, for the information of the Governor General in Council, the annexed copy of the Proceedings* of the Madras Government on the result of the free circulation of Currency Notes during nine months ending on the 31st March last.

* Proceedings, dated 14th July 1868, No. 326.

2. It will be seen that the result is satisfactory, and that this Government have directed that the existing arrangements be continued without modification during the current official year, and that a report thereon be submitted at the close of that period.

Read the following papers:—

From Colonel J. CARPENDALE, R.E., Commissioner of Issue of Paper Currency, to the Chief Secretary to Government Fort St. George,—No. 1081, dated 28th May 1868.

Referring to order in the Financial Department, No. 490, 5th November 1867, I have the honor to report the results, for the period of nine months ending 31st March last, of the measures sanctioned by Government for encouraging the circulation of Currency Notes, by issuing them freely at all Government Treasuries where demanded, either in liquidation of claims or in exchange for silver, and by receiving them in like manner in payment of claims, and, so far as it can be done without inconvenience, by cashing Notes presented by the public.

2. The tabular statement enclosed shows the transactions of each kind in the several Collectorates; and the following table exhibits the gross amounts for the periods ending 30th November 1866, 30th June 1867, and 31st March 1868:—

	Value of Notes received in exchange for silver.	Value of Notes received in payment of claims.	Total.	Value of Notes issued in exchange for silver.	Value of Notes issued in payment of claims.	Total.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
Six months ending 30th November 1866	.....	.....	.....	18,31,030	3,55,090	28,65,660
Six months ending 30th June 1867	7,38,300	9,83,340	17,21,640	23,64,350	5,96,850	29,61,200
Nine months ending 31st March 1868	25,62,690	16,48,090	42,10,780	47,75,650	14,07,910	61,83,560

3. From the above, it will be seen that there continues to be a preponderance of issues over the receipts of Notes in the Mofussil Treasuries, the excess for the six months ending 30th June 1867 having been about 12½ lakhs, and for the nine months ending 31st March 1868 about 19¾ lakhs, and which was to be expected, the gross receipts of Notes having risen from 17 lakhs in six months to 42 lakhs in the following nine months, and the gross issues for the same periods having risen from 29½ lakhs to 61¾ lakhs.

4. This increase is undoubtedly owing partly to improved circulation, for, although a large quantity of the Notes issued in the Provinces soon find their way to the Presidency, and are then converted into coin, there is evidence of increased circulation in the fact that what I call the active circulation, or what remains after deducting the stock in hand at each Currency Office, Collectorate, and Branch of Madras Bank, from the nominal circulation or gross issue of Notes, aggregated on 30th June 1867 Rs. 35,39,830, and on 31st March 1868 Rs. 45,09,110.

5. This is a positive increase in the circulation of about ten lakhs, a much smaller increase than might be expected from the double causes of increase, viz., the facilities afforded by Government for supplying the public with Notes and for cashing them, and the improvement in the Notes themselves, whereby they have become intelligible to a much larger proportion of the people, and it is to be expected that a further improved circulation will follow on a continuance of the present system, though it may probably become requisite to treat as exceptional localities the Bellary and perhaps some other Districts.

6. In three Districts only did the receipts and issues balance, viz.:—

Madras.	Madura.
North Arcot.

In three the receipts of Notes exceed the issues—

	Rs.
Ganjam by	10,000
Bellary by	3,16,000
South Canara by	18,000

The run upon the Treasuries in the Bellary District for silver, in exchange for Notes, has formed the subject of correspondence between the Bank of Madras and Government, and having heard that the Railway Company had availed themselves of the permission to present Notes for cash to a very large extent in making their remittances to the Bellary District, whereby they save the premium entailed by the purchase of Accountant General's bills, I had expected a much more unfavorable balance for that District; but the tabular statement shows that the Notes cashed, amounting to Rs. 6,87,520, were in great measure balanced by Notes issued in exchange for silver, amounting to Rs. 3,99,280.

7. In most Districts the value of Notes issued exceed the receipts, and the effect is to augment the balance of silver, which is so much more costly to move when too large a balance in any particular Treasury necessitates such a course than would be a small box of Notes.

8. The excess of issue of Notes over receipts is as follows; and as the Accountant General will best be able to inform Government whether any inconvenience has been experienced on this account, I will forward a copy of this report to that Officer:—

	Receipts.	Issues.	Excess issue of Notes.
Vizagapatam	72,220	1,35,880	63,660
Godavery	1,20,160	1,32,970	12,810

Kurnool,	Malabar,
Tanjore,	Bangalore,

and if the Accountant General reports favorably, I beg to recommend a continuance of the present system, and to be reported on again at the close of the official year. Of the above Districts, Malabar contains a Circle Office at Calicut, so that no inconvenience can be experienced there. Her Majesty's Treasury at Bangalore is always exceptional, as the whole of the Mysore country is supplied with Notes from it; and Coimbatore and Tanjore being in the vicinity of the Circle Offices of Calicut and Trichinopoly probably facilitates the Accountant General's Transfer Remittances, as District Treasuries where Paper Currency Circle Offices are located constantly require strengthening with silver.

Dated 12th June 1868.

Endorsed by the Under Secretary to Government.

The Accountant General is requested to favor Government with his opinion on the point referred to him by the Mint Master in this letter.

From F. LUSHINGTON, Esq., Accountant General, to the Chief Secretary to Government Fort Saint George,—No. 84, dated 24th June 1868.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the endorsement, dated 12th instant, forwarding for my opinion the report of the Commissioner of Issue of Paper Currency on the results during the nine months ending 31st March last of the measures now in force regarding the circulation of Currency Notes.

2. The system under report has now been in operation for upwards of two years, and during this period the removal of the restriction on the cashing of Currency Notes in the Provincial Treasuries has not, so far as I am aware, been in any respect prejudicial to the interests of Government; while, on the other hand, it has undoubtedly been of much convenience to the public at large, I concur, therefore, fully with Colonel Carpendale in thinking that the continuance of the present system will improve the circulation of Notes, and that any modification of the rules now in force is not desirable.

3. It should, however, be remarked that the comparisons drawn in paragraph 3 of the report under acknowledgment will require slight modification with reference to the circumstance that, in some of the Districts, as in Malabar, where the Treasury work is conducted by Madras Branch Banks, the Note transactions of the Government and the Bank are not kept distinct. There can, however, be no doubt that the circulation of the Notes has greatly been improved during the period under report.

4. With regard to the difficulty urged in paragraph 7 of the report, I am not of opinion that the excess of issues noticed in the subsequent paragraph is, with the exception of certain Districts, so large as to need any special arrangements by this Department; there may now and then arise certain cases in which it might perhaps be deemed desirable to suspend the general working of the rules, but such exceptional cases as these may be met by special arrangements between the Accountant General and the Collector. With regard to Bellary in particular, I may notice that, not very lately, I had occasion to empower the Treasury Officer there to suspend, if necessary, the cashing of Currency Notes for a time.

No. 326, dated 14th July 1868.

ORDER THEREON BY GOVERNMENT FORT ST. GEORGE.

In the first of the foregoing letters, the Commissioner of Issue of Paper Currency reports the results during the period of nine months ending on the 31st March last of the measures authorized by Government for promoting the free circulation of Currency Notes.

2. The Commissioner notices the continuance of a preponderance of issues over receipts of Notes, the excess for six months ending 30th June 1867 having been about 12½ lakhs, and for the nine months ending 31st March 1868 about 19¾ lakhs, and attributes the increase partly to improved circulation.

3. The Commissioner, in remarking on the receipts and issues, adverts to the run upon the Treasuries in the Bellary District for silver, owing to the Railway Company having availed themselves of the permission to present Notes for cash, saving thereby the premium payable to the Accountant General for the purchase of bills in making their remittances to Bellary. He also adverts to the value of Notes issued exceeding the receipts, and of the augmentation of the balance of silver, which entails a heavy expense for removal.

4. With reference to this, the Accountant General is not of opinion that the excess of issues is so large as to need any special arrangements by his Department, and he adds "there may now and then arise certain cases in which it might perhaps be deemed desirable to suspend the general working of the rules, but such exceptional cases as these may be met by special arrangements between the Accountant General and the Collector. With regard to Bellary in particular, I may notice that, not very lately, I had occasion to empower the Treasury Officer there to suspend, if necessary, the cashing of Currency Notes for a time."

5. The Governor in Council considers the result of the free circulation of Currency Notes during the nine months ended on the 31st March last to be satisfactory, and directs that no modification be made in existing arrangements.

6. It is observed that special cases of pressure on Treasuries for silver will be of rare occurrence, and that they can be fully met as suggested by Mr. Lushington.

7. The Commissioner of Issue of Paper Currency will submit a further report at the close of the current official year.

From E. H. LUSHINGTON, Esq., Secretary to the Government of India, Financial Department, to the Chief Secretary to the Government of Fort Saint George,—No. 1966, dated 21st August 1868.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 327, dated 14th July 1868, reporting on the result of the free circulation of Currency Notes during nine months ending on the 31st March last, and in reply to state that the result is satisfactory and creditable to the Madras Presidency.

2. I am to add that the Governor General in Council entirely approves of the orders of the Government of Madras for the continuation of the present system.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

SURVEY OPERATIONS CARRIED OUT IN CONNECTION WITH NEW IRRIGATION PROJECTS IN THE PROVINCE OF BENGAL DURING THE YEAR 1867-68.

From Lieutenant Colonel F. H. RUNDALL, R.E., Joint Secretary to the Government of Bengal, in the Public Works Department, Irrigation Branch, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Public Works Department,—No. 687I, dated 8th August 1868.

With reference to your letter No. 74I, dated 19th May, I am directed to forward the accompanying Report by the Chief Engineer, Irrigation, of the survey operations that have been carried out during the past working season in connection with new irrigation projects.

2. As the surveying parties remained in the field till the end of May, it was considered advisable to defer replying to your letter until reports of the full season's work up to that date were received from the officers respectively in charge of the Irrigation Divisions.

3. The four following projects have been investigated :—

1st.—Reservoirs on the river Selye.

2nd.—Canal of irrigation and navigation from the Damoodah.

3rd.—System of canals from the Gunduck.

4th.—Navigation canal from Rajmehal on the Ganges to Calcutta.

4. Of the above, the Chief Engineer reports that it is expected the first three will be ready for submission by the 1st of September next, a result which the Lieutenant Governor considers creditable to the officers concerned.

Report by Lieutenant Colonel F. H. RANDALL, R.E., Chief Engineer, Bengal Irrigation Branch,—dated 1st August 1868.

The irrigation projects investigated during the past year are four in number.

The first commenced was that connected with the river Selye in the District of Midnapoor.

Its object is two-fold—first, prevention of the present destructive effects from floods by the construction of a series of tanks or reservoirs on as many feeders of the Selye as afford suitable sites; secondly, distribution of the stored water for irrigation over the upper lands which now suffer from drought. The river being of small dimensions, measuring 150 miles from its source to its junction with the Roopnarain, with a catchment basin of 1,250 square miles, a small establishment only was placed under the orders of Lieutenant Smyth, R.E., who was deputed to conduct the enquiry. That officer reports the results of his work to be the examination of sites for 18 reservoirs, also of three lines of irrigation channels for distributing a portion of this stored water to both monsoon and to cold weather crops. Cross sections of the river Selye itself at from $\frac{3}{4}$ths to 2 miles apart have been likewise taken along its embanked length, 1,200 square miles reconnoitred, and about 250 miles of difficult levelling have been run through tracts covered with jungle.

The catchment basin of the Selye is estimated at 1,250 square miles, of which the 18 reservoirs mentioned above will drain 472 square miles, and will hold 21,000 million cubic feet, equivalent to $\frac{7}{10}$ths of a total monthly rain-fall of 27 inches over that area. The reservoirs themselves, varying from $\frac{1}{2}$ to 10 square miles, will cover an aggregate area of 40 square miles, but 16 out of 18 will submerge only 23 square miles, of which about 25 per cent. is cultivated land, and much of that very poor. The depths of water in the proposed tanks will vary from 24 to 66 feet at the bund.

The cost of constructing the 16 reservoirs is estimated roughly at $4\frac{3}{4}$ lakhs, and that of the distributary channels at $4\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs more, making the total cost of the project $9\frac{1}{4}$ lakhs. The quantity of land irrigable therefrom is estimated at 51,200 acres of paddy and 22,400 acres of cold weather crops.

The probable returns calculated from data afforded by the difference of rent paid at present between irrigated and unirrigated land are set down at the rate of Rs. 2-4 for monsoon cultivation and Rs. 3 per acre for cold weather crops. From these rates, Lieutenant Smyth estimates a revenue of Rs. 1,82,400, from which, if 5 per cent. on the capital cost of $9\frac{1}{4}$ lakhs be deducted for management and repairs, a net return of Rs. 1,36,150 will be obtained, which, without debiting any part of the cost to the relief from floods, will amount to nearly 15 per cent. on that outlay.

As respect that object of the project, it has been calculated that the maximum quantity which in a heavy flood passed the commencement of the embanked portion of the Selye, would, by the storage of the above volume of water, be reduced from 1,13,660 to 56,800 cubic feet per second, and would thus admit of nearly all the present embankments being dispensed with.

The plans and estimates for the above projects are expected to be ready by September next.

Direction ...	... Rs.	5,913
Execution ...	... „	2,594
Sundries ...	... „	208
TOTAL Rs.	..	8,715

The total expenditure incurred up to 31st May last amounted to Rs. 8,715, as marginally distributed.

The second project put in hand was the canal from the Damoodah at Raneegunge to the Hooghly opposite Calcutta. Captain Garnault, R.E., was appointed to this duty, and collected together a small surveying staff in November last.

The general character of the work on which he has been engaged has been determining the discharge of the Damoodah, taking cross sections of the country for the purpose of finding the best line for the canal, surveying and levelling that line after it had been fixed, and taking levels sufficient to frame an approximate estimate of the cost of reservoirs on the Konare, an affluent of the Damoodah.

The actual quantity of work done consists of—915 miles of levels.

31 cross sections of the Damoodah.

6 Ditto of the Konare.

98 miles of surveys, including site of head works and canal line.

24 miles of the canal itself lined out and levelled at distances of three chains.

The river itself has been gauged twice every month.

Fair plans have been made of the weir, site of head works and sluices, and rough estimates of the same.

24 miles of the canal plotted, together with 50 miles of other levels and all the cross sections of the rivers.

From 15th November to end of April, there were employed under Captain Garnault—

1 Assistant Engineer.
1 Sub-Engineer or Surveyor.
3 Native ditto.

From 1st to 31st May, two of the recently appointed Executive Engineers were added to Captain Garnault's staff.

That officer expects to have the whole project of the canal, including surveys and levels, designs for the head works, as well as those along the canal, with estimates of cost, completed before the 1st of September.

The canal will be about 100 miles in length. It has been roughly estimated to cost, inclusive of head works, 30 lakhs. It will convey water during the monsoon months sufficient for 2,00,000 acres, and for about 40,000 in the cold weather till the middle of March, after which it will have to be supplemented from reservoirs.

The return from navigation only, calculated from transporting the single item of coal, will, it is believed, yield not less than 10 per cent. on the outlay.

Direction	Rs.	6,989
Execution	"	6,926
Tools and Plant	"	1,490
Sundries	"	2,445
TOTAL Rs. ...		17,850

The total expenditure incurred up to 31st May last has been Rs. 17,850.

The third project taken up is a system of canals of irrigation and navigation from the river Gunduck for the benefit of the three Districts Chumparun, Sarun, and Tirhoot.

Captain Jeffreys, R.E., was appointed to conduct the investigations, assisted by—

1 Executive Engineer.
3 Assistant Engineers.
2 Sub-Engineers or Surveyors.
3 Native ditto.

Owing to delays of one kind or another, operations could not be commenced until the 1st of January, but were diligently prosecuted from that date. The first subject to which attention was given was that of the embankments, which had been injured in several places during the last extraordinary high floods. For this purpose longitudinal sections of the river itself from its mouth at Hajeepoor for 100 miles, longitudinal and cross sections of the embankments along their entire length and cross sections of the rivers at intervals of two miles have been completed.

For the canal scheme, a series of cross levels were run 4 miles apart, and covering the whole tract of country comprised between the Gunduck, Little Gunduck, and Ganges, commencing at Putjirwa in Chumparun and terminating at the confluence of the last two rivers opposite to Monghyr. A similar series of levels have been taken on the right bank of the Gunduck between it and the Daba or Soondee Nuddee, also down as far as the Ganges. The total area covered with these cross levels amounts to 4,511 square miles.

The cross sectioning of the river at every two miles proved a very laborious operation, necessitating, in addition to ordinary levelling, the taking of soundings in the actual water channel at every 20 feet.

By the 5th May the cross levels were completed, with the exception of a small portion in the Monghyr District, and the work of plotting commenced. A running survey having been kept up at the same time, perfect charts of levels have been thus turned out in a very short time, thus enabling the best lines of the canals to be traced out at once. After these had been carefully laid down on the charts, parties were told off to take the necessary levels along the trial lines, and all was finished by the 31st May.

The work accomplished has been—

	Miles.
Longitudinal section of river bed and embankments	306
Cross sections of river	248
Cross levels of country	1,598
Levelling of trial lines	221
TOTAL ...	2,373

Besides the above, a detailed examination has been made on both banks of the river with a view of determining the measures necessary for placing the embankments in a complete state of efficiency.

Sites for the anicuts have been selected, and the north part of the Chumparun District, where the late famine was most severely felt, has been examined, with a view to determining how far the hill streams could be turned to account for irrigation, and how far it would be desirable to draw a supply of water from a permanent source.

A favorable site for a reservoir was also discovered, in which the entire rain-fall of the Dhoon, 120 square miles in area, may be stored, amounting to 743 millions of cubic yards sufficient for the irrigation of nearly 1,50,000 acres of paddy land.

The gorge through which the Gunduck flows near Trebence was searched for stone, but none of good quality discovered, the description being Feldspathic Rock. The resources of the district as respects building materials have been examined; the rates of labor, and various kinds of information as to the outturn of crops and other agricultural statistics have been collected.

The cold weather discharge of the Gunduck has been ascertained from actual observation to be not less than 10,000 cubic feet per second.

Means were taken for ascertaining the amount of traffic on the river, and as the Gunduck is the only outlet for the produce of the surrounding tract of country, some information has been gained regarding the exports and imports of these districts.

Finally, all the necessary data has been collected for one project of head works and system of canals on both banks of the Gunduck, and Captain Jeffreys expects to be able to submit the plans and estimates for it by the 1st of September.

Direction	Rs. 6,003
Execution	„ 18,449
Instruments, &c.	„ 993
Sundries	„ 469
TOTAL Rs. ...	25,914

The expenditure incurred up to 31st May last amounted to Rs. 25,914 as marginally distributed.

The fourth project set in hand was that of the canal from the Ganges at Rajmehal to Calcutta, combining provision for the irrigation of the Nuddea District, and an investigation into the feasibility of protecting it from the effects of such inundations as occurred last year.

Mr. Fennessy was first appointed to superintend the surveys with a staff of—

1 Assistant Engineer.
2 Sub-Engineers or Surveyors (one subsequently dismissed).
1 Assistant ditto.
3 Sub-Overseers.

Very little was done during the first two months, after which Mr. Fennessy was transferred to another appointment, and Major G. A. Searle, of the Madras Staff Corps, and for many years in the Department of Public Works in that Presidency, was appointed in his stead. Work was not efficiently commenced till the 1st April, since when it has progressed satisfactorily.

The staff under Major Searle was comprised, until 30th April, of—

1 Assistant Engineer,	1 Assistant Surveyor,
1 Sub-Engineer,	1 Overseer, and on 1st May two newly-arrived Executive Engineers were added to the above.

The work consisted in taking a series of cross sections of the Ganges and of the Nuddea rivers, also of the country itself from Rajmehal to Calcutta and between the Bhagiruttee and Ganges.

As the line of the main navigation canal would not run anywhere more than five miles from the Bhagiruttee, the cross sections of the country between the head of that river and Calcutta were confined in the first instance to that length, so that data might be available for determing its exact line as early as possible. These levels have been quite completed between Nuddea and Calcutta, but only partially so between Nuddea and the head of the Bhagiruttee; while those between that place and Rajmehal have only just been commenced.

Thirteen cross sections of the Ganges have been taken, and 12 sections of the Nuddea rivers. The former involved considerable labor, as the actual channel of the river was very carefully sounded and velocities taken, which, with other observations, has enabled a calculation to be made of the discharge of the river when at its lowest level.

The amount of work performed has been—

	Miles.
Cross sections of the country	303
13 Ditto of the Ganges involving ..	100
13 Ditto of the Nuddea rivers	26
Traverse survey	25
TOTAL ...	454

Ten of the cross sections of the river have been plotted and roughly calculated.

So much of the season had passed before the investigation of this project was satisfactorily started that it has not been possible to collect sufficient information to allow of any plans and estimates being prepared during the year; and as the amount of surveying and levelling remaining to be done is very considerable, it will probably occupy another working season ere it can all be collected. As far as the single line of navigation to Calcutta is concerned, this will probably be determined ere the end of this year; but the more comprehensive project for the irrigation and protection of Nuddea will necessarily occupy a longer period.

The expenditure incurred up to the 31st May has amounted, as marginally shown, to Rs. 20,126, of which Rs. 11,536 was expended previous to Major Searle taking charge, leaving Rs. 8,590 as the subsequent outlay.

LEGISLATIVE.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 27th August 1868 :—

No. 22 OF 1868.

Bill to amend the Law relating to the Emigration of Native Labourers.

It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Probable length of winter voyage from Madras to Mauritius.

1. The probable length of the voyage from Madras to Mauritius and Seychelles shall, notwithstanding anything contained in Act No. XIII of 1864 (to consolidate and amend the law relating to the emigration of Native Labourers), section eight, be deemed to be, between the months of November and March inclusive, six weeks.

Increase of space allowed to adult emigrants.

2. Notwithstanding anything contained in the same Act, section forty-seven, no compartment in an emigrant ship shall take more than one adult emigrant for every twelve superficial feet on deck, and for every cubic space of seventy-two feet.

Power to prohibit emigration.

3. For section sixty-four of the same Act, the following shall be substituted :—

"64. Whenever the Governor General of India in Council or the Local Government has reason to believe that in any place to which emigration is lawful under this Act, the plague or other infectious disease dangerous to human life has broken out, or that proper measures have not been taken for the protection of emigrants immediately upon their arrival in such place or during their residence therein,

or for their safe return to India,

or to provide a return-passage to India for any such emigrants at or about the time at which they are entitled to such return-passage,

it shall be lawful for the said Governor General in Council or for the Local Government, by notification published in the Gazette of India or the local Gazette (as the case may be), to declare that emigration from British India or from the territories subject to the Local Government (as the case may be) to such place shall cease and be prohibited from a certain day to be specified in the notification.

Any notification issued by the Local Government under this section may be cancelled by order of the said Governor General in Council."

Power to increase fees.

4. The Governor General of India in Council may, from time to time by notification in the Gazette of India, increase any fee payable under sections nineteen, twenty-seven or thirty-four of the said Act, and may also in like manner reduce to its present amount any fee so increased: Provided that no fee shall be increased under this section by more than double such amount.

This Act to be read with Act XIII of 1864.

5. This Act shall be read with and taken as part of the said Act No. XIII of 1864.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill, which has been prepared at the desire of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, is to make in the law relating to the emigration of coolies four small amendments, which have been found desirable since Act No. XIII of 1864 came into operation.

The probable length of the voyage from Madras to Mauritius between the months of November and March, is fixed at five weeks by section eight of that Act. This time has been found too short, and the Bill proposes to extend it to six weeks.

Section 47 of the Act requires that the space to be provided for each adult emigrant shall be ten superficial feet on deck. The Bill proposes to increase this space to twelve superficial feet.

Section 64 of the Act empowers the Governor General in Council to prohibit, in certain specified cases, the emigration of coolies. To these cases the Bill proposes to add that of a dangerous outbreak of infectious disease in the place to which emigration is permitted. And with a view to greater promptitude of action in emergency, the Bill proposes to extend the power of prohibition to Local Governments; but provides that any notification by a Local Government prohibiting emigration, may be cancelled by the Governor General in Council.

Lastly, the Bill authorizes the Governor General in Council to increase, within certain limits, the fees payable under Act XIII of 1864, for licensing depôts, recruiters, and emigrants.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 27th August 1868:—

No. 23 of 1868.

A Bill to appoint a Receiver of the property of the late Nawáb of the Carnatic.

Preamble.

WHEREAS certain property belonging to the estate of the late Nawáb of the Carnatic, has lately been discovered both in the District of Madras and in the territories of His Highness the Nizám, and it is expedient to appoint a Receiver to collect and administer such property and any other property belonging to the said estate which may hereafter be discovered; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Appointment of Receiver of Carnatic property.

1. The Governor of Fort St. George in Council shall appoint such person as he may think fit to act under the orders of the High Court of Judicature at Madras in the administration of the property left by the late Nawáb of the Carnatic and not hitherto collected or administered.

The person so appointed shall have power to collect and take possession of all such property: he shall deal with the same according to the provisions herein contained: he shall give such security (if any) for the due execution of his office as the said Governor in Council may require; and he shall be called "the Receiver of the Carnatic property."

Remuneration of Receiver.

2. The Receiver of the Carnatic property shall be entitled to such commission not exceeding five per centum upon the amount or value of the property collected and distributed under the provisions of this Act as the said Governor in Council shall prescribe. Such commission shall be charged to the estate of the said Nawáb.

Suspension or removal of Receiver.

3. The said Governor in Council may suspend or remove any person appointed such Receiver as aforesaid, and may also from time to time fill up any vacancy in such office occasioned by death, resignation, suspension or removal.

Receiver to represent Nawáb's estate in all proceedings.

4. The Receiver shall represent the estate of the said Nawáb in all proceedings relating thereto: he shall do all acts in performance of his duties by his name of office; and in all legal proceedings he shall be designated by such name.

No proceedings to which the Receiver may be a party shall abate by reason of the death, resignation, suspension or removal from office of any such Receiver, but the same shall be continued by his successor as if no such death, resignation, suspension or removal had occurred.

Receiver to collect Nawáb's property.

5. The Receiver shall have power to collect and take possession of all property, moveable or immoveable, and whether of the nature of State or public property or not, to which the said Nawáb at the time of his death was entitled, and if necessary to sue for and recover the same property, and to realize its value by sale or otherwise.

Conveyance on sale by Receiver of immoveable property.

6. Whenever the said Receiver by the order or with the sanction of the said High Court sells any of the said immoveable property, he shall execute a conveyance thereof to the purchaser.

Every such conveyance shall be valid as against the heirs of the said Nawáb, and all persons claiming under them, and also against all persons claiming under the said Nawáb by virtue of any conveyance or instrument declared by the said Court or by the late Supreme Court of Judicature at Madras to be void as against the creditors of the said Nawáb, or by virtue of any security the benefit of which was barred under the provisions of Act No. XXX of 1858 (to provide for the administration of the estate and for the payment of the debts of the late Nawáb of the Carnatic).

In case of suit for administration, Receiver to be subject to orders of High Court.

7. Upon any suit being instituted for the administration of the said estate, the said Receiver shall be deemed subject to the orders of the said High Court, and, so far as such orders shall not extend, to the general practice of such Court in the same manner as any other Receiver specially appointed thereby, except that the Court shall not require him to give security.

Commencement of Act.

8. This Act shall be deemed to have come into operation on the second day of April 1868, and any person holding the office of Receiver of the Carnatic property immediately before that day shall be deemed to have been appointed under this Act.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 27th August 1868:—

No. 24 of 1868.

A Bill to bring the Mauza Kheria, in the District of Agra, under the operation of the general Regulations.

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Extension to Mauzah Kheriah of Acts and Regulations in force in District of Agra.

1. The Mauza Kheria shall be deemed to be annexed to the District of Agra, and the laws and regulations established for the internal administration of the said District, shall have full force and effect in the said Mauza; and the administration of civil and criminal justice, and the superintendence of the settlement and realization of the public revenue, and of all matters relating to rent in the said Mauza, are hereby vested in the officers for the time being appointed by the Lieutenant Governor of the North-Western Provinces for the said District of Agra.

Commencement of Act.

2. This Act shall be deemed to have come into operation on the twenty-sixth day of July 1866.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

In July 1866, the Ráná of Dholpúr transferred to the Agra District the Mauza Kheria. The Board of Revenue, North-Western Provinces, having represented that the Mauza in question is not subject to the general Regulations, the present Bill, which has been prepared at the request of the Local Government, provides for the annexation of the Mauza to the Agra District, and the extension to it of all Acts and Regulations now in force in that District. The Bill, if it becomes law, will take effect retrospectively from the date of the transfer of the Mauza to the British Government.

Read the undermentioned papers:—

Resolution No. 3524 passed in this Department on the 15th December 1865, prescribing rules for the provision of free passage to public officers in Civil employ travelling on duty by sea.

Resolution No. 1467 passed in this Department on the 23rd July 1866, prescribing rules in supersession of those contained in the Resolution No. 3524 of the 15th December 1865.

Letter from Mr. H. A. Mangles, Accountant General, British Burmah, No. 1296, dated the 24th June 1868, soliciting the extension to Covenanted Civil Servants of the benefit of that portion of the rules of the 30th December 1865 which declared that Military Officers in Civil employ would be allowed a free passage, "when being employed at a station beyond sea, they may be obliged to return to their Presidency in progress to Europe or to a hill station on leave on medical certificate, and also when they re-join their station on return from that leave."

RESOLUTION.—Premising that Mr. Mangles has erroneously referred to the obsolete resolution of December 1866, instead of the resolution of the 23rd July 1866, the Governor General in Council observes that the new rules for the grant of leave absence to Military Officers render it unnecessary to allow them a free passage under the circumstances described in the extract quoted above from the order of December 1865, and is accordingly pleased to rescind the portion of the order of the 23rd July 1866, in which that concession was repeated.

ORDERED, that the foregoing Resolution be published in the Gazette of India.

Lieutenant Colonel G. B. Malleson, of the Bengal Staff Corps, Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India, to officiate as Controller General of Military Expenditure, vice Colonel Broome.

Surgeon J. M. Cuningham, M.D., of the Medical Department, Secretary to the Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India, to officiate as Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India, in addition to his other duties, as a temporary arrangement, vice Lieutenant Colonel G. B. Malleson.

W. M. LEES, Major,
Offg. Depy. Secy. to the Govt. of India.

No. 832 of 1868.—The following rules are to have effect in supersession of all former orders on the subject:—

The recovery of all shot and shell fired at practice is the legitimate duty of the Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers and men of the Battery, assisted by the Native Establishments, and if good arrangements be made to mark down the shot and shell during the firing, few can be lost if search is made each day after the firing.

Rewards for the recovery of shot and shell will, therefore, be allowed only in special cases, where, after every endeavour has been made, some of the missiles cannot, from the nature of the ground or any other adverse circumstance, be found. In such cases, the Commanding Officer is to make a detailed report to the Officer Commanding the Artillery Division, who, on being satisfied that every exertion has been made, may offer a reward on the following scale for the recovery of the missing shot and shell:—

Scale of Rewards.

	Rs.	A.	P.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

REPORT ON THE CULTIVATION OF CINCHONA IN BENGAL FOR THE YEAR 1867-68.

The cultivation of the Cinchonas has been most successfully carried on during the year. The number of plants propagated has far exceeded the amount added to the Cinchonas during any previous year. The open air cultivation has been greatly extended, and now consists of four times the amount of plants reported last year. Good seed, from which young plants have been reared, was procured from C. Succirubra and the varieties of C. Officinalis. A very satisfactory analysis has been made in London, by Mr. Howard, of the bark of C. Succirubra and C. Officinalis grown at Darjeeling. I shall follow the arrangement of the report of last year, and shall consider the plants in their different stages of growth.

Stock Plants.—These plants, which are all grown under glass panes, are in excellent condition, and notwithstanding the vast amount of cuttings they have yielded, their vigour has increased during the year, as shown by the table of the monthly number of cuttings made during the year.

The stock plants of C. Succirubra were increased to 20,000 in August 1867. In May the number of stock plants of C. Micrantha was reduced from 5,000 to 1,000, and the space obtained by the reduction was devoted to the extension of the stock plants of C. Calisaya.

The stock plants of C. Calisaya were increased from 624, the number at the end of March 1867, to 4,158, this increase being attained in November 1867. The stock plants of the varieties of C. Officinalis have had no additions made to them, as many of the plants of this species planted in the end of 1864 are again in flower, and large quantities of seed will be secured this year.

Cuttings.—As in previous years, the increase of all the species has been effected principally by cuttings made from the stock plants. The number of cuttings made during 1867-68 is much above the number of any previous year.

The largest number of cuttings made in one month was 87,500 in August 1867, and the smallest number 24,500 in January 1868. The maximum and minimum numbers of the previous report were 74,550 in September 1866, and 12,000 in January 1867. The total number of cuttings made and rooted in 1867-68 was 686,170 against 550,611 in 1866-67. The number of cuttings made in each month is as follows:—

		Cuttings.
April	1867	36,200
May	"	59,200
June	"	55,000
July	"	85,000
August	"	87,500

Seedlings.—A quantity of excellent seedlings of C. Officinalis and a very few of C. Succirubra were reared from seed yielded by the plants planted at Rungbee in October 1864. Besides these, I received during the year several packets of seed of C. Officinalis and of C. Succirubra from Mr. Thwaites, the Director of the Botanical Gardens, Ceylon. The number of seedlings raised during the year amounted to 101,750. The number of seedlings obtained during the previous year was 38,500.

Nursery Beds.—Large additions were made to the nursery beds as I always endeavour to plant as many rooted cuttings and seedlings in these beds during the winter as possible, in order that a great number of well hardened plants may be ready for permanent planting at the commencement of the rains. The new nursery beds were prepared on the slopes of the Rishap spur adjoining Rungbee, where land has been cleared for the extension of the plantations. Most of the plants in these beds remained unprotected throughout the winter. The number of plants in the nursery beds on the 31st March 1868 was 518,821; they belonged in nearly equal proportions to C. Succirubra and C. Officinalis, with the exception of 8,260 plants of C. Micrantha and 160 of C. Calisaya. The number of plants in nursery beds at the corresponding period of the previous year was 259,210.

Permanent Plantations.—The formation of the open air plantations and the tending of the plants in them are the simplest parts of the cultivation of Cinchona as practised at Darjeeling. As the process of planting followed by me at Darjeeling has not yet been fully stated in any of my previous reports, the time has now arrived for narrating the various stages of the open air cultivation, from the clearance of the forest-covered land until the end of the second year of the growth of the plants. Hitherto, the land selected has consisted of ground on which Lepchas had previously carried on the cultivation of maize, millets, and rice (a peculiar variety which is grown without being irrigated), in the manner known as joom* cultivation, with patches of virgin forest occurring every here and there among the partially-cleared spaces.

Nepalese coolies with their kookeries (short heavy curved knives) and Lepchas with their long straight sword like knives are sent to fell the jungle as close to the ground as possible.

The scrub, and even young trees as thick as a man's body, fall rapidly before the knives of these clearers. Where patches of virgin forest are met with, the axe must be used, but here every tree is not felled, as the smaller ones being notched near the ground are borne down by the fall of the full grown trees. In preparing ground for Cinchona planting at Darjeeling, the practice has always been to clear the land entirely of all vegetation, not a tree of even the smallest size ever being spared. In these hills, forest should not be felled before the middle or the end of November; if the land is cleared earlier, the grasses and underwood spring up among the branches of the fallen trees, and thus their burning is prevented. Felling may be continued until the middle of March. After two or three months' exposure to the bright sun-shine and dry air of the cold season, the felled trees are in a fit state to burn. By the end of March, therefore, fires may be lit in the afternoon, when the sun has thoroughly dried up the heavy dew at the bottom of the slope covered with felled and dry jungle. The fire rapidly consumes the whole of the brushwood and the branches of the trees, leaving only the large branches and trunks to smoulder for weeks.

* Joom cultivation is the term used to designate the rude cultivation practised by most of the hill tribes of India. It consists of felling and burning virgin forest (leaving the stumps of the trees standing) for the growth of sub-tropical grains. After two or three crops have been obtained, the ground is abandoned for a freshly cleared patch of forest. The piece abandoned soon becomes covered with a dense vegetation of shrubs, gigantic grasses, and young trees.

Wherever virgin forest or bamboo jungle has existed, it has been necessary, after burning the lighter vegetation, to cut up the trunks of the trees and the bamboos into short pieces, and either to pile them into heaps for burning, or to roll them into the steep ravines which are too stony for planting Cinchonas. The land thus cleared by fire is ready for laying out the ground for planting and for marking the bridle paths required to give easy access to all parts of it. These paths are made about four or five feet wide, and are connected with the principal roads of the plantation. The sites for the plants are fixed by means of a cord about 100 feet in length, on which marks are tied at intervals of 6 feet for C. Succirubra and at shorter distance for C. Officinalis. This marked cord is stretched along the ground, and at each mark on it a stick, about 2½ feet in length, is thrust into the ground, thus indicating the place where a Cinchona is to be planted. In order to secure uniformity in the plantation, each line is continued to the full extent of the ground to be planted before another line is commenced; the lines in properly laid out plantations will thus be parallel.

In the plantations of C. Succirubra, the lines are fixed at 6 feet from each other, and as the plants are 6 feet apart in the lines, a uniform distance of 6 feet between the plants is maintained.

At first, C. Officinalis was planted with an interval of 5 feet between the plants, but I have lately altered this plan for a system of close planting in lines, the lines being 4 feet apart.

After the ground has been "staked out," the next preparation for planting consists of digging the soil to the depth of a foot, removing the roots at the same time in a circle about 1 foot in diameter, of which the stake is the centre. The planting of the ground thus prepared is performed in dull cloudy weather when showers are frequent, but when the ground is not saturated by long-continued heavy rain. The thoroughly hardened plants are brought from the adjoining nursery beds in shallow boxes, which the men carry on their heads. The plants are given to the coolie engaged in planting, who with his hands makes a hole in the loose soil sufficiently large to admit the roots of the plant, and the soil is gently pressed around the roots to prevent the plant being beaten down by heavy rain. The plants when taken from the nursery bed should not be less than 4 inches and should not exceed a foot in height, but plants varying from 6 to 10 inches in height are of the best size.

After the plants have been planted for three weeks, it is necessary to cut down the weeds which have sprung up around them, as in a few weeks more the young Cinchonas would soon be smothered in a jungle 5 or 6 feet high. This luxuriant growth of weeds springs from the creeping roots and deeply buried tubers of gigantic grasses, ferns, Dioscoreæ, Araceæ, Cucurbitaceæ, Convolvulaceæ, etc., which, protected by their underground position, escaped destruction when the jungle was burned. The seeds too of some of the most noxious weeds, such as Bidens, Ageratum, Chenopodium, Polygonum, seem to have the power of not being injured by a considerable amount of heat, as after the first showers in May the ground becomes covered by such annual species, two months after a fierce fire has apparently destroyed all vegetation. Many of these weeds could be eradicated by deeply trenching the soil before planting, but from the steepness of the slopes and the excessive rain-fall, this cannot be attempted in Sikhim. It is followed by the washing away of the best soil and even by extensive landslips. These weeds require to be cut down once a month from May until the end of October; they are laid in lines following the slope of the hill, and the slightly raised ridges soon disappear as they are decomposed by the heavy rain and high temperature. During the same period of the year, it is necessary to weed every six weeks the prepared circles in which the Cinchonas are growing, and at the same time to loosen the soil round the plants by lightly hoeing with a kodalie or furroah. In November the entire surface of the plantations is thoroughly hoed, and by this means the weeds receive a great check by being exposed to the drying sun-shine of the cold season after having been uprooted. After hoeing, the plantation requires no attention until the end of April, when a light covering of weeds having sprung up again, the circles round the plants should be lightly hoed and somewhat enlarged. From May again, until the end of October, the periodical cutting of the weeds must be continued, but not so frequently as in the previous season, as many of the strongest growing weeds by this time have succumbed to the hoeing in November. The growth of the plants is greatly favoured by a hoeing of the ground in November again, after the second growing season is over, and if this is done in the following year, their third growing season, the plants are tall and strong enough to out-grow the jungle which then begins in its turn to be smothered under the dense foliage, at least of C. Succirubra.

The number of plants of C. Succirubra added to the permanent plantation during the year amounts to 228,773 and of C. Officinalis to 128,559. The area of ground planted with Cinchonas on the 31st March measured about 350 acres. The small number of plants of C. Succirubra planted in October 1864 were, on the 31st March 1867, from 6 to 14 feet 4 inches high, and a few plants of C. Officinalis planted at the same time were from 5 to 8½ feet high. The girth of the stems of these plants of C. Succirubra at 6 inches above the ground varied from 7 to 12¼ inches.

The plants of C. Succirubra referred to in my last annual report as having been placed in the Terai have succeeded only on the gentle slopes which occur close to the base of the hills, those (about 50) planted on flat but well-drained land, distant two miles from the hills, have completely failed.

The Selim Tea Association purchased 10,000 plants of C. Succirubra in July 1867, and all of these which were planted on the steep slopes of the Himalaya immediately above the Terai, are inferior in condition and promise to only the splendid plants of Cinchona in the Government plantation at Rishap, close to Rungbee. I fear it is hopeless to attempt the cultivation of any species of Cinchona in the proper Terai District,—in that district the cultivation will succeed only on the forest-clad slopes which are intermediate between the flats of the Terai and the declivities of the Himalaya.

Chemical Analysis of the Bark.—The bark of C. Succirubra and C. Officinalis referred to in the last annual report as having been sent to London for analysis, was analysed by Mr. Howard. The analysis was most satisfactory, one specimen of C. Succirubra, thirty-one months old, yielding no less than 7·30 per cent. of precipitated alkaloids, of which 3·20 was quinine and 2·27 Cinchonidine mixed with a little quinine,—a larger percentage of alkaloids than has been found in any other bark of the same age. The bark of C. Officinalis taken from plants twenty-eight months old gave 3·20 of alkaloids. The conclusion drawn by Mr. Howard from this analysis is "that there is no reason to think the Darjeeling barks at all inferior to those grown at Ootacamund; the difference of climate does not appear to have much effect on the alkaloids therein contained."

Flowering and Seeding.—A small number of (270) plants of the varieties of C. Officinalis planted in October 1864 have again produced a profusion of flowers, and already many of them are covered with most promising panicles of seed vessels. A considerable amount of good seed was obtained from several of these plants in August and September 1867. Out of 389 plants of C. Succirubra planted in October 1864, only two plants produced flowers and seed last year, and a few seedlings were raised from their seed. These plants which were in an unhealthy state at the time of flowering, soon after became healthy and vigorous, and this year they have not flowered. Another plant of C. Succirubra, from whose stem a large piece of bark was taken, has put forth a few flowers from one or two of the branches. With these exceptions, none of the C. Succirubra plants have flowered at Darjeeling, although many of the oldest plants are above 12 feet in height.

Distribution of Cinchonas.—Eleven thousand three hundred and ninety plants of C. Succirubra were distributed during the year. Of these 10,290 were sold to planters in the District of Darjeeling, 1,000 plants were despatched to Chittagong for distribution among the tea planters, and 100 were sent to the Deputy Commissioner of Hazara in the Punjab.

Private cultivation of Cinchona in Darjeeling.—One hundred acres were planted with Cinchona Succirubra during the year by the Darjeeling Cinchona Association. The area on this estate planted with Cinchona is now 120 acres. I have not been informed of the number of plants this Company possesses, but as 200 acres of land have been prepared for planting during the approaching rainy season, the number of plants probably amounts to 500,000.

At Coombe Banks, the Cinchona estate of Major Fitzgerald, 25 acres have been planted, and the total number of plants of C. Succirubra, the only species cultivated, is about 80,000.

The Darjeeling Tea Company possesses some fine plants of C. Succirubra planted in May 1864. This Company is also forming plantations of red bark on land well adapted to the cultivation of Cinchona.

Mr. Robson, the Superintendent of the Cinchona plantations of the Tuckvar Tea Company, has made large additions to the plantations of C. Officinalis and C. Succirubra. Some of the older plants of C. Officinalis on this estate are now in flower.

The Selim Tea Association, whose lands extend almost into the Terai, possesses 10,000 plants of C. Succirubra, which were purchased from the Government plantations in July 1867. They have been planted among the tea plants in lines along the roads of the estate, the plants being placed about 10 feet apart, so as to form avenues of Cinchona.

I regret that I am not able to state the exact number of Cinchona plants possessed by private companies and individuals in this district, but I estimate the number at nearly six hundred thousand. The area planted is probably 170 acres.

One thousand plants of C. Succirubra were sent to Chittagong in February 1868, and most of them arrived in good order. The accounts I have received of the state of the plants formerly sent to Chittagong are very meagre, but so far as they extend, they show that the climate is suitable for C. Succirubra. One thousand and eight hundred plants of red bark have been distributed in the Chittagong District since March 1866.

Khasia Hills.—The establishment of a small nursery at the Khasia Hills was sanctioned by Government early in 1867. The nursery was intended only for raising plants of Cinchona for distribution among the planters in Assam; one of the European gardeners from the Darjeeling plantation was sent, in February 1867, in charge of the plants from Darjeeling, with which the cultivation was to be commenced. He reached Shillong in the Khasia Hills in the end of March, and early in May the cultivation was commenced on land near the Dâk Bungalow of Nunklow, on the Gowhatty and Khasia Hill Road, on the northern slopes of the hills.

The plants had been increased from 650, the original number sent from Darjeeling, to 6,778 on the 31st March 1868. The distribution was begun in March 1868 by the sale of 100 plants, and other applications had been registered. The species in these nurseries is C. Succirubra, the only species that will probably succeed in Assam.

Meteorological records taken at the different elevations at Darjeeling during 1867 are appended.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

REPORT ON INDIAN IMMIGRANTS IN BRITISH GUIANA FOR THE HALF-YEAR ENDING 31st DECEMBER 1867

Despatch from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, to His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Governor General of India in Council,—(Public), No. 123, dated 16th July 1868.

I forward herewith copy of a despatch* received from the Colonial Office, with its accompaniments, relative to the report on Indian Immigrants in British Guiana for the half-year ending 31st December 1867.

* Dated 25th June 1868.

2. I have intimated to the Colonial Office that it is understood some special enquiry will be made as to the great mortality in the Maryville and Cotton Tree Estates. The general tenor of the report is satisfactory.

JAMES CROSBY,
Immigration Agent General,
Saturday, 2nd May 1868.

Saturday, 2nd May 1868.

From Sir FREDERIC ROGERS, Bart., to the Under Secretary of State for India,—dated 25th June 1868.

I am directed by the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos to transmit to you, to be laid before the Secretary of State for India in Council, a copy of a despatch* from the Governor of British Guiana, enclosing the half-yearly report† on Indian immigrants, together with a copy of the observations‡ furnished by the Emigration Commissioners on that report.

* No. 63, dated 4th May 1868.

† Enclosure in original. (To be returned).

‡ Dated 13th June 1868.

P. S.—I am to request that the original enclosures to the Governor's despatch may be returned to this Department.

From Governor F. HINCKS, to His Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos,—No. 63, dated 4th May 1868.

I have the honor to transmit to your Grace the half-yearly report* of the Immigration Agent General up to 31st December last, together with four accompanying returns, which will, I hope, afford the Emigration Commissioners more ample information regarding the immigrants than it has heretofore been found practicable to give. I am not aware that it is necessary for me to add anything to Mr. Crosby's report on the subjects on which he has treated, but I may communicate some interesting information gathered from another report of Mr. Crosby's, made on the same day in pursuance of Ordinance 4th of 1864, which requires him to furnish a statistical return of the immigrants dealt with by the Sub-Agents during their half-yearly visits. It appears from this report that, during the half-year ending 31st December 1867, 1,970 immigrants, who had completed their industrial residence, voluntarily entered into fresh indentures for five years, receiving the usual bounty of $50 each in cash, and that of this number, 348 were entitled to back passages. This affords strong evidence that the laborers are, on the whole, fairly treated on the estates. I shall conclude this despatch with an extract from the report of Mr. Crosby to which I have referred.

* Mr. Crosby to Government Secretary, 2nd March 1868. Four enclosures.

"The relations between the employers of labour and the immigrants are better understood, and their labour is more continuously carried on than heretofore, and there are few complaints in respect to the non-payment of wages. Such complaints, however, are seldom made to the Stipendiary Justices of the Peace, and on any complaints being made to this Department, or either personally or by memorial to the Governor, and referred to the Immigration Agent General, they are investigated by a member of this Department on the estate to which the complainants are indentured, and in some such case during the half-year, it has been found, with few exceptions, not only that the immigrants have been paid at the same rate of wages as the creole labourers, but in every instance in which there has been reason to disapprove of any matter, it has been at once discontinued. There can be no doubt the physical condition of the immigrant improves, if industrious, the longer they remain in the Colony, and at the same time, their tone of feeling and their intelligence are improved and strengthened."

From T. W. C. MURDOCH, Esq., Secy., Emigration Board, to Sir FREDERIC ROGERS, Bart.,—dated 13th June 1868.

I have to acknowledge your letter of 2nd instant, with a despatch* from the Governor of British Guiana, enclosing the report† of the Immigration Agent of that Colony for the half-year ending 31st December last.

* No. 63, dated 4th May.

† Dated 2nd May.

2. From the returns annexed to Mr. Crosby's report, it appears that the number of immigrants on estates on 31st December 1867 was—

Males.	Females.	Total.
30,336	11,257	41,593

of whom there were under indenture—

Males.	Females.	Total.
25,832	8,345	34,177

not under indenture—

Males.	Females.	Total.
4,504	2,912	7,416

The number of deaths among these immigrants during the half-year was 873, equal to a mortality of 2·03 per cent. The most unhealthy district, contrary to what has been the case in former years, was Berbice, where the mortality was at the rate of 2·37 per cent. The rate in Demerara and Essequibo was the same, viz., 1·98 per cent. Of 128 estates to which the returns refer, 105 had a mortality of less than 3 per cent., and 23, a mortality exceeding that rate. Four estates are described as exceptionally bad, and requiring a special investigation, and two of these estates, viz., Maryville and Cotton Tree, appear on previous occasions to have had a large percentage of deaths. If, on the proposed investigation, it should appear that the mortality is attributable to unhealthiness of the locality or neglect of the manager, the Governor will no doubt see the necessity of not assigning additional immigrants to these estates, even if it is not necessary to remove those actually there. In each case the mortality was almost entirely among immigrants received in the course of the year.

3. There were, during the six months, 2,201 complaints against immigrants for breaches of their indentures. In 1,488 cases convictions were obtained, and in 713 the accused were acquitted.

4. Upon the whole, the report may be considered as satisfactory. The mortality, though greater than in most of the other West Indian Colonies, is less than it has been in previous years in British Guiana. The people appear to be working well, and the number of unindentured immigrants on estates is considerable. There is nothing to require the interference of the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, unless His Grace think it right to notice the mortality on the Maryville and Cotton Tree Estates to which I have referred.

From JAMES CROSBY, Esq., to the Hon'ble J. R. UOLLEGAIR, Government Secretary,—No. 422, dated 2nd May 1868.

I have the honor to forward to you in duplicate, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, and for transmission to the Right Hon'ble His Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, the Secretary of State for the Colonies, "the consolidated half-yearly return of immigrants under indenture of service or residing on plantations in the Colony of British Guiana for the half-year ending 31st December 1867," together with four enclosures, each also in duplicate. And in this return, columns are, for the first time, added in manuscript, being a "statement of complaints against immigrants for breaches of the terms of indenture, adjudicated on during the half-year ending 31st December 1867, showing the number of acquittals and the number of convictions among the resident immigrant population on each estate." And at the end of the return the percentage of acquittals and the percentage of convictions in respect to such immigrant population under indenture in each county and throughout the Colony. This return, for the convenience of reference, is marked No. 1.

2. Also "a return showing the rates of mortality amongst the immigrants under indenture of service or residing on plantations in the Colony of British Guiana for the half-year ending 31st December 1867, the plantations being arranged and classified according to such rates." This return for the like purpose is marked No. 2.

3. Also "an analysis of the mortality which has taken place during the half-year ending 31st December 1867 on those plantations on which such mortality has been described as 'very bad,' or as 'exceptional requiring investigation.'" This analysis is marked No. 3.

4. Also "a statement exhibiting the rates of mortality amongst the immigrants in the several districts in the Colony of British Guiana for the half-year ending 31st December 1867 in comparison with the average of the rates of mortality for the ten preceding half-years, commencing 1st July 1862." This statement is also marked No. 4.

5. I have, in the return marked No. 1, as hitherto now for some years past, enumerated the estates in the geographical order of their position in the several divisions of the three several counties in the Colony, being the order in which the half-yearly official visits are made; and I have in that manner shown the number of each description of immigrants on each estate, the total number of immigrants on each estate under indenture, the total number of immigrants on each estate not under indenture, and the total number of immigrants on each estate made up of those under and not under indenture; the mortality among each description of immigrants and the percentage of such mortality, and the total mortality of the immigrants and the percentage of such mortality on each estate, as well as the number of births, and a statement, in manuscript hereinbefore described, showing the complaints made in respect to the immigrants under indenture on each estate for breaches of the terms of indenture, and the number of acquittals and convictions arising out of such complaints. As soon, however, as I have the means, by more comprehensive returns made to me than at present, I hope fully to comply with the suggestions of Mr. Murdoch, contained in his communication to Sir Frederic Rogers, dated 30th May 1867, by making a return of "the number of complaints by or against immigrants" in a separate and distinct half-yearly return, and which has been delayed by me until the Ordinance No. 9, 1868, had come into operation. I have also, in an abstract on the last page of the return, shown the number of each description of immigrants in each division of each county, the total number of immigrants in each division of each county under indenture, the total number of immigrants in each division of each county not under indenture, and the total number of immigrants in each division of each county made up of those under and not under indenture, the mortality among each description of immigrants and the percentage of such mortality in each division in each county, and the total mortality of the immigrants and the percentage of such mortality in each division of each county, as well as the number of births; and so also in respect to each county, and in respect to the whole Colony. There were located on estates in the Colony on the 31st December 1867 immigrants under indenture 25,832 males, 8,345 females, making a total of 34,177 immigrants, and immigrants not under indenture 4,504 males, 2,912 females, making a total of 7,416 immigrants, making a grand total of 41,593 immigrants under the supervision and control of the Immigration Department. The mortality in each of the counties of Demerara and Essequibo has been 1·98 per cent., in Berbice 2·37 per cent., and throughout the Colony 2·05 per cent. The number of complaints against immigrants under indenture for breaches of the terms of indenture have been 2,201, or 6·44 per cent., the acquittals being at the rate of 2·09 per cent., and the convictions at the rate of 4·35 per cent. on such population.

6. In the return marked No. 2, there is a classification of the estates throughout the Colony, showing the number of immigrants located on each estate, the number of deaths and the percentage of such mortality. The classification consists of seven separate divisions, and at once shows the graduated rate of mortality, and that only ten estates have been classed as either "very bad," or "exceptional" out of the 128 estates on which immigrants are located; and in the comparison between the mortality in respect to the seven separate divisions of the first and the second half-years of 1867, an improvement will be observed in the second half-year. Special visits by the Inspector General of Estates' Hospitals and special reports have been required and made either by him, or by the medical practitoners of those ten estates to account for such excess of mortality, and every care has been and will be taken to secure the greatest comfort to the immigrants, and rigid medical supervision and attendance; and of the dietary and prescriptions of the medical attendant being faithfully observed and administered, and generally a cautious supervision by this department, particularly in respect to the acclimatization of immigrants on their first introduction, so as to check at once any non-compliance with the suggestions of the Medical Inspector of Estates' Hospitale, or the directions of the medical attendant.

7. In the return marked No. 3 is shown the mortality which has taken place during the half-year to which the return marked No. 1 relates on the ten estates which have been classed as either "very bad" or "exceptional," as contrasted with the three half-years immediately preceding the half-year ending 31st December 1867; and from this return three important facts appear to be disclosed, namely, it does not, in any instance, appear that the mortality on these ten estates has been continuously in any one of them in excess of a fair average mortality; that in only one instance, namely, the Wales' Estate, that the mortality in any one of the preceding half-years exceeded the mortality of the half-year ending the 31st December 1867, and that, except in the cases of the Nouvelle Flandres' Estate, and the Wales' Estate, it is evident the great excess of mortality has been among the immigrants during the first year of their introduction into the Colony. It appears, therefore, of the highest importance every care should be taken of the immigrants on their introduction, and it is hoped the permissive enactment of Ordinance No. 9, 1868, Section 10, will be taken advantage of by the proprietors of estates; and that the immigration to the Colony may be so arranged in Calcutta and in China, if the immigration from China should be renewed, as to cause the emigrants to be despatched from those countries early in the season, and allotted and distributed to the estates in the Colony not later than the 1st May in each year.

8. In the return marked No. 4, there is, first, a comparison between the mortality among the immigrants in the different counties in the Colony in the half-year ending 31st December 1867, and the average of the mortality among the immigrants in the different counties in the Colony during the ten half-years immediately preceding the half-year ending 31st December 1867, in which it appears there has been a considerable improvement in the sanitary condition of the immigrants located in the county of Demerara, while in the counties of Essequibo and Berbice, there has been to a small extent a contrary result. In respect to the different divisions of each county in the county of Demerara, there has been throughout considerable improvement; in the county of Essequibo there have been two divisions in which there has been very considerable improvement; and in the two other divisions, a different result arising from those exceptionable cases concerning which special visits and reports have been made; and in the county of Berbice, there have been three divisions in which there has been considerable improvement, and in the two other divisions a very different result.

9. In the county of Demerara, it will be observed the greatest mortality during the half-year has taken place on the estates situate on the west coast, being 2·38 per cent., and the least mortality for the same period on the estates situate on the east bank, Demerara river, being 1·19 per cent. In the county of Essequibo, the greatest mortality during the half-year has taken place on the estates situate in Leguan, being 2·73 per cent., and the least mortality for the same period on estates situate on the Tiger Island, being only ·68 per cent. In the county of Berbice, the greatest mortality during the half-year has taken place on the estates situate on the east coast, being 10·91 per cent., and the least mortality for the same period on estates situate on the Corentyne coast being 1·35 per cent. The average mortality throughout the three counties has been as follows:—In Demerara 1·98 per cent., in Essequibo 1·98 per cent., and in Berbice 2·37 per cent., and throughout the Colony 2·05 per cent. The greatest mortality throughout the Colony has been among the Chinese immigrants, being 2·45 per cent., among the Indian immigrants from Calcutta 2·16 per cent., among those from Madras 2·14 per cent., among the Africans only ·55 per cent., and among the Madeirans only ·21 per cent. There does not appear to have been any deaths among the immigrants from Barbados and other West Indian Colonies.

10. The condition of the immigrants, so far as relates to their sanitary improvements which are continually taking place in almost every successive visit of the Medical Inspector of Estates' Hospitals will, I hope, at no very distant period increase the comforts and decrease the mortality of immigrants on estates to a minimum, so as to establish the immigration system of the Colony on a most satisfactory and permanent basis. And in order to secure this result by every possible means whenever the mortality has been excessive, or the recommendations made by the Medical Inspector of Estates' Hospitals have not been attended to in respect either to the construction of such hospitals, or in respect to their appliances, no allotments of immigrants on introduction are made to such estates, or bounty paid to any immigrants desirous of being indentured for another term of five years' service until such mortality has been satisfactorily accounted for, or such recommendations carefully carried out.

11. I have, notwithstanding the report of Mr. Murdoch, dated the 27th March 1866, to Sir Frederic Rogers, enclosed in the communication to me from the Acting Government Secretary, No. 569, dated 9th May 1866, forwarded the return marked No. 1, since the form being printed gives but little additional trouble to the Immigration Department, and conveys in a much more satisfactory manner than could be done without it that information which it is quite evident Mr. Murdoch requires, as expressed in the very report to which I have alluded, as well as in a subsequent report by Mr. Murdoch, dated 22nd May 1866.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

PROPOSED ABANDONMENT OF PORT CANNING.

From S. C. BAYLEY, Esq., Officiating Additional Secretary to the Government of Bengal, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Public Works Department,—(No. 4179, dated 25th July 1868.)

I am directed to forward, for the purpose of being laid before the Governor General in Council, copies of the correspondence noted on the margin.

Letter from Officiating Commissioner, Presidency Division, No. 14, dated 14th May 1868.
Letter from Officiating Commissioner, Presidency Division, No. 19, dated 15th June.
Letter from Mr. F. Schiller of 15th May.

2. The first of these communications contains a careful review of the endeavours which have for some years been made to develop Port Canning on the Mutlah as an auxiliary port to Calcutta and as a commercial town.

3. These efforts, initiated in 1853, when the state of the Hooghly was thought by many to be such as to raise doubts of its remaining long open to navigation, have with slight intermission been prosecuted up to the present time. The expenditure incurred by Government has been very large. Irrespective of any outlay by the Port Canning Company or by private individuals, and irrespective of the cost of buildings erected by the Public Works Department, it appears that on shore Government, either directly or through the Municipality, has already disbursed about 9½ lakhs of rupees; while the Government expenditure afloat has been close upon 10 lakhs. In addition to this, a railway has been made under Government guarantee solely for the benefit of the port,—a railway which does not pay its working expenses, and on the capital of which (£500,000) Government has to pay an annual interest of 5 per cent. None of the conditions of success, so far as the action of Government can secure success in such a matter, would appear to have been wanting. But nothing can be more evident than that the result of all has been failure. Ships do not come to the port. Traffic does not come to the railway.

4. The total number of vessels entering the port during the last five years is given on the margin, but if the periodical arrivals of the Chittagong and Akyab steamer,* which is the only vessel regularly plying from Port Canning, be excluded, the number of ships using the port during the last two years was nine in all; most of them vessels of insignificant size.

* A small vessel of 238 tons.

5. Under these circumstances, and in view of the facts set forth in Mr. Chapman's letter, the Lieutenant Governor has come to the conclusion that Government would not be justified in imposing on the public revenues further expenditure on account of Port Canning.

6. In the letter which will be found among the enclosures, Mr. Schiller sets forth the conditions which he considers necessary to make, what has hitherto been a failure, a success. These conditions appear to be that Government should guarantee the interest on the capital of a Company which should buy up the Sunderbuns, the railway, and the present Port Canning Company. The capital sum, which would be required for this purpose, is understood to be estimated at £2,000,000. It seems only necessary to refer to this project as an additional proof of the futility of incurring further direct expense on account of the place. Mr. Schiller, it will be observed, avows that he sees no other way of dealing with Port Canning.

7. The Lieutenant Governor would then after twelve months' public notice, abandon Canning as a port; and on shore he would limit the expenditure to such moderate outlay as might be found absolutely necessary for the actual preservation of the existing roads, tanks, and drainage. The lands belonging to Government or the Municipality may, it is hoped, be advantageously let for rice or other cultivation, the rents being devoted to defraying the cost of maintaining the works above described. The necessary supervision could be given by either the Canal Branch of the Public Works Department, or by the Executive Engineer of the 24-Pergunnahs.

8. The Lieutenant Governor can see no useful object to be gained by following any other course. The project has been most fully and fairly tried, and has failed to realize the expectations of even its most moderate supporters. Everything in reason has been done to attract and even force trade to the port, but in vain.

9. Mr. Schiller indeed affirms that 'trade has proved that it is prepared to come,' but the experience of the last few years seems to the Lieutenant Governor to establish the very opposite of this. No ships come to the port on account of any advantages which it, or anything connected with it, offers. The few that are induced to come avoid it again if they possibly can. Mr. Schiller adds what seems to the Lieutenant Governor to be very significant, viz., that "trade will not come to a new place, situated as Port Canning is, without finding the best facilities and appliances." This surely is tantamount to an admission that trade does not want to come to Port Canning, and that it can only be induced to come there, if at all, by providing for it the best facilities and appliances, a condition, it may be remarked, which trade certainly has not hitherto enjoyed in Calcutta itself. But the Lieutenant Governor has no hesitation in affirming that facilities and appliances have been provided at Port Canning amply sufficient to attract trade to the place if trade were really ready to come there. The river has been buoyed; lights and pilots have been provided, thus securing safe access to the port. Communication with Calcutta has been provided by means of a railroad made at the public expense; and the roads, tanks, &c., which have been already constructed at Canning, are more than sufficient for the wants of the place, even assuming a rapid rate of progress in its development during the next few years.

10. There are only two possible events which could insure the success of Port Canning. Either the trade of Calcutta must increase to such an extent that the port will be unable to accommodate it, or the river Hooghly must so deteriorate that ships cannot come up to Calcutta. In the first case, failing the provision of adequate accommodation at Calcutta by means of wet docks, Canning might become an important auxiliary port. In the second event, the Mutlah must no doubt become the highway to Calcutta. But the Lieutenant Governor can see no prospect of the trade of Calcutta so expanding within the next 20 years as to become too unwieldy for the present port as it is; and even should it do so, there is, irrespective of the resource of wet docks, ample room for the extension of the port to the south. Nor, on the other hand, is there any sign of the deterioration of the Hooghly as a navigable channel. Indeed the Lieutenant Governor believes that, in the opinion of competent judges, there is good reason to hope that it will be better ten years hence than it is now.

11. To anticipate either of the remote contingencies above set out by a large present outlay at Port Canning appears to be uncalled for. Should any real necessity arise for the urgent development of that port, it will be easy, the existing works being maintained, though not at present extended, to make it available for traffic in a very short time. Mr. Chapman in paragraph 89 of his letter refers to the new rice-mills as a possible means of creating a trade from the port. But so far as the Lieutenant Governor can learn, the capacity of these mills will not serve to furnish cargoes for a number of ships sufficient to justify the continuance of the present large expenditure connected with Port Canning. Irrespective of what remains to be spent for the protection of the place from the river, and for providing communication down the river by electric telegraph, the actual current monthly expenditure now incurred amounts ashore and afloat to Rs. 9,479-9.

12. It has been argued that Government, by the share which it has taken in pushing on the development of Port Canning, is to some extent responsible for having induced the public to invest money in the various projects connected with the place. What the Government has done, however, has been to give a fair trial and every reasonable assistance to an experiment which it was hoped would prove a public benefit, which was originally taken up at the strong instance of the commercial community,* and with which the Government has been since constantly urged by the public to persevere. The Government has been influenced in common with the public by a bonâ fide hope that the project would succeed, and if now the Government determines upon sufficient grounds that the experiment is a failure, and that consequently further expenditure of public money upon it cannot be justified, such a decision can give no claim to private persons who have also embarked money in the project to be compensated at the public expense.

* Vide letter from Chamber of Commerce to Government of Bengal, dated 27th May 1853.

13. The necessity of arriving at a definite conclusion in regard to the future connection of Government with Port Canning is now pressing. The whole of the loan of 4½ lakhs which was assigned by Government to the Municipality under orders of the Government of India, in the Public Works Department, No. 251A., dated 5th March 1866, has been drawn and expended. There is not the remotest prospect of its ever being repaid. If the place is to be kept up, the state of the river bank is such that at least a lakh of rupees must at once be spent upon protective works, the success of which is uncertain. And as regards the railway, the Lieutenant Governor has to observe that the outlay on its permanent way and stock had been of late kept so low that heavy expenditure must, if present arrangements continue, be incurred at no distant date.

14. With reference to the suggestion thrown out by the Commissioner in paragraph 82 of his letter, that the abandonment of Port Canning will involve Government in some specific pecuniary liabilities to individuals, the Lieutenant Governor will at present express no opinion. Of one thing, however, he feels sure, namely, that if any such obligations do actually now exist, they will only be strengthened and magnified, the longer the attempt to establish a port and town at Canning is fruitlessly persisted in.

From R. B. CHAPMAN, Esq., Officiating Commissioner of the Presidency Division, to the Secretary to the Government of Bengal,—(No. 14, dated 14th May 1868).

I have the honor to lay before the Government the Budget Estimate of the Municipal Commissioners of the town of Canning for the year 1868-69, dated 1st April, and received in my Office on the 15th.

2. The result of this estimate is a deficit of at least Rs. 30,000, and that, although the expenditure planned is wholly incommensurate with the necessities of the place, and extravagantly small when compared to the establishment to be maintained.

3. It is plain that a crisis is come in the history of Canning, and that the Government must now definitively decide upon the course that it will adopt. A very extensive outlay has been incurred, and is indeed still going on, upon the South-Eastern Railway, the plan and establishment of the port and its approaches, and the improvement of the site of the hoped-for town. Unless large funds be now forthcoming for the completion of the works projected, it will be certainly best to throw no more money away, and to put an immediate stop to all kinds of expenditure.

4. The circumstances seem to require that I should, for the convenience of the Government, sketch as briefly as possible the history of the settlement hitherto, and state as well as I can the case upon which a decision is now required.

5. Though the papers to which I have access do not record the fact, I believe that I am right in saying that the natural advantages of the Mutlah estuary for the formation of a port were first brought to notice by some gentlemen who had obtained grants of waste lands upon its banks.

6. The first recorded official document upon the subject is an address by the Chamber of Commerce to the Government of Bengal, dated 27th of May 1853. It has been for years now assumed that no one ever thought of founding upon the Mutlah anything but an auxiliary port to Calcutta. The Chamber of Commerce, however, started the bill with no such limited scheme. It would appear from their letter that the state of the Hooghly in 1852-53 had been such as to cause great anxiety, and their address to Government proceeds upon the avowed apprehension that access to the port of Calcutta would soon be "altogether impracticable for any vessels but those of the smallest tonnage."

7. It would seem that Lord Dalhousie participated to some extent in the alarm which gave such opportune weight to the project of a port in the Mutlah to supersede or assist Calcutta, for he immediately adopted very energetic measures. He purchased, as he thought for Government, at a cost of Rs. 11,000, the lot on which the existing skeleton of the township was subsequently placed, ordered a survey of the Mutlah estuary by Lieutenant Ward, an Officer of the Indian Navy, and another of the country between Calcutta and the proposed port by Major Baker, of the Bengal Engineers, in view to a consideration of the question whether either a railway or a ship canal might, and should not, be constructed to connect the two rivers, and appointed a Committee to report upon the state of the Hooghly.

8. Long subsequently after the Government had incurred much expenditure and laid itself open to serious alleged obligations, it was discovered that in its hasty purchase, which was made secretly and without the usual forms, the Government, in purchasing the lot referred to, had bought a right that was largely barren, the vendor having previously alienated all real beneficiary rights in a very important part of the estate. We are not yet, I fear, by any means quit of the litigation, or at least of the claims which this discovery has led to.

9. On the 26th August 1853, Major Baker submitted his report to the effect that there was no difficulty in the way of the construction of a railway, and that, for many weighty reasons, a railway was preferable to a ship canal.

10. On the 15th November of the same year, Lieutenant Ward presented a very favorable report upon the estuary. The rise and fall of the tide he found to be 10 feet at the Sandheads, 12 feet at the mouth of the river, and 14½ feet at its head. The tide, he stated, to run at four and a half miles an hour during the springs, and about two miles in the neaps. The least water in the channel he found to be four fathoms at low-water spring tides. "There is, therefore," he reported, "nothing to prevent vessels of the largest tonnage proceeding up or down the river at all times."

11. The Committee on the Hooghly consisted of Captain Divie Robertson, Master Attendant, Mr. J. J. Mackenzie, of Messrs. Mackillop, Stewart and Company, and Mr. H. Piddington. Their report was not made till the 31st January 1855 after a very elaborate enquiry. The two first named members took a very gloomy view of the state and prospects of the Hooghly; Mr. Piddington differed from them, and the Chamber of Commerce, whether relying upon his opinion, or from other causes, adopted his views, and so far modified their previously expressed opinions as to advocate apparently rather the adoption of measures to improve the Hooghly than any perseverance with the scheme for a port on the Mutlah.

12. It must be admitted that the experience of the thirteen years that have since elapsed, and the professional investigations since made, have largely confirmed the impression that the Chamber appears then to have formed, and which it has, on various occasions, since recorded with more or less emphasis, viz., that the alarm felt regarding the Hooghly in 1853 was at least premature.

13. Meanwhile, however, the Government urged on by some members of the mercantile community by no means abandoned the Mutlah project, though the scheme never again took larger proportions than as for the formation of a port auxiliary to the port of Calcutta.

14. On the 14th December 1855, in consequence of a ship coming to the Mutlah to load,* the Government sanctioned the expenditure of Rs. 15,000 for buoying off the estuary.

* See paragraph 12 of Government of Bengal, to Government of India, No. 231, dated 16th April.

15. On the 12th March 1856, a party of merchants, accompanied by a Committee of Government Officers, consisting of Mr. A. R. Young, Captain D. Robertson, and Captain Yule, of the Engineers, proceeded viâ the Calcutta canals in a Government steamer to inspect the site of the proposed port and the estuary itself.

16. The reports of the merchants and of the Committee were alike couleur-de-rose; the Committee quoting with something like incredulous scorn a remarkable prophecy of Mr. Piddington's as follows:—

"Supposing the head of the Mutlah River to be fixed upon as a mercantile and naval depôt, everything and every one must be prepared to see a day when, in the midst of the horrors of a hurricane, they will find a terrific mass of salt-water rolling in or rising upon them with such rapidity, that in a few minutes the whole settlement will be inundated to a depth of from 5 to 15 feet."

17. Words could scarcely describe more accurately what actually occurred on the night of the 1st to the 2nd November last. In the midst of the horrors of the hurricane that then occurred, the water did rise, as prophesied, about 5 feet over the whole settlement, and the destruction caused by it was limited only in proportion as the progress of the settlement had been limited.

18. Much of the Committee's report is taken up with their reasons for rejecting, in favor of the existing site of the settlement, another site at Edoo Creek, lower down the river, which had then, and has since, commended itself to many interested in the whole project as much to be preferred to Canning.

19. The report of the Committee is dated 26th March. On the 28th, the Government of India addressed the Government of Bengal, enquiring what had been done, and urging especially the importance of securing ample control over the lands on which the settlement was to be founded.

"The Governor General in Council," wrote Mr. Secretary Beadon, "is disposed to think that the time is now come when the question of establishing a town and port at the head of the Mutlah must be taken up in a comprehensive point of view, and arrangements made with regard to the possible requirements of such a town, if,* as seems likely, the Mutlah should at no distant period become a principal port of Calcutta, connected with the city by a railroad and by the tidal channels which now exist, and are susceptible of great improvement."

* Italics mine.

20. The most important immediate result of this letter was the cancelment of an order for the restoration to the grantees of Sunderbun lot 50 which had been forfeited. This lot lies immediately to the south of the site chosen and purchased by Government for the settlement as related in my 7th paragraph.

21. In July and August of this year (1856), the Chamber of Commerce urged upon the Government the improvement of the land and water communications with the Mutlah, and the provision of facilities for the approach to, and navigation of, the Mutlah estuary, leading the Government plainly to expect that a considerable trade in the Mutlah was likely immediately to spring up. In September the Chamber and the British Indian Association simultaneously petitioned the Government to make the Mutlah temporarily a free port for the export of rice.

22. Long before this, on the 29th March, the Government of Bengal proposed to the Government of India arrangements for providing pilots and a light vessel for the Mutlah, at a monthly expenditure of Rs. 2,264-14, and now it recommended the temporary relief from export duty of the rice shipped from the new port.

23. The Government of India thereupon begged for one complete scheme to include all the needful arrangements on shore as well as afloat. I have no copy of the orders of the Government of India to refer to, but I observe that to the Government of Bengal it appeared that the Governor General in Council had greatly altered the opinion expressed in the passage quoted in my 19th paragraph; the tone of the orders appearing to "indicate that His Lordship in Council now saw reason to doubt whether the Mutlah was likely to become a port of Calcutta," and "a full report being required from the Lieutenant Governor as to what probability there was of the Mutlah being resorted to as a channel of trade, and if there were any doubts as to the Mutlah being sought as a port, His Lordship in Council wished to be informed of the extent of the doubts."

24. In reply to this portion of the orders of the Government of India, the Government of Bengal recapitulated as follows, and the grounds upon which it supposed the Mutlah likely to become a port of Calcutta—"the dangerous navigation of the river Hooghly; the possible deterioration of that river; the much greater distance from the Sandheads to Calcutta than to the head of the Mutlah, and the limited accommodation for shipping in the port of Calcutta, hardly equal even to the present wants of the trade of the port."

25. The Lieutenant Governor also gave as his further reasons for "viewing the project with great favour," the peculiar advantages of the Mutlah as a navigable channel, the probability of the progressive increase of the commerce of Bengal, the favour with which the project was regarded by "several merchants of Calcutta," with the cordial support of the Chamber of Commerce, and the absence of any real impediment; and quoted the anticipation of extensive trade communicated to him by the Chamber of Commerce. His Honor concluded, however, with the warning that the encouragement expected from the Government "would involve a considerable outlay of money without any present return."

26. The Government of Bengal at the same time submitted, as the complete scheme called for by the Governor General in Council, a plan in which, as regards operations ashore, caution and moderation are very manifest.

27. Upon this the Government of India took the whole project into serious consideration. Mr. J. P. Grant recorded an elaborate Minute, suggesting the measures which he proposed for adoption. Lord Canning visited the site of the proposed settlement, which appears to have created a very favorable impression upon him, and the upshot of the consultations was the issue of orders to the Government of Bengal on the 21st November 1856, sanctioning the arrangements afloat, which had been proposed by the Lieutenant Governor, and commanding far more expensive and systematic operations ashore than the Lieutenant Governor had apparently ever contemplated.

28. This result is the more surprising that the Lieutenant Governor (Mr. Halliday) had throughout been most sanguine of the success of the scheme; while the tone of the Minutes of the Members of the Government of India indicates a very scanty confidence in its soundness. The explanation of the anomaly is to be found in the reliance placed by the Governor General in Council on the representations of the Chamber of Commerce.

"I think," wrote Mr. Grant, "that the Governor General in Council will probably be of opinion that the representations of the Chamber of Commerce of the probability of an extensive trade in rice and other grain from the Mutlah is sufficient to warrant the expenditure immediately of what is necessary for the immediate wants of such a trade."

29. Lord Canning too was influenced by the eagerness shown by speculators to obtain land in the neighbourhood—(an eagerness which, eight years later, must have borne rich fruit to the successful), and wrote—

"In short it is clear that the merchants of Calcutta are resolved to make immediate trial of the Mutlah, and that they are ready to incur considerable expenditure for the purpose."

30. Mr. Dorin remained absolutely sceptical, but for the moment Mr. Grant apparently almost abandoned his hesitation.

"The result," he wrote, "of the Governor General's inspection of the spot is very encouraging. To convert a place in the Sunderbuns into a tolerably healthy residence at all seasons, is necessarily a work of time, but, with adequate expenditure of capital, time will do it. The only reason for doubting that the Mutlah will become in time a great port that I know, is the chance of a port springing up in some of the other rivers of the Delta a good way still further to the eastward than the Mutlah."

31. It was accordingly, avowedly, in reliance upon the representations of the Chamber of Commerce that the orders already described so favorable to the views of the sanguine promoters of the Mutlah project were given. A Resolution by the Government of Bengal, dated the 14th November 1856, shows that, up to that date, five mercantile firms in Calcutta, none of them very influential, and one member of a leading firm, had applied for allotments at Canning.

32. The proposition of the Lieutenant Governor for the exemption of rice exported viâ the Mutlah from duty was disapproved, as contrary to sound principles, much to the Lieutenant Governor's disappointments (see his Minute, 11th November 1856). It is certainly possible that the concession thus refused might have done more for the port than all the expenditure sanctioned.

33. The Government of Bengal now adopted vigorous measures in obedience to the orders of the Government of India. An Engineer of high repute (Mr. H. Leonard) was appointed to construct embankments, clear jungle, erect temporary shelter, and plan the new town. Pilots were provided, and a light ship anchored off the mouth of the estuary. Needful arrangements were made for the assignment of lots for the levy of custom duty, and for the police of the embryo settlement, a Post Office was talked of.

34. In the plan of the town, nothing that foresight could think of was omitted: Town Hall, Exchange, Church, Market-place, Bazaars, Hospitals, Sailors' Homes, Recreation Grounds, Burial Grounds, and even a College, all were carefully provided for. The tenure on which building lots were granted was carefully considered and was not objected to.

35. The port dues and pilotage charges were regulated in a liberal spirit, being fixed at one-half the rate chargeable to vessels entering the Hooghly, while commanders were left at liberty to arrange for the piloting of their vessels without the interference of the Government pilots at all.

36. In the course of 1857, the site of the projected town and its vicinity was cleared of jungle, and on the 14th November of that year, arrangements were made with Messrs. Ram Gopal Ghose and Company for the reclamation of 2,000 bighas (say 667 acres) of land in the immediate neighbourhood on a rent-free lease for ten years.

37. But the ships did not come. The trade which the Chamber of Commerce had led the Government to believe would be vigorously prosecuted, was represented by thirteen* vessels up to 1858, of which only three exceeded 500 tons in burden. The consignees of these few ships experienced so much difficulty principally in disposing of their import cargoes, that for at least four years no other ship entered the port.

* Two in 1856.
Ten in 1857.
One in 1858.

38. The projectors, however, were scarcely, if at all, discouraged. Those who had been sanguine from the first, including the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal (Mr. Halliday), remained sanguine still. The one thing needful in their opinion for the success of the scheme was easy communication with Calcutta. To further this, and to advance the interests of the Mutlah generally, an Association, called the Mutlah Association, was formed in February 1858.

39. To make this review complete, I must digress here, if it be indeed a digression, to recount the fortunes of the Mutlah Railway.

40. I have mentioned that when Lord Dalhousie first took the Multah project into consideration in 1853, he had the country between Calcutta and the Mutlah surveyed, in view to the preparation of a project for a railway or a ship canal as an essential part of the whole scheme.

41. This feature of the scheme was not lost sight of; and as its other features took shape, an Association, imbued with the sanguine spirit of those who had faith in the Mutlah, endeavoured to obtain capital in London for the construction of the railway without any Government guarantee. The Government was asked to do nothing more than give the land required for the line free of cost, obtaining in return a right to settle its direction and termini.

42. The Association appears to have been encouraged by the Court of Directors, eager for the introduction of the principle of non-guaranteed railways, and hopeful of the success of the Mutlah port. It soon began to think its original design too humble, and so expended into the Calcutta and South-Eastern Railway, proposing to construct a line viâ the Sunderbuns to Chittagong, Arracan, and Rangoon.

43. The projectors might, of course, as wisely and as well, have proposed a railway to the moon, and the scheme was emphatically condemned by Lord Canning, who, anxious as he was for the successful construction of a railway without a guarantee, "doubted the prudence of entrusting the first experiment, failure in which would be most unfortunate to the projectors of such a scheme." The other Members of Lord Canning's Government as emphatically concurred with His Lordship, and the tone of their remarks seems to show a return of all the hesitation in regard to the Mutlah itself, which they had so lately* abandoned.

* About a month before.

44. The conclusion announced to the Court of Directors was, that "there was no immediate or definite prospect of a railway being needed in the direction of the Mutlah, and that until the necessity for such a work was more clearly apparent," the land ought not to be given. The despatch to this effect is dated 16th February 1857.

45. In a despatch, dated the 30th September, the Court of Directors concurred in the opinion of the Government of India that it was not advisable to encourage the scheme; but added that the promised grant of land would not be withheld if the Company would lodge one-fourth of the capital required for the construction of the line to the Mutlah.

46. In June 1858, and again in December, the Mutlah Association addressed the Government in support of the railway, estimating on the strength of the calculations made by Mr. Longridge, the Engineer, that the total cost of the line, including rolling-stock, &c., would not exceed £280,000, and that the profits would range from 10 per cent., even if the Mutlah scheme failed, to at the very least 21¾ per cent. if it succeeded.

47. This estimate, which, like all such documents, is based upon very plausible data, is, when compared with the reality, an amusing specimen of the genius of projectors. It appears, however, from the reports of a meeting held by the Association on the 21st July to have very truly represented the expectations of the members, which apparently knew no bounds.

48. I presume that these gentlemen must at this time have again obtained some influence in the Council of the Government of India, for, on the 20th July, the President in Council offered to Mr. Halliday an opportunity of supporting again the undertaking so recently condemned, and Mr. Halliday in due time submitted a Minute in enthusiastic support of the port and the railway.

49. The influence which then prevailed here must apparently have been still more potent in England, for, before the Government of India had taken any official or public notice of the Lieutenant Governor's Minute, the Secretary of State had actually conceded a guarantee of 5 per cent. interest on the £250,000, which, he was persuaded, would suffice for the construction of the line. The date of this guarantee is 12th November 1858.

50. Two years later, the guarantee had to be extended to £500,000, and about the middle of 1863 the line was opened. It has never, I believe, though worked on the most economical scale, paid even its expenses, and this year the Company have surrendered it to the Government of India.

51. Little appears to have been done at Port Canning during the government of Sir J. P. Grant, although he visited the place soon after assuming office, and gave some careful detailed instructions regarding it. It was he also that supported the extension of the capital of the railway.

52. Mr. (now Sir Cecil) Beadon assumed the Government on the 23rd April 1862, and soon gave great attention to the affairs of Canning. He had always regarded the project favorably, and the approaching completion of the railway made some decisive action on the part of the Government at least desirable.

53. In the latter part of 1861, the Mutlah Association had proposed to Mr. Grant's government the creation of a Municipality from among the owners of allocations at Canning; and this proposal Mr. Beadon now adopted. A Municipal Committee was formed under Act XXVI. of 1850, which held its first meeting on the 12th July 1862. In the following January, the entire proprietary right of Government in lots 50 and 54 of the Sunderbuns was, with certain reservations, vested in the Municipal Committee in trust for the town of Canning, and in June 1863 the Government of Bengal, with the sanction of the Government of India, relinquished for ever all claims to land revenue from the lands transferred, and declared that they were held in freehold tenure by the Municipal Commissioners in trust for the town and port with certain reservations.

54. The Government of India had at that time peremptorily refused to grant a loan of two lakhs of rupees for the operations of the Municipality; and one of the first acts of the Municipality, after obtaining the grant of land just referred to, was to endeavour, with the sanction of the Lieutenant Governor, to raise a debenture loan of 10 lakhs of rupees at 5½ per cent., redeemable in five years.

55. Much pains were taken to adjust the conditions of this loan to the supposed wishes of the public, but it was unsuccessful, only Rs. 2,65,000 being subscribed. Upon this, Messrs. John Borradaile and Ferdinand Schiller, then in England, moved the Secretary of State for assistance, and the result was a despatch to the Government of India, dated 31st December, which seemed to indicate that the Queen's Government would approve of advances being made by the Government for the assistance of the town.

"It is," wrote the Secretary of State, "obviously for the interest of the Government that a town should spring up at the terminus of the railway just completed from Calcutta to the Mutlah; and I shall be prepared to consider any proposals which your Excellency may see fit to make with the view of promoting its growth."

56. Upon this, the Lieutenant Governor obtained from the Municipal Commissioners an estimate, dated 23rd March 1864, of the expenditure necessary for the preliminary works still indispensable to the very foundation of the town. In this estimate, which is avowedly of the roughest and most unreliable description, the Commissioners reckoned that they required about 12½ lakhs of rupees for roads, about 6½ lakhs for drainage, and about 1½ lakhs for the protection of the river bank, on which some very serious slips had now apparently for the first time begun to occur. In the correspondence connected with this estimate, the Commissioners endeavoured to maintain that the Government had incurred "moral, if not legal, responsibility" for the completion of the roads and tanks shown on Mr. Leonard's plan, on the basis of which the lots had been assigned.

57. In submitting this estimate to the Government of India, the Lieutenant Governor reiterated once again his full confidence in the prospects of the port and settlement, and while absolutely repudiating the obligation which the Commissioners had endeavoured to fasten upon the Government, strongly recommended the Government of India to advance as a loan, at 5 per cent. interest, not the whole sum required to complete the skeleton of the town sketched out by Mr. Leonard in 1856, but the sum (4½ lakhs of rupees) reckoned necessary, in addition to the funds in the hands of the Commissioners for the works to be undertaken in 1864-65. In making this recommendation, the Lieutenant Governor wrote (paragraph 11)—

"If the loan of this money be granted, it should be on the clear understanding that the Government will expend no more public money on the town, and that no further assistance of this kind is to be looked for. The amount asked for is quite sufficient to enable the Municipal Commissioners to proceed so far with the improvements as to meet the most urgent requirements of the town and port, and to show conclusively whether the present promise of their success is likely to be realized. If the result be favourable, the Commissioners will have no difficulty in obtaining from the public, on reasonable terms, such further support as they may require; and if not, it will prove that the undertaking does not justify further expenditure."

58. Upon this proposal reaching the Government of India, Sir C. Trevelyan recorded a vehement Minute against it, remarking especially that from an able report just furnished by Mr. Leonard, it was certain that, for all practical purposes, the Hooghly would continue navigable for a generation to come, and that there was hardly an instance known of the successful diversion of trade into new channels by artificial means. He would have peremptorily and summarily refused the grant.

59. Sir John Lawrence's Government, however, while concurring with much that Sir C. Trevelyan wrote, begged the Secretary of State to sanction the loan of the 4½ lakhs of rupees asked for, upon condition that 15½ lakhs were raised by the Municipality, and on the final understanding that no further Government aid could be given for the purposes of the port and town of Canning, and the Secretary of State, not without a measure of reluctance, agreed. (Despatch dated 7th November 1864.)

60. Meanwhile, in September 1864, the Chamber of Commerce recommended to the Government of India "that the enterprise which had developed the Mutlah scheme to the extent in which it is now seen, should be encouraged to further exertion by a liberal grant of public funds for the purpose of the port and town." The recommendation was, however, so guarded, not to say perfunctory, that I think it very evident that it was made under pressure, and did not represent the spontaneous or decided opinion of the members. Amongst other things, the Chamber says plainly that there is no early prospect, in their opinion, of any serious deterioration of the Hooghly or of any difficulty in accommodating the shipping of the port of Calcutta.

61. In August the Commissioners had replied to the offer of the Government of India described in my 59th paragraph, by protesting against the condition annexed to it as absolutely impracticable, and the Government of Bengal supported their prayer that the condition should be withdrawn.

62. About the same time a memorial was presented to Sir John Lawrence, signed by Messrs. Schoene, Kilburn and Company, and 60 other merchants and residents of Calcutta, pleading for the further encouragement of Canning, and alleging specifically that all that was wanted was that Canning should be drained for ships to resort to it.

63. In November 1864, Mr. Schiller brought out the Port Canning Land Investment, Reclamation, and Dock Company (Limited). He had, in the preceding July, proposed to Sir John Lawrence to make over the entire property of the Government at Canning to some such Company. He was now satisfied with much smaller concessions he obtained for his Company.

I.—The gift in freehold of 100 acres of land in the centre of the town.

II.—The monopoly for fifty years of erecting and constructing such tramways as might be authorized in the town by the Municipal Commissioners.

III.—The right of providing for fifty years landing accommodation for the trade of the port and of levying tolls thereupon, undertaking on his part—

1*st*.—Within two years to construct a boat dock 2,500 feet long by 200 feet wide by 10 feet deep.

2*nd*.—To charge such rates for the use of the tramways and landing places as the Commissioners might, within a certain reservation, fix, 3rd.—To pay the Commissioners one-third of all profits upon these works above 10 per cent.

4th.—To subscribe £25,000 to the loan already referred to at 15 per cent. discount; the loan being closed.

64. The Government approved of these concessions, and the deeds were signed. The inflated success of the Port Canning Company on its first announcement is well known. Fortunately for Calcutta the madness of the moment did not last, and the ruinous operations of speculators soon came to an end. As I write the shares are not saleable at 73 per cent. discount on the paid-up capital.

65. Upon the strength, however, of the subscription by the public of 60 lakhs of rupees to the Port Canning Company, the Commissioners urged upon the Government that the condition upon which the loan of 4½ lakhs of rupees had been offered to them had been virtually fulfilled, and the Government of India made the loan. This was in May 1866, and with the funds thus supplied, the Commissioners have since been working.

66. It remains that I should describe the progress of the port and settlement up to date, and the material obstacles that have presented themselves to its success.

67. I mentioned in my 37th paragraph that up to 1858 thirteen vessels, most of them not very large ones, had visited the place. I believe that no more ships came till 1863, when the railway was opened. In the season 1863-64, eleven ships entered the Mutlah. I cannot say how many came in the latter half of 1864. But in the year 1865, nine vessels had visited the port up to April. In 1865-66, thirty-seven vessels loaded at Canning, most of them small ones. The bulk of these vessels entered in ballast, and took away cargoes of grain. In 1866-67, only eight vessels visited Canning, and since that date it may be said that no ships have come, except those which brought materials for the Port Canning Company, and now and again the Chittagong steamers. Altogether upwards of eighty vessels have tried the port.

68. None of these vessels have, I believe, complained seriously of the estuary as a navigable channel, and notwithstanding the catastrophe of the wreck of the Eagle Speed, and accidents to one or two other vessels, I think that there is not much reason to doubt that the Mutlah is superior in this respect to the Hooghly.

69. On the other hand, very serious complaints have, I believe, been made from time to time of the unhealthiness of the place to the crews of the ships lying there. It is not to be doubted or denied that even the absence of spirit shops and other nurseries of disease does not prevent Canning from being as yet very greatly more unhealthy to sailors than Calcutta. This was probably anticipated from the first. For a place and neighbourhood situated like Canning to become really healthy must obviously be the work of a very long time. All that is to be said is, that the latest accounts in this respect are not discouraging, and that there is reason to hope that in time this obstacle would be overcome. I do not suppose that Canning is materially more unhealthy than was Calcutta when first we occupied it.

70. There is still very great difficulty about fresh water, not one of the tanks dug at so much labor and expense is yet really sweet. There were hopes that some of them would have been so this year, but the salt water irruption that accompanied the cyclone of November 1st to the 2nd, 1868, has postponed that most desirable consummation for, I suppose, another year at least.

71. The Municipality has spent much money upon the drainage of the place, and upon the construction of metalled roads. The jungle has, for a long time now, been cleared, and the land cultivated more or less. I do not think that there is anything wanting in these respects which need impede the progress of the place.

72. The Port Canning Company have done a good deal; they have erected a spacious hotel (inhabited as yet only by their own officers). Some very extensive and costly rice-mills now approaching completion, and one or two other buildings. They have nearly completed the excavation of the boat dock, which formed one of their obligations under the deed of concessions to Mr. Schiller. They have conducted extensive operations for the protection of the foreshore, and have erected some jetties, &c.

73. The Government has built a brick cutcherry.

74. The Railway Company had built a jetty on the portion of the shore belonging to them, but it has been carried away by the river.

75. The private grantees have done little or nothing in the way of building, the only considerable erection by them being a brick bazaar for the accommodation of the Native population, which has been attracted in not altogether inconsiderable numbers to the place.

76. The leading obstacles to the progress of the place, in a material point of view, have been, first, the lack of fresh water and the general insalubrity of the locality; secondly, the occurrence of repeated slips both on the Bidyadhary or northern shore and on the Mutlah or eastern shore of the settlement. These slips, which have necessitated costly works, appear to have greatly shaken public confidence in the place, for they were not expected; and no one is yet very confident that they can be overcome or prevented by any practicable expenditure; thirdly, the inundation of the place by salt water in the cyclone of the 1st and 2nd November last, precisely as Mr Piddington had foretold, and notwithstanding the ridicule cast upon his prophecy by the Government Committee of 1856; fourthly, the very great difficulty of raising the level of the land.

77. I am not prepared to say that, in my opinion, any of these physical obstacles are insuperable, though I do think that they are to be overcome only by patient perseverance, and after a very considerable expenditure of money and, perhaps, life.

78. The gross expenditure upon the whole project up to date I cannot give with any approach to accuracy. Including the railway, it can scarcely have been less than 75 lakhs by the Government and the Municipality, besides what has been spent by the Port Canning Company and the public. Of the cost of the arrangements afloat, I have not, indeed, any but a very general idea. The expenditure ashore is, to the end of 1867-68, nearly as follows, but this does not include Mr. Leonard's salary and establishment:—

	Rs.
General superintendence and charges	57,496
Salary of Engineeer and his charges	76,886
Works, viz., roads, tanks, embankments, drainage, Engineer's plant, &c. (net)	7,38,439
Medical charges (net)	10,225
Interest and Debenture Loan	54,230
Police and Conservancy	4,722
TOTAL ...	9,41,998

The income has been as follows:—

	Rs.
Sale proceeds of lots for building, &c.	39,810
Net rent of lots and lands, deducting collection charges ...	62,855
Debenture Loan (deducting discount)	4,36,510
Government Loan...	4,00,000
TOTAL ...	9,39,175

We have in hand, as shown in the Budget herewith submitted, Rs. 14,929-1-2 and Rs. 50,000 of the loan from Government is still undrawn. I cannot say how the excess of expenditure above income was adjusted. It occurred before the Municipality was formed.

79. Looking back upon the history of the project as I have now related it, the following are among the obvious conclusions that occur to me:—

1stly.—The origin of the whole scheme was a panic regarding the state and prospects of the Hooghly, the immense trade of Calcutta being naturally extremely sensitive on the very vital point of its communications with the sea.

2ndly.—That this panic afforded an opportunity to persons individually interested in property on the Mutlah, and to the men of sanguine and speculative genius to be found in due proportion in such a community as Calcutta to thrust forward the claims of the Mutlah.

3rdly.—That the panic did not last long, and that it is now substantially demonstrated by experience and by scientific enquiry to have been for all practical purposes without foundation.

4thly.—That neither the Government nor the mercantile community, nor scientific men, have ever regarded the project of creating a new emporium on the Mutlah with any thing but doubt and distrust. A few sanguine men among the merchants and two or three influential Government officers have strongly supported the scheme. But the Government as a body, and the merchants as a body, have just done as little as their sanguine compeers would allow them to do. As to scientific men, I do not find a single name of note committed with any confidence to the scheme.

5thly.—That, as a matter of fact, however, the sanguine party have carried their own way and obtained far more than they even asked. At first very moderate facilities were to suffice on the part of the Government. They were given without effect.

Then a railway alone was wanted to ensure success. It was given at more than double the estimated cost, entailing a heavy and perhaps a permanent burden upon the State. But it has produced no effect.

Then it was not to be expected, of course, that trade would go to a place not drained. The place was drained at a large expense. But still trade shows no inclination to seek the Mutlah.

6thly.—Almost the whole burden of all that has been done has been cast upon the Government. The public have evinced a determination to spend no money on the place. The single exception is the Port Canning Company, the origin of which is due simply to the transient success of the Gambling Land Speculations of Bombay.

7thly.—As a matter of fact, scarcely any of the anticipations of the sanguine promoters of the Mutlah have been realised. Even the river has not proved by any means so faultless as was supposed, and trade has simply as yet not been forthcoming.

80. Lastly, I proceed to consider the present position. Our money is all spent, or nearly so, and I may safely add to the conclusions stated in the preceding paragraph this:—That we shall not get a rupee more from the public as a loan or in any other shape unless there be some unforeseen turn in affairs.

81. What then will the Government do? I think I may safely say that, if in 1853 the Government had known a tenth part of what it knows now, it would never have touched Port Canning. Railway, Port, Municipality, and all would still have been unborn. But what of the obligations contracted and the expenditure incurred during these thirteen years? The Government has indeed repeatedly and peremptorily declared that it will not spend another rupee upon Port Canning. But even Sir Charles Trevelyan never deliberately dealt with the question, what then will you do? Will you take up the rails, stop all expenditure, and let the primeval jungle grow again, or what?

82. As to obligations, the Government of Bengal, the Government of India, and the Secretary of State have, each in turn, strongly repudiated their existence. Yet it is little likely that the Port Canning scheme could now be really buried without some very troublesome claims coming up for discussion. I think it tolerably clear that the Government must, at least in that case, repay at par the debenture loan contracted by the Municipality with its sanction, and probably it must restore the purchase money of all who bought lots in Canning. Certainly it must write off to Profit and Loss the four lakhs of rupees that it has already advanced as a nominal loan to the Municipality, and other questions difficult of solution would demand to be dealt with in connection with that body and its actions.

83. Still, if the Government please, the whole scheme may perhaps eventually be absolutely buried at a certain outlay of money to satisfy those aggrieved by such a proceeding.

84. The alternative exactly opposite to this is to go in now again heartily for the whole project, provide the funds necessary for the completion of the work ashore, and maintain the apparatus of the port afloat in entire efficiency. What this would really cost I should be afraid to estimate, but I think it very certain that, for the protection of the foreshore, the embankment of the whole site against cyclone-waves, the completion of an efficient system of roads, tanks, and drains, a very large outlay is still necessary, larger by far I should think than the 20 lakhs roughly estimated in 1864. Should this alternative be really seriously contemplated, I strongly advise that no half measures be adopted. If the Government really intend to attempt once more artificially to create the port, I would make it for a limited period (say five years) a free port, and transfer all Government business at once to it, causing all Government vessels to load and unload there. I would, at the same time, construct the telegraph, as proposed, to Halliday's Island, and prosecute all works with vigour. But I do not pretend to advise this course, or even to promise that, if it be adopted, the port will thrive. This much only I would say that nothing short of these measures is likely to create the port, and that if such measures as these fail, the scheme might probably then be abandoned with common consent.

85. There remains the middle course, which is the course I recommend for adoption. One thing, and in my own opinion—one thing only, would at once create Port Canning, viz., the closure of the Hooghly. It is not indeed probable that this will occur soon, but it is perhaps very probable indeed that it will occur some long time hence, and I think that under existing circumstances, we may well take advantage of what we have done at Port Canning to remain prepared for such a contingency. It is comfortable indeed to know that in the Mutlah river we have an outlet at any time available in case of necessity for the trade of Calcutta and Bengal.

86. I would then, I think, at once stop all expenditure in connection with Port Canning not absolutely necessary. I would, as soon as a sufficient notice is expired, withdraw the whole establishment afloat—pilots, lights, conservator, and all; no ships have for long visited the port, and I hear of no definite prospect of any doing so. The moment ships come, we can make arrangements for their convenience, but I really think we have kept up these costly appliances long enough on mere speculation; I would abandon, at the same time, all idea of constructing a telegraph at present. It is not at all called for by any trade existing or prospective.

87. I would open negotiations for the extinction of the Municipality, which being bankrupt is really very much at the mercy of the Government, and I would reduce the establishment on shore to the lowest possible scale, sufficient just to keep up the roads and drains and tanks, and perhaps to provide for the protection of the shore. Mr. Leonard would, I have no doubt, be prepared to propose an establishment such as is absolutely necessary for such works. It need not cost, I should think, nearly half what our present establishment costs.

88. I do not say that even this much will be done without vigorous remonstrance by those with vested interests in the port; but the power of the purse is a strong one, and the Government has long ago most absolutely and finally announced its purpose of using it. It is certainly under no kind of legal obligation on the one hand to spend money on Canning, or on the other to part with what is directly or indirectly public property there.

89. The only ground on which I have hesitated to urge the immediate adoption of these decided measures, is the approaching completion of the Port Canning Company's rice-mills. The sanguine party look now to these mills as the panacea for the want of vitality as yet shown by Canning, and some less bold spirits think that some trade may attend upon the mills. They will be ready about October I believe, and the Government might perhaps have some moderate temporary arrangements ready for next cold weather, so as to afford the needful facilities for any trade that does then appear.

From A. SMITH, Esq., Chairman of the Municipal Commissioners for the Town of Canning, to the Commissioner of the Presidency Division,—(No. 1741, dated 1st April 1868).

I have the honor to submit, for the consideration of His Honor the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, the Budget Estimate of this Municipality for the year 1868-69, showing the works which the Commissioners propose to undertake, their estimated cost, and the funds available to meet the same.

2. The amount at the disposal of the Commissioners at the close of the current year is Rs. 64,929-1-2, of which Rs. 50,000 is the balance still unpaid of the loan granted by Government upon the security of the Municipal Debentures.

3. With this sum and their further accruing assets, the Commissioners propose, during the ensuing financial year, to carry on the improvements in progress, and to undertake those estimated for in the accompanying statements.

4. The anticipated receipts and disbursements are exhibited in the Schedules and Statements under their different heads as entered in the Budget Estimate.

5. The receipt Schedules, A, B, D, and E are sufficiently explicit to require no explanation.

6. In respect of the land revenue Schedule C, it is not anticipated that any part of the revenue for the 36 lots in Sunderbun lot 50 will be realizable, not even the Rs. 3,600 indicated in last year's Budget Estimate, paragraphs 6 and 7, as a possible receipt.

7. The reduction of the river frontage lots from 22 to 21 is due to the resumption by the Commissioners of one lot shown in last year's estimate, on account of failure on the part of the proprietor to give effect to the conditions of his lease. The increase in the number of back lots, from 68 to 68$\frac{4}{5}$, is explained as follows:—In the Budget for the last two years, it was estimated that the whole of the lot No. 57 was to have been redeemed by Dr. Chunder Coomar Day, whereas only one-fifth of the land has been redeemed.

8. The increase in revenue for lands under cultivation is owing to the falling in of the leases of two Chucks, each containing 2,000 bighas.

9. Rs. 13,760 has been entered as rent, being the equivalent of the interest payable in to the Canning Company as explained in last year's Budget.

10. Of the anticipated disbursements, which are shown in Statements 1 to 9, those in Statements 6, 7, 8, and 9 require no explanation.

11. The following items need explanation:—The Calcutta Office Establishment shows a decrease of Rs. 348 per annum as compared with last year's Budget, owing to decrease of the Office Establishment; the Engineer's Establishment shows a decrease of Rs. 480 per annum, owing to the reduction of the Clerical Establishment of that Office; the out-door Establishment is also reduced to the extent of Rs. 1,680 per annum, owing to the appointment of a Native Overseer instead of a European, and the employment of a European 1st Class Inspector at Rs. 250 instead of Rs. 270. There are other reductions shown, but they do not require explanation.

Statement 3.

12. In respect of Statement No. 3, it is proposed to metal two new roads only, and to give repairs to three others, which are absolutely indispensable. In respect of the excavation of the tank, the Commissioners are, under a contract executed when it was contemplated, to develop the town largely to the southward. Part of the earth raised will, it is now intended, be placed in spoil, on the bank, as a reserve for future use for raising lots and roads as may be required, and the remainder will be used for raising that part of the Stanley Strand which is most urgently needed. Much of the earth will be also required to fill up the late slips on the bank.

Statement 4.

13. This amount will be required to repair the damage done to the sluice by the late cyclone.

Item II.—This sum will be necessary to keep in order the main and other drains.

Item III.—This sum is estimated as a provision in the event of any injury to the sluice.

Statement 5.

14. Item I.—This sum may be required to repair the damage done by the late slip, and for keeping in repair the bund on the Bidyadhary foreshore. The former item, Rs. 16,537-8, is in accordance with Mr. Leonard's report which is under consideration.

Item V.—This sum is expected to be the award of arbitrators under the terms of a lease held by the late Baboo Ram Gopaul Ghose, which expired on the 21st September last; the terms of the lease being that compensation shall be awarded to the tenant for the amount expended by him in clearing jungle, draining, &c. The Commissioners have re-entered upon the land which will, it is anticipated, yield a rental of about Rs. 2,000 a year.

15. It will be observed that large reductions have been made in the establishment, and that the works to be performed have been very largely contracted below what has been done in previous years. A still further reduction might be effected by amalgamating the office of Engineer and Vice-Chairman, and uniting their establishments into one on a reduced scale; at the present time when the Calcutta and South-Eastern Railway is being transferred to the Government, it would perhaps be a desirable measure of economy to combine the office of Vice-Chairman with that of Agent, and to employ for the Railway and the Municipality one Engineer in common. The Commissioners would wish to defer making this reduction, pending an expression of the views of Government as to whether it is expedient at present to push on their works energetically, or to suspend for the present energetic action. Even with the reductions shown and those not suggested, the Balance Sheet, according to the estimate, would still show a deficit at the close of 1868-69.

16. In this juncture it becomes necessary to consider seriously what action is to be taken. The question is the more difficult, because, from circumstances which it is scarcely necessary now to detail, an appeal to the public for further aid would, at the present time, have no chance of being responded to. Owing also to the injuries caused by the late cyclone, and to the unhappy breach between the Port Canning Company and the enterprising firm who were till lately their Secretaries and Treasurers, and who have heretofore evinced such a lively interest in the success of the port, and done so much to forward it, the hopes which I expressed in my Administration Report for 1866-67 of a large resort of shipping to Canning this season, are not likely to be realized. The Commissioners are nevertheless not doubtful of its ultimate success, and they do not think that their works should be suspended.

17. In the present state of their finances, however, they must either limit their operations and reduce their establishments to such an extent that the charges may be met from their net income of about Rs. 20,000 a year, or solicit further aid from the Government.

18. It was estimated that an outlay of Rs. 20,00,000 was needed for the works required of the Commissioners, of this, only 9½ lakhs will have been spent by the Commissioners when their present funds will be exhausted.

19. The works completed are consequently still very much below what are required. They would, therefore, again urge upon the Government to grant them further assistance, in order to enable them to carry on their operations upon the same terms as the former aid was granted.

20. The extent to which the Government is interested in the success of the port, because of its guarantee for the interest on the outlay for the railway, amounting to three lakhs a year, while the railway itself cannot pay until Canning becomes—as, notwithstanding its present adverse circumstance, it is hoped it soon will—a considerable town, and because also of the importance of the project to the general interests of the country, induce the Commissioners to hope that it will be willing to advance them, on same terms as heretofore, such sums as may be needed for their works during the next two years.

21. An early reply on this subject is requested, because if the Government think it inexpedient to advance further funds, and determine to adhere to the intentions conveyed in paragraph 6 of its Resolution of the 16th December 1867, it will be the duty of the Commissioners to limit their works and their establishments to such a scale as, with reference to their financial prospects, may seem reasonable.

From R. B. CHAPMAN, Esq., Officiating Commissioner of the Presidency Division, to the Secretary to the Government of Bengal,—(No. 19, dated 15th June 1868).

In continuation of my No. 14, dated 14th May, especially paragraphs 67 and 78, I have the honor to forward herewith the official statement of expenditure incurred afloat in connection with the Mutlah project, together with an official list of the vessels which had entered and left the port since 1863 inclusive.

From Captain JOHN G. REDDIE, Master Attendant, to the Officiating Commissioner of the Presidency Division,—(No. 3700, dated 12th June 1868).

In reply to your letter No. 15, dated 22nd April last, I have the honor to forward herewith statements showing—

1*st*.—The total expenditure annually on account of Port Canning.

The total annual payments for salaries of establishments are shown in the last line of the following statement, marked with an asterisk.

2*nd*.—A list of all vessels which have visited the port since 1861.

The statements of cargo in and cargo out cannot be given. The manifests have been forwarded in the usual manner to the Collector of Customs, who will be able to furnish the information on this point.

P. S.—The expenditure in England is not shown separately, for no accounts are passed to the debit of any fund except from the returns of issue from the Dockyard.

The Dockyard debits itself with all expenditure on account of stores received from England, and the minor accounts are debited when the stores are passed.

W. J. C. BENSFORD,

Officiating Conservator of Port Canning.

PORT CANNING,
CONSERVATOR'S OFFICE;
The 9th May 1868.

From F. SCHILLER, Esq., to the Secretary to the Government of Bengal,—(dated 15th M[illegible] 1868.

With the view of consolidating Joint Stock Company Canning beyond all chances of a failure and securing its future, I have the honor of submitting the following proposal, viz.:—

That the Calcutta and Sonarpur Railway, the Port Canning Company, and the Sunderbun lands be amalgamated and formed at home into one concern under Government control.

I need not point out that the Railway is, and always has been, an integral part of the success of Port Canning; without it no mercantile money would ever have been invested in the undertaking, at least those who have been its pioneers would never have thought of continuing their experiments, though satisfied with the feasibility of the undertaking. Taking facts as they are at present, the revenues of India are deeply committed with reference to Port Canning, and the question to be decided is, whether there is to be no effort made, after sinking so much public and private money, to redeem the whole enterprise and to rescue it from the difficulties into which it has drifted: the Railway can only pay when Port Canning becomes a centre of trade. Trade has already proved that it is prepared to come, provided it be properly treated; but trade will not come to a new place situated as Port Canning is without finding the best facilities and appliances, and these have never as yet existed. The Railway is unfinished to this date, although nearly £600,000 have been expended upon it. There are virtually no terminal arrangements at Canning, and the shipping facilities created by the Port Canning Company still require to be brought into working concert with the Railway line. There is only one thing which has been steadily improving with reference to Port Canning, viz., the sanitary condition of the place; and there can be no reasonable doubt that in the same ratio in which the forest of the Sunderbuns disappears before the hatchet of the cultivator, in the same ratio will the sanitation of the town of Port Canning improve, and the inhabitants become less and less liable to that fever which everywhere results from newly made clearances, and from the turning up of alluvial soil full of decaying vegetable substances.

The Railway Company, the Port Canning Company, and the Sunderbun lands form, in my humble opinion, parts of the same undertaking, and are intimately linked together. To unite them simply means to unite all the existing elements of success, and the first question arising seems to be—how can this be done?

My proposal involves what is tantamount to a Government guarantee, for no money can be raised for undertakings in India of a public character without having a Government guarantee, or something equivalent thereto attached to it. The principle as such has been admitted, and in a country like India, there is much to be said in its favor. The uncertainty of life, the absence of idle men, and the constantly shifting European non-official population, are all strong arguments in favor of Government control. The case in question is a peculiar one, inasmuch as the lands themselves concerned in it possess all the elements of providing the money for this required Government guarantee, and it is only necessary to devise means for developing them in the most judicious manner, without injuring, what may be considered, ve[illegible]d rights. When a Sunderbun grant is sold, everything on it in the shap[illegible] firewood and forest produce passes into the hands of the purchaser, and t[illegible] public, which might have before carried away from the same grant this forest produce since time immemorial, immediately pays for it to the new owner of the grant some consideration without making the slightest objection. Until within three years the Government derived absolutely no revenue from these forest products, and it was only on my application that they were disposed of by public sale, purchased by me, and handed over to the Port Canning Company, which Company is already collecting a considerable revenue from them; but the cost and trouble of collecting this revenue over an area of 3,000 square miles is immense; while, on the other hand, a well-devised system of collection, supported by and under the supervision of Government [illegible]rity, would not only greatly diminish its cost, but much enhance the am[illegible] revenue from these forest products or Bunkers without causing the slig[illegible]pression to the people of Bengal, for which they form one of the neces[illegible]

The revenue raised from this [illegible]ld propose to apply specially for subsidising the proposed amalgam[illegible]. Government are prepared to sell the lands containing the elemen[illegible]venue, and the lands themselves would thus furnish the means of [illegible] the capital necessary to ensure their gradual clearance and reclamation. [illegible]anning would become a success; the State would eventually be relieved of the guarantee of interest on the capital of the Calcutta and South-Eastern Railway, and in due course, another Province, and perhaps the most fertile in Bengal, would be added to the State: I see no other way of dealing with Port Canning. After the experience which I have personally had; after the treatment which I have received; I must decline all further exertions in favor of the place, unless supported by Government, and while soliciting this additional support, I frankly admit that I greatly under-rated the difficulties by which I have been surrounded in my endeavours to call into existence an undertaking which, imperial in its character and necessarily slow in its progress, should never have rested on private shoulders.

From Colonel C. H. DICKENS, R.A., Secretary to the Government of India, Public Works Department, to the Officiating Additional Secretary to Government of Bengal,—(No. 1022R., dated 3rd September 1868).

I am desired to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 4179, dated 25th July 1868, conveying the recommendation of the Lieutenant Governor that Port Canning, on the Mutlah, should be abandoned as a port after the expiration of twelve months' notice of the intention.

2. This recommendation is based on the conclusion that Government would not be justified in imposing on the public revenues further expenditure on account of the port, in the face of the fact that the result of all the endeavours (initiated in 1853) to develop Port Canning as an auxiliary port to Calcutta, and as a commercial town, has been failure, notwithstanding that, irrespective of outlay by the Port Canning Company and private individuals, as well as by the Government in the Public Works Department, the State has disbursed directly, or through the Municipality, on shore and afloat, nearly £200,000, besides having made a railroad solely for the benefit of the port at a cost of upwards of £600,000, which has failed to cover its working expenses.

3. The Lieutenant Governor has suggested that, before taking action on his recommendation, the public should have the opportunity of expressing their opinion on the subject. There is obvious propriety in this course which will afford the general public who are interested in the right application of the public finances, as well as that section of it which is specially interested in the port, an opportunity of putting forward what they may respectively have to say.

4. There are other reasons which render this course expedient. The Port Canning Company's Rice Mills are just about to be finished, and it seems proper to give them time to work before coming to a decision. The Secretary of State has intimated his intention of sending out experimental cargoes of Government stores to the port; and lastly, the Railway has only lately been thrown on the hands of the Government, and it is desirable to ascertain the result of working it under the new arrangement before deciding to abandon half of it, which the abandonment of Port Canning practically involves.

5. The Governor General in Council has, therefore, determined to publish the papers in the Gazette of India, in order to invite discussion, and His Excellency in Council hopes that the matter may be ripe for decision before the end of the year.

No. 1023 R.

Copy forwarded to the Officiating Joint Secretary to the Government of Bengal, in the Public Works Department (Railway), with reference to his No. 1516G., dated 29th July 1868, with the intimation that as little as possible should be done at Port Canning or on the Mutlah terminal section of the Railway, until a decision has been promulgated as to the maintenance of Port Canning.

No. 1024 R.

Copy forwarded to the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, in the Public Works Department, with reference to his No. 5014 of the 30th July 1868, and with the intimation that, pending a decision on the question of maintaining Port Canning, no further protective measures should be undertaken unless called for by extraordinary circumstances, in which case a special report should be made for the orders of the Government of India.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA

MILITARY DEPARTMENT.

MEMORANDUM ON THE REMOVAL OF TROOPS IN ATTACKS OF EPIDEMIC CHOLERA.

By JOHN MURRAY, M.D., Inspector General of Hospitals, Upper Provinces,—(dated 18th June 1868).

The practice of removing troops into camp on the appearance of epidemic cholera in cantonments, is of recent origin. It is founded on the principle that the disease is communicable, which was not generally acknowledged by the medical profession in India or in Europe, before the year 1861. This has been confirmed by the recorded experience of the disease in Europe, and clearly demonstrated by the history of the Hurdwar epidemic of 1867, where the disease was traced radiating from a centre from 300 to 700 miles in all directions, and spreading continuously with the returning pilgrims, leaving upwards of 100,000 victims in its track. It is now allowed by the most experienced and intelligent professional and non-professional observers all over the world.

As its communicability has been the guiding principle of the measures I have adopted during seven severe epidemic attacks, which have come under my observation and direction, a record of their development may prove useful and suggestive of further improvement.

In the year 1851 there was a severe attack of cholera in the Central Prison at Agra, of which I was in medical charge. After a time the prisoners were removed into tents with marked advantage. Again in 1856 as medical visitor, I had the men more early removed, and the camp changed ground several times with very decided benefit. In subsequent epidemics in the years 1860, 1861, 1862 and 1863, the prisoners were again speedily removed, and divided into separate parties, which frequently changed ground, and in every instance with satisfactory results. The annual strength of the prisoners varied from 2,063 to 3,978, of whom 611 died during these six epidemics.

As Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals, I was present in the stations of Agra and Muttra during the epidemics in 1860, 1861, 1862 and 1863, and at Gwalior during the attacks of 1861 and 1862. The total strength of the European Regiments, including the families, was 11,121, of which 661 died.

When the cholera attacked the troops in the station of Agra in 1860, I recommended to General Showers, C. B., the removal of the troops into tents in the manner practised in the Central Prison in former epidemics, and then being carried out during the simultaneous attack amongst the prisoners. He said—"That is a medical question which you understand better than I do. Point out what ought to be done, and it shall be carried out; but bear in mind that the responsibility rests with you." Measures were conducted in a similar spirit during the subsequent attacks at Agra, Muttra, and Gwalior in 1861, 1862 and 1863. As all the recommendations were carried out with military precision, an opportunity was afforded of proving their efficiency.

I was present as Inspector General of Hospitals during the year 1867, soon after the disease made its appearance at Umballa, and observed the satisfactory working of the arrangements there, which were most efficiently carried out by the military authorities, on the recommendation of the Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals Dr. Cox.

In addition to my own experience, I have derived much advantage from personal intercourse, and private and official correspondence on the subject of cholera, with many of the most experienced medical officers in India.

It is necessary to consider the details of this most important measure for the protection of the troops, in epidemic attacks of cholera, viz., removal into camp, with its advantages and disadvantages, and the best means of conducting the movement.

The removal of the affected from cantonments, benefits those who remain by withdrawing a continually increasing source of danger, and by allowing them more accommodation, which is valuable in proportion to its extent. The affected are benefited by removal from the locality, which has been contaminated by the emanations from the sick, even if it were not the original source of the poison. The removal of all the occupants of the building in which the disease has shown itself, benefits the latently affected, in affording them a more favourable prospect of recovery, whilst it removes a future source of danger. The movement is useful by the excitement it occasions by affording occupation, and by diverting attention from the disease.

In most instances the immediate effect of change of air has been beneficial, and in some the subsequent health of those moved into camp has been better than that of those who remained. Thus all parties benefit by the removal, but it entails difficulties, inconvenience, expense, and possibly danger during the hot and rainy seasons, if not judiciously carried out. The difficulties can be overcome, the expense is certainly compensated for by the saving of life and health, and the inconvenience must be borne with for the sake of the public benefit. The following Table shows the effect of removal in arresting the attack of epidemic cholera during the last year 1867 :—

There were thus 80 removals of European and Native troops and prisoners during the epidemic in 1867. In 34 of these no fresh case appeared; in 11 it appeared only on the first and second day after removal. In these latter instances the disease was evidently carried out from cantonments by the men. The disease appeared subsequently to the second day in only 35 instances. Thus in more than half the cases, the immediate check of the disease was the result of the removal. Not only no fresh cases occurred, but many in whom the disease was in a state of incubation, either escaped violent symptoms, or were placed in more favourable circumstances for recovery, as, in many instances, the disease continued to appear in cantonments, long after it had ceased in camp.

One grave question for consideration is the subsequent sickness of the parties removed. In India there is always a great increase of miasmatic disease during the rainy season, and as the attacks of cholera in the North-Western Provinces and the Punjab generally occur during that season, there is some difficulty in determining how far the subsequent sickness of a Regiment, that has been sent to a cholera camp, has been influenced by the season,—by the removal during this season,—or by the manner in which that removal has been carried out.

When a Regiment arrives at the encamping ground before the tents have been prepared in the hot season,—or is pitched in low marshy ground in the rains,—makes too long marches,—or commits excess, extraordinary sickness may be expected to ensue. To infer that an increase of sickness was solely owing to the removal, is to ignore these facts, and the after effects of cholera, or its treatment, and also the ordinary increase of malarious disease at that season. Should there be an excess of the average sickness of the station, the increase may fairly be attributed to the movement. On the other hand, if there be a diminution of the ordinary sickness of the station, it may justly be attributed to the removal; more especially if a comparison can be drawn between a part only of the garrison or regiment, which is moved into camp, and the part which remained in cantonments.

The effect of the partial removal during 1867 was that in one station (Umballa), there was less subsequent sickness than in the troops which remained, whilst in two other stations (Lahore and Meerut), there was less subsequent sickness in one portion (the R. A.) of the troops that removed into camp than in those which remained; but there was greater sickness in the other portion (the Infantry Regiments) which was in camp during the same period. This is very remarkable, and it would be important to ascertain the cause of this exceptional sickness; as if remediable, it might be avoided in future. The discovery of the cause of this great difference would be valuable for future guidance.*

After a Wing of the 23rd Regiment moved into a cholera camp in August 1863, there was only 66 per cent. of sickness in it during the following five months, whilst there was 101 per cent. in the other half of the Regiment which had remained in cantonment.

Of the Native troops at Peshawur, there were detachments from five Regiments, of the strength of 908 on duty with the European cholera camps. Amongst these there were 980, or 107·929 per cent. of admissions from June to October inclusive (of which 858, or 94·713 per cent. were from fevers). In the rest of the Regiments of the strength of 2,105, there were 2,719, or 129·168 per cent. of admissions (of which 2,408, or 114·394 per cent. were from fevers). In the three Native Regiments which were not removed from the station, of the strength of 1,007, there were during the same period 1,582, or 157·092 per cent. of admissions. Thus an improvement is shown of nearly 50 per cent. (49·162) in the detachments moved into camp over the Regiments which remained.

The European troops in Peshawur were attacked with cholera on the 20th May 1867. The Royal Artillery and H. M.'s 42nd Highlanders were immediately removed into camp. H. M.'s 77th Regiment was moved out in detachments, the last of which left on the 9th June. Towards the end of June, the 42nd Regiment proceeded to a neighbouring hill called Cherat. The sickness

* In three stations only part of the European troops moved into cholera camps, viz.:—

1*st*, Umballa.—The Royal Artillery and 21st Hussars remained in cantonments, and there were 45·454 per cent. of admissions from all diseases during the months of September and October (of which 23·333 per cent. were from fevers). H. M.'s 94th Regiment moved into camp in April and May, and there were during September and October only 27·649 per cent. of admissions from all diseases (of which 18·330 per cent. were from fevers), being 17·805 per cent. less than in the troops which had remained in cantonments.

2*nd*, Lahore.—The garrison remained in the Fort, and there were in September and October 68·965 per cent. of admissions from all diseases (of which 47·586 per cent. were from fevers). The Royal Artillery moved into camp during the months of May, June, July, and August, and there were only 37·500 per cent. of admissions from all diseases (of which 22·500 per cent. were from fevers), being 31·465 less than the garrison. H. M.'s 106th Regiment moved into camp at the same time as the Royal Artillery, and there were 93·627 per cent. of admissions from all diseases (of which 80·234 per cent. were from fevers). This shows an increase of 56·127 per cent. on the sickness of the Royal Artillery, which were in camp under similar circumstances. An explanation of this great difference would be important.

3*rd*, Meerut.—Her Majesty's 19th Hussars remained in cantonments, and there were in September, October, and November, 42·730 per cent. of admissions from all diseases (of which 10·553 per cent. were from fevers). The Royal Artillery removed into camp in August and September, and during the same three months, there were only 35·681 per cent. of admissions from all diseases (of which 10·508 per cent. were from fevers), which is 7·049 per cent. less than in the Hussars. Her Majesty's 3rd Regiment also went into camp in August and September, and there were in the same three months 54·724 per cent. of admissions from all diseases (of which 22·595 per cent. were from fevers). This is nearly 20 per cent. (19·043) higher than the Artillery which were in camp during the same period.

in this Corps from the 1st of June to the 1st November (when it left for England) on a strength of 556 was 258 admissions (of which 88, or 15·548 per cent. were from fevers). The other Corps returned to Peshawur, when the 42nd went to Cherat, and during the same period, in the Royal Artillery on a strength of 344, there were 563 admissions (of which 353, or 102·610 per cent. were from fevers). In the 77th Regiment of the strength of 520, the admissions were 1,025 (of which 804, or 152·555 per cent. were from fevers). This excessive sickness has been attributed to the removal into camp. In the 42nd Regiment, which was in camp at the same time, but did not return to Peshawur, the admissions from fevers were considerably under the average in other stations in India, and only one-tenth of those in the 77th Regiment. During the same period there was excessive sickness in the Native troops in the station, which had not been moved into camp; and also in those from which detachments had been sent on duty with the European camps. This excessive sickness is always found to follow if heavy rain falls in the earlier part of the season at Peshawur, which was the case this year. It must be remarked that the admissions from fevers in the detachments of Native troops sent into camp was nearly 20 per cent. (19·581) less than in the rest of their Regiments, which remained in cantonments.

It is a remarkable fact that at the three stations Meerut, Lahore, and Peshawur, where the subsequent sickness was highest, the Royal Artillery suffered much less than the Infantry. The average strength of the Artillery was 1,262, and in the months of September and October, there were 506 admissions (of which 272, or 21 per cent. were from fevers). The average strength of the Infantry Regiments was 2,061, and the admissions during the same months were 1,595 (of which 1,362, or 66·084 per cent. were from fevers).

At Shahjehanpore a Wing of H. M.'s 36th Regiment was attacked by cholera on the 8th August 1867. The head quarters with 3 companies and the Band moved into camp on the 9th and morning of the 10th. This party suffered little, as there were only five fresh cases after removal. The remainder of the Wing, consisting of 2 companies, the married families, and hospital, was detained in cantonments by heavy rain and want of tents till the 14th, and in the meanwhile lost three men. They suffered severely after removal, as there were 27 fresh cases in camp. The only appreciable difference to account for the excessive sickness in the latter detachment, was that it was detained several days longer in cantonments, while the disease was raging there.

At Ferozepore in H.M.'s 5th Regiment, there was less sickness after removal into camp in June than previously. During the previous three months, there had been, out of the strength of 693,—430, or 62·049 per cent. of admissions from all diseases (of which 281, or 40·548 per cent. were from fevers). During the subsequent six months, there were only 372, or 54·679 per cent. of admissions from all diseases (of which 91, or 13·131 per cent. were from fevers), thus showing only one-third admissions from fevers during twice the subsequent period.*

The Native Troops moved into camp from eight stations in 14 different detachments. In 10 of these, there were no fresh cases after removal, in 2 the disease did not appear after the first day, and in the remaining 2, it continued after four days.

The Jails had a most remarkable immunity from attack, though the disease raged in the neighbouring cantonments and surrounding districts. Out of

* It will be observed that the periods from which the comparative ratios of sickness are drawn are not as usual annual periods, and they vary in the individual months contrasted. Table No. II. in showing the health of the stations, omits the four cold season months, because the usual relief of European troops changes the Regiments in many of them at that time.

In other instances the periods contrasted could only be after the date of the attack of cholera in the station last affected, which varies from April in Umballa to August in Meerut. The sickness has been calculated on the admissions as more comprehensive than the mortality or invaliding, which are more dependent on professional treatment.

76 jails in the Upper Provinces, there were only 12 in which more than three cases appeared in one month.

The subsequent effect of the removal of troops has thus in almost every instance been beneficial to their health, and the exceptional instances are the two Infantry Regiments at Meerut and Lahore, the causes of which possibly may be explained.

The inferences to be drawn from the other portions of Table No. II. are not so clear and conclusive. There was a slight preponderance in the sickness in the stations from which the whole of the troops were moved; but the proportion of fevers in them was less.

The Diagnosis or early recognition of the disease is of great practical importance. All are not Stoics or philosophers when cholera is raging around. Some are panic-struck, imagining every feeling of uneasiness to be cholera; whilst others anxious to avoid exciting alarm, or moving into camp, report real cases of cholera as diarrhœa, drink, or sun-stroke. The name of choleraic diarrhœa has been applied to a stage of cholera, and under this disguise the precautions against its spreading have been neglected, and when collapse displays the real character of the disease, confidence in the physician is shaken, and hope deserts its deluded victim.

Diarrhœa is a deviation from health, dependent on many causes, and found at all seasons and in all countries, and with symptoms very like those which prevail, very generally, during epidemics of cholera. During these periods the loose motions sometimes become watery, with cramps and vomitting, with a dark countenance and congested eyes. This is called choleraic diarrhœa. Occasionally these symptoms are followed by collapse, when the strength is prostrated, the natural secretions suspended, the body livid and cold, the pulse feeble, and the breathing gradually ceases. This is called cholera, and there is no disease whatever more formidable, or less amenable to remedies. Those who cannot recognize the disease before this stage arrives, say that medicine has no power in cholera, but they approve of preventive measures. Those who recognize in choleraic diarrhœa a stage of cholera, not only approve of preventive measures; but acknowledge the danger of contagion or communication during this stage, and place confidence in the judicious use of remedies which are regulated by a knowledge of the ordinary course of the disease. Choleraic diarrhœa should be recognized as merely a stage of cholera, requiring the same precautions to be taken against its dissemination as in the case of cholera.

A mistaken or erroneous diagnosis will occasionally take place, but this will be rare in proportion to the experience of the physician, and the vital importance of early detection will palliate, if it do not justify, a leaning to the decision which guards off danger. The debility or prostration caused by many diseases predisposes to the development of cholera during an epidemic, and nothing predisposes more to this result than purging induced by medicine, diet, or exposure. The supervention of cholera is no proof that the previous diagnosis of a pre-existing disease was erroneous.

PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES.—I shall now proceed to consider in what these consist. When epidemic cholera is prevailing in the district, or in a neighbouring city, especially if it has prevailed at the station at the same season in former years,—on the appearance of a single case of cholera, or on an unusual prevalence of diarrhœa, special attention should be paid to sanitary and dietary regulations; and the men should be prohibited visiting the infected places. The Regimental Surgeon should report to the Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals, the circumstances of any case of cholera occurring, or the prevalence of diarrhœa in his Regiment, who should at once examine the case.

On the appearance within the week of a second case of cholera, or an increase of diarrhœa, under these circumstances, the preliminary camp should be pitched, and carriage held in readiness to move all the troops in the station. With the Deputy Inspector General will rest the responsibility of recommending the removal of the troops, or of delaying this movement until the appearance of the fourth case, when it should be compulsory; in the absence of the Deputy Inspector General, this responsibility will rest with the Senior Medical Officer, but the former should proceed to the station with as little delay as possible. On the appearance of a single case at a non-cholera season, only a partial evacuation of the building in which it occurred is required; but this portion should be disinfected. When more than one case appears in a barrack during the presence of cholera in the district, or at the usual cholera season, the whole building or barrack should be evacuated and disinfected before being re-occupied.

The preliminary camp should consist of tents and cots for 200 men, pitched on a site previously selected, and carefully prepared from two to four miles distant from cantonments, and if practicable across a river. The camping ground should be surrounded by a double row of trees; and trees should be planted on both sides of the streets of the camp. The part in which the tents are pitched should be ploughed up at the end of the season. The secretions should be buried outside the outer line of trees.

The presence of the infected men is a source of danger to the rest of the station; the sooner they are removed, the safer for the station, and the better for themselves. The occupants of the building should be removed before sunset of the day in which the presence of the epidemic is acknowledged, provided the preliminary camp has been prepared and equipped ready for occupation. Cots with bedding complete to the extent of 15 per cent. of the strength of the British troops at the station should be provided in addition to the regimental stores. The barrack cots should accompany the men in changing the grounds. The bedding of the cots in the preliminary camp, which was used by men who may have been attacked there, or on the day they leave the camp, should be burnt. The cots are essential during the rainy season; but during the hot season, should there be any very great difficulty about carriage, straw mats in which the bedding might be wrapped on the march might be used.

The detachment should march from the preliminary camp on the second day, to render it available for future use. The march should be short, from one to four miles, and the camp pitched on high ground, with trees if available, and not near a large village. They should change ground every second or third day, marching in the morning so that the tents may be ready by sunrise.

The excretions should be buried in trenches to leeward of the camp, and smoky fires burned to windward. The duties should be slight. Recreation and amusement should be encouraged, and exposure to the sun or to wet carefully avoided. It is here that the presence of the officers is most required, and most beneficial. It is impossible to avoid discomfort in camp during the hot and rainy season. This is most felt by the officers who live in separate bungalows, and incur less danger from the disease than the men, who live in large numbers in the same building. The latter feel relief from the change; I have often heard a sensation of relief from oppression expressed by both officers and men, and unfrequently observed a reluctance to return to cantonments.

The expense to Government of removal is great, but the saving of life even in a pecuniary point of view, amply compensates for the present outlay. The accompanying Table No. III. shows that the rate of mortality in stations that have frequently been attacked, before and after the systematic use of removal, has diminished more than one-half, viz., from 7·097 to 3·238 per cent. During the year 1867, the rate of mortality in the old and in the new stations from which removal took place, out of a strength of 16,805, was only 510, or 3·348 per cent. The mortality at the previous rate would have been 1,192, thus showing a saving of more than four hundred lives (482). The great mortality in the party which was detained a week in Shahjehanpore was evidently caused by the delay in removal. The Wing of the 29th Native Infantry which was attacked at the same time, and immediately moved into camp, had no fresh case after removal. This indicates that the early removal was the chief cause of the reduced mortality in the other stations; and it is hoped that the suggested alterations will still further diminish the sickness and mortality in future epidemics.

P. S.—Since writing the above report, I have received a valuable illustration of the effect of removal as shown when a part only of a Regiment is moved into camp. At Nowshera (22 miles from Peshawur), 2 Companies of H.M.'s 19th Regiment were removed to camp in consequence of cholera on the 20th June 1867. There was no fresh case of cholera after removal, and they returned to cantonments on the 27th June. During the subsequent six months, there were 103 admissions, or 87·288 per cent. from all diseases (of which 77, or 65·254 per cent. were from fevers). In the rest of the Regiment, of the strength of 605, there were 661 admissions, or 109·264 per cent. from all diseases (of which 499, or 82·480 per cent. were from fevers), thus showing nearly twenty-two (21·976) per cent. less sickness in the party which was removed to camp than the rest of the Regiment which remained in cantonment.

SIMLA, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1868.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

LEGISLATIVE.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 10th September 1868, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

Act No. XXI of 1868.

An Act to appoint a Receiver of the property of the late Nawáb of the Carnatic.

Preamble.

Whereas certain property belonging to the estate of the late Nawáb of the Carnatic has lately been discovered both in the District of Madras and in the territories of His Highness the Nizám, and it is expedient to appoint a Receiver to collect and administer such property and any other property belonging to the said estate which may hereafter be discovered, or has not hitherto been administered; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Appointment of Receiver of Carnatic property.

1. The Governor of Fort St. George in Council shall appoint such person as he may think fit to act under the orders of the High Court of Judicature at Madras in the administration of the property left by the late Nawáb of the Carnatic and not hitherto collected or administered.

The person so appointed shall have power to collect and take possession of all such property: he shall deal with the same according to the provisions herein contained: he shall give such security (if any) for the due execution of his office as the said Governor in Council may require; and he shall be called "the Receiver of the Carnatic property."

Remuneration of Receiver.

2. The Receiver of the Carnatic property shall be entitled to such commission not exceeding five per centum upon the amount or value of the property collected and distributed under the provisions of this Act as the said Governor in Council shall prescribe. Such commission shall be charged to the estate of the said Nawáb.

Suspension or removal of Receiver.

3. The said Governor in Council may suspend or remove any person appointed such Receiver as aforesaid, and may also from time to time fill up any vacancy in such office occasioned by death, resignation, suspension or removal.

Receiver to represent Nawáb's estate in all proceedings.

4. The Receiver shall represent the estate of the said Nawáb in all proceedings relating thereto: he shall do all acts in performance of his duties by his name of office; and in all legal proceedings he shall be designated by such name.

No proceedings to which the Receiver may be a party shall abate by reason of the death, resignation, suspension or removal from office of any such Receiver, but the same shall be [illegible]nued by his successor as if no such death, [illegible]ation, suspension or removal had occurred.

Receiver to collect Nawáb's property.

5. The Receiver shall have power to collect and take possession of all property, moveable or immoveable, and whether of the nature of State or public property or not, to which the said Nawáb at the time of his death was entitled, and if necessary to sue for and recover the same property, and to realize its value by sale or otherwise.

Conveyance on sale by Receiver of immoveable property.

6. Whenever the said Receiver by the order or with the sanction of the said High Court sells any of the said immoveable property, he shall execute a conveyance thereof to the purchaser.

Every such conveyance shall be valid as against the heirs of the said Nawáb, and all persons claiming under them, and also against all persons claiming under the said Nawáb by virtue of any conveyance or instrument declared by the said Court or by the late Supreme Court of Judicature at Madras to be void as against the creditors of the said Nawáb, or by virtue of any security the benefit of which was barred under the provisions of Act No. XXX of 1858

(to provide for the administration of the estate and for the payment of the debts of the late Nawáb of the Carnatic).

In case of suit for administration, Receiver to be subject to orders of High Court.

7. Upon any suit being instituted for the administration of the said estate, the said Receiver shall be deemed subject to the orders of the said High Court, and, so far as such orders shall not extend, to the general practice of such Court in the same manner as any other Receiver specially appointed thereby, except that the Court shall not require him to give security.

Commencement of Act.

8. This Act shall be deemed to have come into operation on the second day of April 1868, and any person holding the office of Receiver of the Carnatic property immediately before that day shall be deemed to have been appointed on that day under this Act.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 10th September 1868, and is hereby promulgated for general information:—

ACT No. XXII OF 1868.

An Act to bring the Mauza Kheria, in the District of Agra, under the operation of the general Regulations.

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Extension to Mauzah Kheria of Acts and Regulations in force in District of Agra.

1. The Mauza Kheria shall be deemed to be annexed to the District of Agra, and the laws and regulations established for the internal administration of the said District, shall have full force and effect in the said Mauza; and the administration of civil and criminal justice, and the superintendence of the settlement and realization of the public revenue, and of all matters relating to rent in the said Mauza, are hereby vested in the officers for the time being appointed by the Lieutenant Governor of the North-Western Provinces for the said District of Agra.

Commencement of Act.

2. This Act shall be deemed to have come into operation on the twenty-sixth day of July 1866.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 27th August 1868:—

No. 22 OF 1868.

A Bill to amend the Law relating to the Emigration of Native Labourers.

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Probable length of winter voyage from Madras to Mauritius.

1. The probable length of the voyage from Madras to Mauritius and Seychelles shall, notwithstanding anything contained in Act No. XIII of 1864 (to consolidate and amend the law relating to the emigration of Native Labourers), section eight, be deemed to be, between the months of November and March inclusive, six weeks.

Increase of space allowed to adult emigrants.

2. Notwithstanding anything contained in the same Act, section forty-seven, no compartment in an emigrant ship shall take more than one adult emigrant for every twelve superficial feet on deck, and for every cubic space of seventy-two feet.

Power to prohibit emigration.

3. For section sixty-four of the same Act, the following shall be substituted:—

"64. Whenever the Governor General of India in Council or the Local Government has reason to believe that in any place to which emigration is lawful under this Act, the plague or other infectious disease dangerous to human life has broken out, or that proper measures have not been taken for the protection of emigrants immediately upon their arrival in such place or during their residence therein,

or for their safe return to India,

or to provide a return-passage to India for any such emigrants at or about the time at which they are entitled to such return-passage,

it shall be lawful for the said Governor General in Council or for the Local Government, by notification published in the Gazette of India or the local Gazette (as the case may be), to declare that emigration from British India or from the territories subject to the Local Government (as the case may be) to such place shall cease and be prohibited from a certain day to be specified in the notification.

Any notification issued by the Local Government under this section may be cancelled by order of the said Governor General in Council."

Power to increase fees.

4. The Governor General of India in Council may, from time to time by notification in the Gazette of India, increase any fee payable under sections nineteen, twenty-seven or thirty-four of the said Act, and may also in like manner reduce to its present amount any fee so increased: Provided that no fee shall be increased under this section by more than double such amount.

This Act to be read with Act XIII of 1864.

5. This Act shall be read with and taken as part of the said Act No. XIII of 1864.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill, which has been prepared at the desire of the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, is to make in the law relating to the emigration of coolies four small amendments, which have been found desirable since Act No. XIII of 1864 came into operation.

The probable length of the voyage from Madras to Mauritius between the months of November and March, is fixed at five weeks by section eight of that Act. This time has been found too short, and the Bill proposes to extend it to six weeks.

Section 47 of the Act requires that the space to be provided for each adult emigrant shall be ten superficial feet on deck. The Bill proposes to increase this space to twelve superficial feet.

Section 64 of the Act empowers the Governor General in Council to prohibit, in certain specified cases, the emigration of coolies. To these cases the Bill proposes to add that of a dangerous outbreak of infectious disease in the place to which emigration is permitted. And with a view to greater promptitude of action in emergency, the Bill proposes to extend the power of prohibition to Local Governments; but provides that any notification by a Local Government prohibiting emigration, may be cancelled by the Governor General in Council.

Lastly, the Bill authorizes the Governor General in Council to increase, within certain limits, the fees payable under Act XIII of 1864, for licensing depôts, recruiters, and emigrants.

SIMLA,
The 1st August 1868.

WHITLEY STOKES,
Asst. Secy. to the Govt. of India,
Home Dept. (Legislative).

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 1st September 1868:—

No. 25 OF 1868.

A Bill to Legalize Marriages between certain Natives of India not professing the Christian Religion.

Preamble.

WHEREAS marriages between Natives of British India not professing Christianity are held to be illegal unless solemnized in accordance with the rites of some religion recognised by law, and the children of such Natives contracting marriages not solemnized in accordance with the rites aforesaid are held to be illegitimate and incapable of inheriting property; and whereas it is expedient to legalize such marriages when solemnized in accordance with the provisions of this Act; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title.

1. This Act may be cited as "The Native Marriage Act, 1868."

Conditions of validity of Native marriages.

2. Every marriage between Natives of British India not professing the Christian religion and objecting to be married in accordance with the rites of the Hindú, Muhammadan, Buddhist, Pársí, or Jewish religion, shall be valid—

(1). If it is solemnized in the presence of the Registrar hereinafter mentioned and of at least three credible witnesses, in whose hearing each of the parties makes the following declarations:—

"I, A. B., am a Native of British India. I do not profess the Christian religion, and I object to be married in accordance with the rites of the Hindú, Muhammadan, Buddhist, Pársí or Jewish religion."

"I, A. B., declare in the presence of Almighty God that I take thee C. D. to be my lawful wedded wife [or husband]," or words to that effect:

(2). If the parties are unmarried, and the husband has completed his age of eighteen years, and the wife has completed her age of fourteen years:

(3). If, in case the wife has not completed her age of eighteen years, the consent of her father or guardian has previously been given to the marriage; and

(4). If the parties are not related to each other in any of the degrees prohibited in the first schedule hereto annexed, whether the relationship is legitimate or illegitimate.

Certificate of marriage.

3. Every such marriage hereafter solemnized shall, as soon as may be after the solemnization thereof, be certified by such person as the Local Government shall from time to time appoint in this behalf for the District in which the marriage is solemnized. He shall be called the Registrar of Native Marriages, and he may be the Registrar appointed under Act No. XX of 1866 or any other law for the registration of assurances for the time being in force.

Such certificate shall be in the form contained in the second Schedule to this Act, and shall be signed by (1) the Registrar, (2) the parties to the marriage if both have completed their age of eighteen years, and if the woman has not completed such age, by the husband and by her father or guardian, and (3) by three witnesses present at the marriage.

Fee payable to Registrar.

4. The husband shall pay a fee of two rupees to the Registrar, who shall thereupon enter the certificate in a register to be kept by him for the purpose.

Register to be open to inspection.

Such register shall at all reasonable times be open for inspection, and shall be presumptive evidence of the truth of the statements therein contained. Certified extracts therefrom shall on application be given by the Registrar on the payment to him by the applicant of two rupees for each such extract.

Penalty for failure to subscribe the certificate.

5. Every person required to subscribe or attest such certificate, who wilfully neglects or omits so to do, shall, on conviction of such neglect or omission, be punished by a fine not exceeding rupees one hundred.

Penalty for signing certificates containing false statements.

6. Every person making, signing, or attesting any such certificate containing a statement which is false, and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true, shall be deemed guilty of the offence of forgery as defined in the Indian Penal Code.

Legalization of prior marriages.

7. Every Native of British India described in section 2 who before the passing of this Act, has gone through any ceremony with the intent of thereby contracting marriage shall be deemed to have been legally married, if the marriage has been solemnized in the presence of at least three witnesses, and if the conditions specified in section two, clauses two, three and four, have been complied with in the case of such marriage.

Punishment of bigamy.

8. Every person married under this Act who during the lifetime of his or her wife or husband, contracts any marriage without having been lawfully divorced from such wife or husband, shall be subject to the penalties provided in Sections 494 and 495 of the Indian Penal Code for the offence of marrying again during the lifetime of a husband or wife.
